Poughkeepsie Landing ... Pilot Picks the Widest Street

Ralph Coley, 36, of Ridgefield, Conn., was looking for Danbury, Conn. in his single-engine Cessna aircraft. Running out of gas over Poughkeepsie, having lost the other plane he was following, he looked for the widest street around and picked Riverview Boulevard, nicknamed by Poughkeepsie police "the four-lane highway to nowhere," running from the Route 9 arterial to the Hudson River. Coley encountered a light pole with his wing tip upon landing Friday night, which flipped the plane upside down. He walked away with no injuries. The aircraft was dismantled Saturday morning for removal, even though police said it was in quite good condition. The other plane landed safely at Dutchess County Airport, several miles to the east.

Port Ewen Boy Credited With Saving Family

By TIM SCHUSTER

PORT EWEN
Thirteen-year-old Joseph Costello III woke up at 2 o'clock Saturday morning to the smell of smoke.

He was in his bedroom in the family's rambling ranch house, set back in the woods behind the Capri 400 Resort Motel on Route 9W, Port Ewen. His father, Joseph Costello, is part owner of the motel.

"We were all in bed," said his father to the Freeman, "and he came in hollering and woke us all up." The family consists of five people.

"We ran outside and then tried to put the fire out with a small fire extinguisher," said Costello, "but it was too far gone."

Clark Maines, Port Ewen fire chief, said that the fire started in the laundry room, right next to young Costello's bedroom. He theorized that the fire appeared to have started in the vicinity of the electric dryer, which may have been the cause.

Firemen were summoned at 2:06 a.m. When they arrived at the scene the flames had burned "right up through two rooms and the roof in that portion of the house," Maines said.

"It was pretty far gone," he continued. "There was a lot of heat and smoke."

With the Esopus Fire Department on stand-by, about 40 Port Ewen firefighters battled the blaze for almost six hours, reporting back in to Ulster County Fire Control at 7:50 a.m. Damage to the structure was judged to be extensive.

The Costello family was recovering from the ordeal, with no injuries, at the Capri 400 Motel Saturday.

Another family, in West Hurley, escaped from their house on Stone Road early Saturday morning.

Seven members of the Bucky Baker family exited from their smoke-filled house at about 3:45 a.m., with no injuries. While the cause of the fire was not immediately determined, a West Hurley fireman reported that some basement furniture, including a bed, couch, and some chairs, were smoldering when firemen arrived and the entire house was filled with smoke.

There was also extensive water damage reported. Firemen reported back in service at about 5 a.m.

And at 10:36 a.m., Saturday a chimney fire at the Gloria Meyers home on Lyonsville Road, Kripplush, was dealt with by Kripplush firefighters, according to fire officer Jim Delpizzo.

The fire was contained in the chimney area, and firemen were back at the firehouse at 11:40 a.m.

Kissinger Hints 'New Practices' Toward Castro

HOUSTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Saturday the Administration was prepared to develop "new principles and practices" toward Cuba once the Organization of American States lifts its 11-year embargo against the regime of Fidel Castro.

In a major policy statement on Latin American, Kissinger hinted that Cuban sanctions could be lifted as early as this spring and also said Washington was prepared to recognize Panama's full sovereignty over the Canal Zone, an area now administered by the United States.

"We see no virtue in perpetual antagonism between the United States and Cuba," Kissinger said in a speech to a combined service club. "Experience has demonstrated that automatic sanctions are almost always counterproductive."

"Automatic sanctions allow no tactical flexibility. The Administration is prepared to develop new principles and practices which may commend themselves to Congress as a better remedy than automatic sanctions."

Kissinger said nations in the early 1960s which felt most threatened by Cuban revolutionary violence no longer felt that menace so acutely.

"Our guiding principle then as now is to prevent the Cuban issue from dividing us from our hemispheric neighbors," Kissinger said.

The secretary said that in return for granting Panama sovereignty over the Canal Zone, a treaty now being negotiated, would guarantee U.S. defense and operation of the canal "for an extended period of time," and the protection "of legitimate interests of our citizens and property in Panama."

Kissinger also promised to seek reform of the new U.S. Foreign Trade Act, which has been strongly criticized in Latin America.

"If the OAS sanctions are eventually repealed, the United States will consider changes in its bilateral relations with Cuba and in its regulations," Kissinger said.

He told the Houston audience the U.S. decision on Cuba "will be based on what we consider to be in our own best interests and will be heavily influenced by the external policies of the Cuban government."

In that connection he mentioned Cuba's "military relationship with countries outside the (western) hemisphere," meaning the Soviet Union.

The United States and Cuba broke relations more than 14 years ago. But now, Kissinger said, "we have taken some symbolic steps to indicate that we are prepared to move in a new direction if Cuba will."

"Fundamental change cannot come, however, unless Cuba demonstrates a readiness to assume the mutuality of obligation and regard upon which a new relationship must be founded."

Kissinger said the United States had maintained a position of "complete neutrality" during the recent Quito, Ecuador, conference of OAS foreign ministers which failed, against expectations, to lift the Cuban embargo imposed by the OAS in 1964.

A change in voting procedure, supported by the United States, will make it easier to achieve the necessary votes to end the 11-year ban. Two thirds (14 votes) were needed in Quito, but a decision to vote on the sanctions by simple majority (12 votes) will be considered and probably approved by the upcoming OAS general assembly. It meets in Washington in early May.

From that point to taking a vote on the sanctions is just a small procedural step, which could be taken at the same general assembly.

Meanwhile, Kissinger in a few days begins another pilgrimage to the Holy Land in search of a limited peace agreement.

The peripatetic secretary, who has spent more than one-fourth of his time outside the United States since becoming a Cabinet officer 18 months ago, is scheduled to leave Washington about noon Wednesday. He will not arrive in Aswan to talk with President Anwar Sadat until Friday evening. He is stopping in Britain on the way to attend a ceremonial function in Wales.

Consul's Plea Never Got There

CORDOBA, Argentina (UPI) — American consular official John P. Egan, executed by a leftist guerrilla firing squad, pleaded with the American ambassador to save his life only hours before he died, a published text of his note showed Saturday.

Sources close to the American embassy said Egan's funeral has been set for this morning in Cordoba despite his widow's wish to postpone it so his relatives could come from Montana. They said authorities put pressure on Mrs.

Egan to have him buried as soon as possible and his three brothers and only daughter will not attend the funeral.

President Ford said today the murder of U.S. Consular Agent John Patrick Egan by Argentine terrorists "is a vicious act which will be condemned by people of decency and honor everywhere."

"There can be no justification for the wanton killing of an innocent and defenseless person," Ford said in a statement from his Camp David retreat and released by the White House.

"Mr. Egan served his country loyally and well. All Americans will join in honoring the memory of Mr. Egan and expressing sympathy to his widow and family," Ford said.

President and Mrs. Ford sent a telegram of condolence to Mrs. Egan in Argentina.

Only hours before the Montonero guerrillas executed him Friday night, Egan sent a written note to Ambassador Robert C. Hill from the "people's prison" where he was held, urging him to persuade authorities to comply with his captors' demands. But the note apparently never reached Hill.

"I believe you have enough power to request the Argentine government and the army to comply with the request of the Montoneros," Egan wrote in the hastily scribbled note.

Its text was published by the Los Principios newspaper of Cordoba which found it after a telephoned tipoff from the Montoneros.

The Montoneros vowed to execute Egan unless the Argentine government showed by 7 p.m. Friday that four missing guerrillas believed held by security forces were alive and well.

The government did not comply and Egan's body was dumped along a lonely dirt road, a single bullet between his eyes and his hands tied behind his back. He still wore his bedroom slippers.

"If the request of the Montoneros is not completed in time, I will suffer," said Egan's note. "If these people are not dead, please use your influence to have them released."

Mason Rips Court in Talk for Conservatives

By CARL GRAHAM

PORT EWEN

Two featured speakers familiar with the scene in Albany and Washington painted a gloomy picture Saturday night for the Ulster County Conservative Party at its ninth annual Washington's Day dinner at the Capri Restaurant in Port Ewen.

State Senator Edwyn E. Mason (R-C, 48th Dist.), introduced as the first state legislator to accept Conservative Party endorsement, said: "The Supreme Court has nearly destroyed law and order in this country," a statement that drew applause from the 250 persons in attendance.

"No group in this country has done more to inspire contempt for law and order," Mason said. "Not only law and order, they have almost destroyed our national security," he said, calling for support of the CIA, FBI, and other agencies charged with security.

Mason predicted that the United States may be the first nation in the world to be destroyed by its own courts, and quoted Abraham Lincoln's statement that the nation, if ever destroyed, would be destroyed from within.

Speaking to an audience that included Ulster County Sheriff Thomas Mayone and other law enforcement officers, Mason cited the case of a self-confessed murderer of more than 20 persons who had been shot by a law officer. "There should be a special medal for these people who perform such a public service," he said, drawing another round of applause.

Mason sounded another familiar theme when he noted that New York was the most heavily taxed state, with taxes here 20 percent higher than in California, the next most heavily taxed state, and 50 percent above the national average.

Mason, whose revolt against administration taxation policies cost him the chairmanship of the Agriculture Committee while he served in the Assembly, said that "Tax increases during the Rockefeller years were used to finance his campaign for the presidency."

The second speaker, James Davidson, executive director of the National Taxpayers Union, noted that the total consumer debt has exceeded the country's net wealth and bluntly predicted: "We are going broke."

William Jackson, Ulster County Conservative Party chairman, introduced Sen. Mason. Former Rosendale Mayor Carl Grassi, Conservative Party second vice-chairman, served as master of ceremonies.

Among those introduced from the audience was Poughkeepsie Assemblyman Emeel Betros (R-99th Dist.), whose district includes the Ulster County towns of Lloyd, Marlborough and Esopus. Betros thanked Conservatives for their help in the 1974 election and predicted: "There is a strong possibility that we will not get the taxes the Governor (Hugh Carey) said we would," before leaving to fulfill another speaking engagement.

Also introduced from the audience was former Assemblyman H. Clark Bell of Woodstock. Town Supervisor George Freer of Esopus, Kenneth Whispell of Kingston, Richard Glazer of Rosendale, Oliver Crawford of Olive, and A. Michael Schovel of Saugerties, were introduced along with District Attorney Francis J. Vogt.

For Our Favorite KHS Patrolman

old sophomore, who lives on Route 32, thought it would be nice to honor the patrolman. The off-duty patrols, initiated in the school district, have reportedly improved community relations between the police and the students.

Freeman Readers Favor Gas Rationing... but Not By Much

KINGSTON

Readers of the Daily Freeman favor gasoline rationing rather than paying a higher price, but not by very much.

Response to a Freeman questionnaire, first appearing on Sunday, Feb. 2, shows 304 favoring gas rationing. A total of 239 opposed rationing, and instead voiced their opinions for a higher price for gas. Another 77 persons were opposed to both plans.

The 77 who opposed both rationing and the higher price plan, voiced various alternatives such as a return to odd-even days for the purchase of gas, gas-less Sundays and a preference for the dealer's plan submitted early in February.

The total response to the To Ration or Not coupon, numbering 620 up until last Tuesday, represented practically all areas of Ulster County, some from Northern Dutchess County and a handful of out-of-staters.

A typical response by one Stone Ridge reader, identifying with the pro-ration group, had this to say:

"This would cut down on its use. People would have to save the gas for work. Higher prices mean anyone that can afford to will buy it and waste it. We had rationing during World War 2 and everyone made out OK. We even had enough for church and shopping."

A Kingston reader, opposing gas rationing, said: "It would create the black markets we had during World War. Unless you had the contacts, you were strangled without gas. It was very unfair. The obvious solution is to permit us to remove emission controls. It is a fact, we would use half the amount of gas."

A Town of Ulster reader, favoring rationing, wrote: "Although it (rationing) has its problem, it still is the most equitable way to conserve. President Ford's plan of higher taxes will force only the poor to conserve. His point of view is always that of a well-to-do individual (just like Carey's)" —(New York State Gov. Hugh Carey.)

The dealer plan, referred to by several in the coupon returns, was suggested Feb. 6 and called for a system of "mandatory allocation and equitable distribution to retail outlets"—basically similar to the plan that brought "odd" and "even" gas days and long lines at the pumps last winter.

The proposal of the Gasoline Retailers Association of Northeastern New York, along with its counterparts on the state and national level, launched the petition campaign to President Ford and Gov. Carey—among others—to drop proposals for higher fuel taxes and coupon rationing.

The organization said it had hoped to obtain 50 million nationwide signatures on the petition.

The Freeman, as reported in the To Ration or Not Coupon, is forwarding the results of the response to Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr., Benjamin A. Gilman and Matthew McHugh.

Oil Executives Tell Their Side

KINGSTON

With the oil industry under continuing fire from consumerist critics, two Shell Oil executives came to Kingston recently to tell the side of their company, and the industry in general.

Jim L. Salini, White Plains district manager for Shell, and Everett L. Vilander, Shell's assistant manager for public relations — Northeast, said they were seeking to make contact with the public through local media to "clarify" certain issues, and let the public know the oil industry's views on the best way to meet the energy crisis.

"I'm confident the public makes the right decisions," said Salini, "provided they get the facts."

One thing they want the public to realize is that finding and developing new sources of petroleum and other energy forms is going to cost money.

Vilander said the Chase Manhattan Bank had estimated that it would cost the oil industry $500 billion to develop enough petroleum sources to meet the nation's needs by 1985.

"This is going to cost all of us consumers a lot of money," said Salini.

The oil companies have been criticized greatly for their high 1974 profits. Salini said the profits for the oil industry as a whole were considered to be below the average of all industry as a whole for the previous decade. Vilander said the Shell had over $620 million in profits in 1974, but had reinvested $1.1 billion, a figure the company had to borrow to meet, and that the company's indebtedness had been increasing greatly.

Finding new sources to meet increasing demand is the challenge facing the oil industry, according to Salini, and he said, "We must continue to have substantial earnings if we are to meet this challenge."

Meeting the challenge can be done in different ways. According to Salini, Shell is involved in various projects to produce energy through shale oil, tar sands, coal, geothermal, and solar energy.

He said the primary source of new oil in the immediate future is through improved methods of recovering oil from existing wells. Salini said nationally only about 34 per cent of the crude oil had been recovered from existing wells; he said now that the technology had been developed and it was profitable, the figure could be raised to 40 to 60 per cent depending on the well.

Among other points they made were:

- Concerning complicity among the oil companies in "converting" last year's petroleum shortage: "There wasn't."

- Less than one per cent of domestic oil products are exported, and most of that is end products of little use in energy production.

- Off-shore drilling on both coasts and off Alaska is regarded as "inevitable," and the technology is available to make it environmentally safe.

- Rationing, through bureaucratic expense, would raise gasoline prices about as much as higher taxes, and is not favored by the oil companies.

- Higher prices and consumer discipline have dropped consumption of gasoline slightly in the past year, but maintaining the present standard of living and higher population are going to increase demand.

- Coal reserves in America are plentiful, and coal should be used more in industry, where the technology is available to keep it from being an environmental hazard.

- The present surplus of petroleum in America is due to overproduction worldwide, but is only temporary.

- America will never be self-sufficient in petroleum, but the dependence on foreign sources can be reduced or kept from becoming any greater.

- Shell is not encouraging its service stations to sell more gasoline, but only make their full federal allocations "available."

- Worldwide demand for petroleum will quadruple in the next 30 years.

- The free enterprise system can meet the energy challenge, and do it cheaper and more efficiently than governmental intervention.

Teamster Leader Is Granted 'Stay' in Local 445 Dispute

WASHINGTONVILLE

Theodore G. Daley, under attack by dissident members of Teamsters Local 445, which he serves as secretary-treasurer and principal officer, has been granted a stay and reconsideration of a nearly $1,600 fine and other penalties imposed on him by the Teamsters general executive board.

Word of the international's agreeing to the appeal procedure was received at Local 445 headquarters in Washingtonville early this week, according to Richard Raskin, in charge of public relations for the local.

Robert Battiste, the international union's counsel in Washington, D.C., declined to comment on the matter Wednesday, saying it was the international's policy not to comment on such cases while they were "still in process."

Daley was fined $1,596.18 by the general executive board, the total of four vouchers for clothing and sundries bought by several local union officials in Miami Beach in 1972 and early 1973.

The reconsideration of the penalties will be held at the next meeting of the general executive board, which Raskin said would be in April.

Raskin, who was one of those buying the questioned articles, maintains that they were mainly underwear and books, and items like shaving cream, bought when Local 445 representatives were called down there for union business, and kept there longer than they were supposed to be.

Daley requested th reconsideration on the premise that he was fined for something that had long been known to the international, and had actually been resolved.

The four vouchers were part of a group of eight vouchers questioned by an auditor in a 1973 audit because they appear inappropriate or were insufficiently supported by documentation. After a lengthy series of maneuvers and correspondence, during which the local unsuccessfully tried to reauthorize the vouchers, all the money was repaid "without prejudice" with checks from a half-dozen local officials.

The local even got a letter back from Murray W. Miller, general secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters, dated July 15, 1974, thanking Daley for his "cooperation in this matter."

The matter was reopened when charges of embezzling $5,000 were brought against Daley by six local members, and Frank E. Fitzsimmons, president of the Teamsters, took original jurisdiction over the matter rather than leave it to local and joint council determination.

Daley went to court, unsuccessfully, to try to keep that from happening. "Dear Sir and Brother" letters are still exchanged between the international and Local 445, but Daley and Fitzsimmons have the same brotherly affection for each other as Cain had for Abel. Local 445's newspaper regularly runs articles unflattering to Fitzsimmons, ith headlines such as "The Shame of Fitzie."

Daley was found guilty by the general executive board of "expanding and approving the expenditure of Union monies for personal clothing," fined the $1,596.18, and told to publish the fact in the local's newspaper.

Involved in the whole matter is the running battle Daley has been having with Vincent A. Refino Sr., a trustee of the local, involving charges back and forth. Daley, for a period, suspended Refino without pay, but te charges were dropped and Refino given his back pay after Fitzsimmons took jurisdiction over those charges as well.

Daley has held his elected position with the Teamsters local for 20 years. Nominations for Local 445 will be held in November and the elections in December; the speculation among Daley supporters is that the campaign has begun early.

Public Meeting In New Paltz

NEW PALTZ

The New Paltz Town Board will hold a public meeting March 5 at 8 p.m. to review and discuss the addition or expansion of four businesses along Route 299.

The public meeting was set at last Wednesday's regular Town Board meeting, after the applications were received.

Friendly Ice Cream Co. and New Paltz Beverage seek to build new facilities along Route 299; both the College Diner and Plaza Diner want permission to expand their existing facilities.

Action on the four applications was tabled by the town board until public comments can be heard. The March 5 meeting will be held at the town hall.

Two zoning change requests were also received at last week's meeting, from Huguenot Manor (R-1 to multiple residence) and Federal Farm Credit Service (R-1 to business). Hearings will be scheduled on both requests at a later date.

In other action the board:

- Approved a lighting contract with Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp. for additional street lighting in some sections of the town.

- Heard a report from Supervisor Theodore Lasher that the New York State Thruway Authority acted quickly to alleviate the water contamination problem that was created by a salt pile near the Thruway interchange. Lasher said the salt has been moved inside a protective shed. The problem was first brought to light by the Earth Committee at New Paltz Central School.

- Appointed Carl Lillberg to the Assessment Board of Review; reappointed Lasher as town Civil Service Director and named Charles Karsten as assistant director.

- Scheduled a public hearing for March 25 at 8 p.m. on water and sewage plans for the Fulton Road townhouse development.

- Heard remarks from Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey Jr. (D-Saugerties), who reported on activities in the state legislature and sought information on problems of particular concern to New Paltz residents.

Three Independent Petitions Are Rejected

ROSENDALE

The two major parties won't have any competition in the March 18 Rosendale Village elections, after village clerk Kathleen Mihm rejected three independent petitions this week because of technical violations.

Ms. Mihm explained at last Wednesday's village board meeting that independent petitions filed by William Gully for trustee and George Montgomery and Mary Conlin for mayor were rejected because they were filled out improperly.

Gully and Montgomery filed their petitions on Monday; Mary Conlin filed her petition last Tuesday. Since Tuesday was the deadline for petitions, none of the three had time to correct the deficiencies.

As a result, only the Republicans and the Democrats have candidates for the two seats on the village board that will be vacated this year.

The terms of trustee Harriet Mulligan and Mayor Robert Sheehan expire this year. Both have declined to run for reelection for their respective offices.

Mrs. Mulligan, however, has been nominated by the Republicans to run for mayor; Lloyd Gersback is the Republican candidate for trustee.

Raivo Puusemp is the Democratic candidate for mayor. Marc Phelan, selected by the party's Committee on Vacancies after candidate Paul Cahill declined the nomination because of health reasons, will run for trustee.

The term of Democratic trustee Barbara DeStefano will expire in 1976.

Explaining the rejection of the independent petitions, Ms. Mihm stated, "The New York State Election Law is very specific. The petitions must be filled out correctly. Theirs were not."

In other action at the meeting, the board:

- Voted to contract with Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp. to install lights in the parking lot behind the Rosendale Theater off Main Street, at an annual rental fee of $480.

- Passed a resolution that will combine the offices of village clerk and village treasurer for greater operating efficiency.

- Announced that funds would be set aside in this year's budget for bicentennial activities in the village.

- Voted to pay off the $1,400 balance on a pick-up truck purchased four months ago for the highway department.

- Heard a report from Trustee DeStefano on the public meeting conducted by the Catskill Study Commission in Saugerties Feb. 15.

"Impasse—a predicament affording no obvious escape."

An impasse was what the Saugerties Village Board wound up with last Wednesday night during a special meeting to set the order of appearance on the ballot for the March 18 village election.

With three motions on the floor and no obvious escape in sight, frustrated trustees sent for Village Attorney William Brinnier, whose first action was to rule that three motions on the floor at once are illegal.

Brinnier got the board back on the track by giving priority to the first motion, in which Trustee Cal Hackett (not running for reelection) called for Row A on the ballot to be given to Trustee Robert Gardner. Gardner is running for another two-year term as an independent candidate after being elected in 1973 as the Independent Taxpayers Party made a clean sweep of four places on the board.

Report on Amnesty

ACCORD

Calling President Ford's clemency program for draft resisters a "dismal failure," Lillian Reavin of the Ulster County Committee for Total Amnesty reported on a Washington, D.C. convocation dedicated to total amnesty at the Feb. 23 meeting of the committee.

She said that the nationwide group visited congressmen and senators to "impress upon them the critical need for universal unconditional amnesty," and she spoke with parents of sons in exile and those who were killed or maimed in Vietnam.

Of President Ford's program, she said, "Of the 100,000 men eligible for the program, less than one per cent have availed themselves of the opportunity to give up their rights of citizenship while they pledge themselves to two years of punitive service because of their honorable refusal to participate in a less than honorable war."

She said legislation has been introduced into the House and Senate calling for unconditional amnesty, and she urged area residents to write to their congressmen and senators on the matter supporting the bills.

Mrs. Reavin concluded her remarks with the statement, "It is patriotic to die for your country; it is even more patriotic to keep your country from dying."

Hackett's motion was carried 5-2, with Mayor Vernon "Joe" Benjamin and Trustee Erika Hinchey opposed.

Mrs. Hinchey then brought back the second motion, to give her Sawyer Party (formerly Independent Taxpayers Party) Row B on the ballot. She and Benjamin were supported by Trustee Joseph Martin (an Independent) but lost by a 4-3 margin.

Trustee Walter Keefe then tried the third motion, moving that his Village Party be given Row B. The board in a turn-around vote approved the motion 4-3.

The board finally reached some semblance of agreement when it unanimously approved Mrs. Hinchey's motion to give Row C, the only spot left, to her Sawyer Party.

When the mayor's seat and three trustee positions came up for decision March 18, independent Gardner will be alone on Row A. The Village Party, with former Clerk-Treasurer James Gage running for mayor and Charles Steele, Gregory Mulstay and John Carnright trying for trustee's seats, will be on Row B. The Sawyer Party, with incumbents Benjamin and Hinchey being joined by trustee candidates Ronald LeBlanc and Thomas Zulick, will occupy Row C.

Voting takes place from noon to 9 p.m. in the village clerk's office.

HINTS OF THE WEEK FROM "PLANTERS CORNER"

at BRITTS

"Caring for Your House Plants"

With increasing interest each day in growing plants, we should learn how to care for them.

It is possible to live with plants the year round.

The general care of house plants is largely a matter of common sense. Cleanliness is essential. The air is full of grime and dust, even in the country, and in built-up area it is even more important to give plants a regular cleaning, otherwise, their breathing will become clogged and this can prove fatal.

The sudden transition from a humid greenhouse to a home is a major change in growing conditions. Leaves may start to turn yellow and fall off a few days after plants are in the home, but that will soon be overcome, providing the plants are not overwatered, are given plenty of air but not drafts, and good light but not direct sunlight. Attention should also be given to fighting pest and to pruning and training.

One of the easiest ways to increase humidity is to put the plant pot into a large container and fill the extra space between outside container and innerpot with something absorbent, such as peat moss. Plants that like a dry atmosphere usually like as much light as possible.

Elliot Richardson Playing a Waiting Game on Kissinger Job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elliot L. Richardson does not see any "realistic prospect" of running for President in 1976, but believes he stands a chance of becoming secretary of state if Henry A. Kissinger unexpectedly resigns well before the next election.

In fact, when Kissinger offered Richardson his new post as ambassador to Britain, he made a brief but unmistakable suggestion that Richardson might be a leading candidate to succeed him some day.

Richardson said he did not pursue the hint because "I didn't want to give the impression—which would have been a misleading impression—that I was in any way influenced in accepting the appointment as ambassador because I thought I might eventually succeed him as secretary of state."

In any event, the former attorney general said, Kissinger "more than likely" will remain on the job at least through the rest of President Ford's term, ending in early 1977, to press for a Middle East peace settlement.

Kissinger's suggestion "was not in the context of any indication that he was or is, in fact, thinking of leaving the department," Richardson said, doodling thoughtfully with a blue, felt-tipped pen in his temporary office at the State Department.

"If he does eventually decide to resign, and if President Ford has a significant portion of his first term then remaining, I'm sure I would be among those who are considered," Richardson said in an interview shortly before his weekend departure for London.

The next day, after his swearing-in, Richardson said he was "sure I'd accept" if offered the job.

That is about as far as the cool, correct Republican from Massachusetts will commit himself. But as the gracefully elaborate doodles filled one page and jumped to another, Richardson left little doubt that thoughts of his political future are never very far away.

Reminded that four previous U.S. ambassadors to Britain later became President, Richardson smiles and concedes he could imagine the possibility.

"But I don't see myself in the position of being able to do much about it," he said. "I'm not going to London with the idea I will be constantly glancing over my shoulder."

"If there should be a substantial change in the political situation in the United States, then conceivably I might think more actively about it, but as it is, I don't think there's any realistic prospect that I will be a candidate."

Richardson, 54, is a former undersecretary of state and was successively HEW secretary, defense secretary and attorney general in the Nixon administration until he resigned Oct. 20, 1973, rather than obey President Nixon's order to fire Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

After more than a year of lecturing and writing as a fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, Richardson is glad to be returning to government service.

He dismissed former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird's complaint that Richardson will be wasting his highly respected talents in London, where he succeeds Philadelphia millionaire Walter H. Annenberg on Monday.

It will be "an intensely interesting assignment" at a time of critical choices for Britain and for Anglo-American decisions on arms controls, energy, the Middle East, troop reductions in Europe and economic problems.

Looking back at Watergate, Richardson agrees with former special prosecutor Leon Jaworski's recent suggestion that Nixon should tell the truth about the scandal that ruined his administration, now that his former top White House aides have been tried and convicted.

But given Nixon's past performance, Richardson doubts

Nixon will make a clean breast of it.

"I think probably not. I think he'll probably have a very full version of events in his book. My guess is it will be the first time we get a more full accounting from him, but of course it will be an accounting which, let us say, gives his own personal view of the matter," he said with a wry smile.

Local Congressmen Voted in Favor of Rail Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Ulster County's three congressmen all voted in favor of a rail aid bill that will cost $347 million in grants and government-backed loans with the bulk, $222 million going to Penn-Central and another $25 million to the Erie-Lackawanna line.

Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25th), Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26th) and Matthew H. McHugh (D-27th) were in the 270-137 majority that passed the legislation and sent it on to a Senate-House conference committee for compromise with a previously approved Senate version.

The three legislators were also in agreement on establishing a special House Committee to study the CIA, FBI and Secret Service where the final vote was 286 to 120. They voted on party lines, however, on an amendment (defeated) that would have made the committee bipartisan. Speaker Carl Albert then named a committee of seven Democrats and three Republicans. The Democrats hold a 2-1 majority in the House, as reflected by the vote on that issue, 45 to 141.

In the Senators Jacob Javits (R) and James Buckley (C) voted in favor of raising the debt ceiling from $495 billion to $531 billion.

Javits voted against the oil import tax and Buckley voted in favor. The bill to block President Ford's executive order raising tariffs on imported oil was passed 66-28.

A compromise bill that would have retained the tariff only as it applied to oil used for gasoline, was rejected 25-69 with Javits in favor and Buckley opposed. Javits had sponsored the compromise bill.

Unflappable

Vice President Rockefeller was always the type one either loved or loathed. During his long reign as governor of New York he struck many poses and was many things to many men. To some he was a liberal because of his free spending, high tax programs. To others he was an arch conservative, especially in the latter years of his administration when he promoted tough anti-drug laws and acquiesced to the quelling of the Attica uprising in anything but a permissive manner. And so Paul Atkinson, local spokesman of the Liberal Party, has taken exception with the state's conservatives who still insist on calling Rocky a Liberal. "We don't want him, either," Atkinson was quoted as saying when he was informed of the Conservative Party's charges. And certainly the conservatives don't want him. So who does?

Well some segments of our society must find him appealing as evidenced by his long tenure at Albany. Now in his role as vice-president, a role he was handpicked for by a President who needed to broaden Ford's base of support, Rocky is again demonstrating his talent for getting things going. They're screaming at him from both sides of the aisle, but the unflappable Rockefeller manner casually ignores the slings and arrows as it did when he was governor of this state. The traditionally subservient role of vice-president has already undergone a needed shaking up since Nelson took the position on. And for one who was reportedly politically dead as little as nine months ago, it will be interesting to see how the magnetic Nelson moves on the Republican convention in 1976, not withstanding his latest disclaimers.

Behind the Arts

One of the glories of American society is the multitude of men and women who do volunteer work without pay, and often at considerable sacrifice. They are to be found associated with a great variety of organizations and causes—political, humane, ideological, cultural. It is often quite rightly observed that without the efforts of such people many worthy undertakings would flounder.

For the moment, we focus attention on one particularly interesting sub-species of this breed of human being. This is the person who strives mightily against the forces that threaten the continuing viability of performing arts groups.

Those forces are numerous, and powerful. Symphony orchestras, opera companies, theatre and dance groups—all are prey to the Great Gap. The gap, that is, between box office receipts and the costs of keeping afloat. Ingenuity and hope and persistence and lots of hard work are demanded of the volunteers, and they tend to respond with phenomenal energy.

They address envelopes. They sell tickets. They stage fund-raising affairs in astonishing variety. They answer phones and sew on costumes and build sets. They beard the rich for contributions, write grant applications, serve on stage crews. They are an amazingly devoted group of people. We salute them.

Berry's World

"Why do you have to go around telling people we're 'broke,' when you could simply say we're 'without cash flow'?"

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Supposedly, the public is protected by the rigid standards which govern the quality of manufactured goods. But more often, the standards are set to squeeze out competition and to fleece the consumers.

Evidence to support these charges will be laid before the public next month by the Senate Anti-trust subcommittee during six days of hearings.

"These hearings," states a confidential staff report to Chairman Phillip Hart, D-Mich., will show that the "voluntary standards" of most industries aren't voluntary at all but "have been used by the 'ins' to exclude the 'outs.'"

The standards are often rigged, according to the study, to bankrupt small competitors, to gouge consumers and to obstruct inventors with better ideas. The victims are stifled

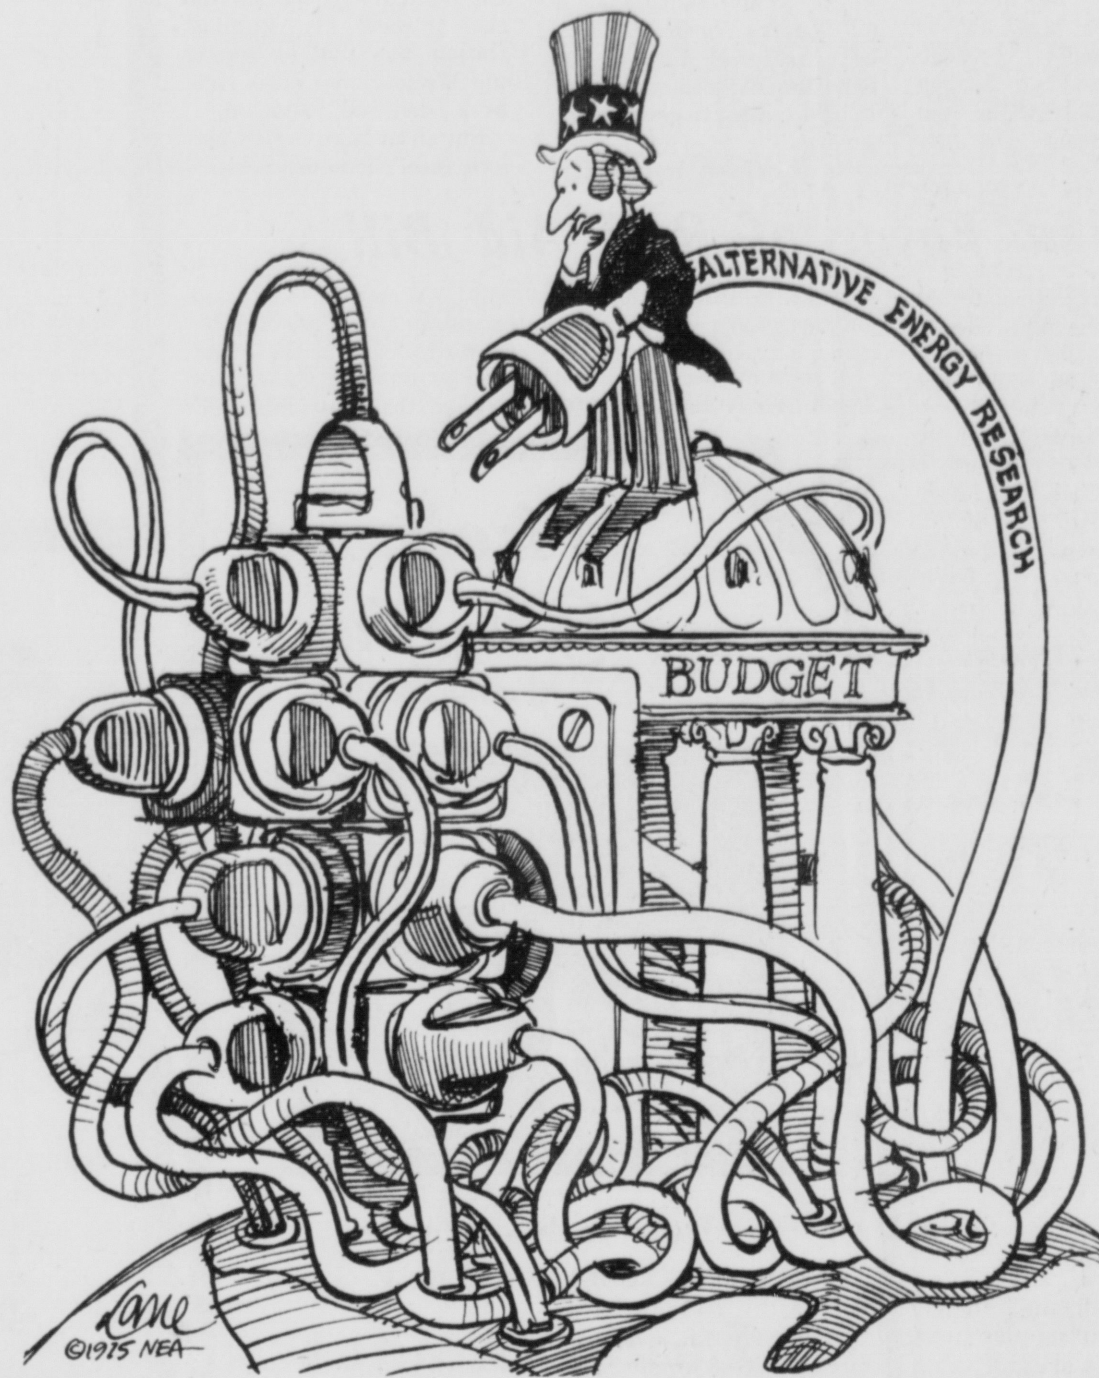

"in much the same manner (as) an octopus hangs to his prey," the report charges.

Here's how the game allegedly is played:

The established companies often control the professional societies which set the size, strength and design of products ranging from screws and staples to steam plants and manufacturing processes.

It is all too common for the professional societies to set standards, which benefit their own industries. Consumer advocates seldom have any real role in setting the standards.

Then the government often compounds the injustice by adopting the rigged standards. For most government agencies, lacking the technical staffs to write their own specifications, simply accept the industries' standards lock, stock and barrel.

One Man's Peccadillo Is Another's Gaffe

By William F. Buckley, Jr.

I hope that somewhere along the line hard investigation will reveal that the reports of J. Edgar Hoover's lubricious renditions to Lyndon Johnson on the moral habits of some of his important critics will prove to have been exaggerated. I say this because I have a great respect for J. Edgar Hoover which is diminished by these distasteful stories, and I'd prefer it if history proved that they were exaggerated, over against the alternative of permanently lowering my esteem for Mr. Hoover — I know no franker way to put it.

It is pretty sleazy stuff: the head of America's FBI telling, in barroom style to the President of the United States, which of his critics in Congress slept with whom, after putting away how many pints of gin, all which information having been gathered through the use of electronic surveillance or tailing done by FBI agents. I do, however, find paradoxes in the accounts of these episodes which reveals something of the perplexed current position on the public morality.

A spokesman for the FBI insisted that only such Congressmen were investigated as were up for a federal position. For instance, if the President considered naming Congressman Jones to a federal judgeship, the FBI is required, under the law, to run a "security check" on Jones. Now this is first and foremost a check to ascertain whether, by any chance, Mr. Jones is on the payroll of a) the Soviet Union, or b) IT&T, not of course necessarily in that order of gravity. A category below is an examination into the question of his rectitude in such matters as paying his bills, cheating his investors, that kind of thing.

Then there comes that third category, loosely put together under the heading of "morals."

It is said, for instance, that

Mr. Hoover reported to President Johnson that Congressman Jones (any similarity between my Congressman Jones and any Congressman by the same name is, I hope it is understood, purely coincidental) visited a particular brothel on his most recent trip to a great American municipal center. And that Congressman Smith got so smashed at some public affair or other that when it came time to pronounce his oration, he could hardly be understood (a great improvement, I would say, over the orations of most Congressmen, but that is beside the point). Over all of this, it is reported, Lyndon Johnson was given to chuckling with great, lascivious satisfaction at his knowledge of other men's intimate foibles.

Now in discussing these episodes, the commentator for Time Magazine referred airily to the transcribed "peccadilloes" of the gentlemen in question. Now a peccadillo is a slight offense, a petty fault — like, say, slurping your soup spoon, or picking your nose, or neglecting to use the object pronoun after a preposition.

But of course if this is so, then one wonders why there is so much agitation over the collection, and then the relaying to the President, of these slight offenses and petty faults? If, let us say, a Congressman being considered for a diplomatic position regularly fails to use an underarm deodorant, here would be an example of a petty offense which however would have some bearing on his suitability to be situated between, say, the Queen and the Archbishop of Canterbury on some future occasion. But a peccadillo that is less than professionally incapacitating is, one would suppose, not only none of the FBI's business, it oughtn't have any capacity to shock.

Yet it does. I cannot imagine a Congressman running for reelection, and saying to the voters: "I work every day and every night of the week in the public interest, except Saturday nights which I spend in a brothel." The public, one gathers, doesn't share the urbanity of Time Magazine on what constitutes a peccadillo. And without passing any judgment on whether the public, or Time Magazine, is correct under the aspect of the heavens, if there is such an aspect, it is certainly the case that we have here an awful muddle of sorts: people being shocked by the revelations, by the head of the FBI to the President, of unshocking activities.

Nicholas Von Hoffman:

First Real Woman of the '70s

LOS ANGELES — Cher is on the set of Television City's Studio 31. She is about to do a complicated bit of comedy stage business in which she must pick up a baseball bat and successively smash a rug, a rubber spider, a lock, an alarm clock, a bottle, a cantaloupe and a birthday cake.

The routine is routine slapstick. It can only be as funny as the comedienne can make it; and, although it may look easy, any actor will tell you that to remain in character, while handling so many props so quickly, is an accomplishment. All the more so for an actress whose previous comedy experience has mostly been standing still and delivering one-liners set up for her by a straight man.

Cher, the new star, America's latest sexy lady, gets cued. Wack, smash, bang — spiders, clocks and locks go flying. "Wonderful," the director's voice tells her from the control room, while an audience of 20 or 30 friends and hangers-on clap. "Let's do it again," the director then adds.

The props are replaced. A makeup man powders a gleam off Cher's nose, and the skit is repeated, only this time the bottle she's supposed to smash rolls on the floor. George Schlatter, the producer, crawls after it and attempts to hand it back up to Cher as she perseveres to a garbage-strewn climax of smushed melon and devastated cake.

Again the voice from the control room says it was wonderful, but they're running the tape on the studio monitor for Schlatter to see if it was. One of the cameras shooting the skit has picked up the producer on his hands and knees and they want to intersperse him into the scene. "I'm not sure the American public is ready for a gorilla like me," says Schlatter, who has to put the Cher show together in dribs and drabs and short takes every week.

Most of the big comedy shows are performed in front of an audience and taped from start to finish as though they were polished theatrical productions, but that can't be done with Cher. Every week Schlatter has got her doing something new, something she's never done before, which she doesn't have the experience to run through without committing gaffes and glitches. As a result, part of the show is taped in front of a live audience while the rest is done in a rehearsal situation with the best snippets of performance electronically put together on the tape editing machines.

For George Schlatter, who produced "Laugh-In," such patching presents no problem and he finds it the best way to perfect his star. "She never did a monologue before, she never danced before, and this is a star vehicle as opposed to 'Laugh-In' which was a producer vehicle," George explains while a choreographer demonstrates the proper way to do the bump and grind to a Cher who is sitting on her haunches, smoking a cigarette, drinking a can of pop and studying the man's movements.

"She's a woker," George says, admiring an ambitious nature which motivates her to do 10 retakes of a minute segment without squawking. "Not many people in this business would do that. Have you ever seen Dean Martin rehearse?"

Producers tend to talk well of their stars to visiting reporters, but George's appraisal of Cher conveys something past public relations: "Until Cher, women have been the joke, not done the joke. They have been used as the butt of the joke, if you don't mind a slip into chauvinism."

George should know. He's worked on a lot of woman comedy shows going back to Lucy, the savagely humiliated, female clown. To him performers like Carol Burnett and Mary Tyler Moore are transitional figures, but Cher, he says, will be the first female star to carry a show in the same way that many men have.

There are a lot more women in the production unit than you'll usually see. One of the writers, the assistant director, the stage manager, one of the choreographers, even one of the grips are women. "We've tried to bring women in," Schlatter says. "I was the first male chauvinist to surrender... women are smarter than men."

Having said that, George doesn't want to get himself tabbed a caustic so he tells her, "I'm not a social worker, I'm not a philanthropist, and I'm not into that with Cher. She's not into the movement, but she is a product of the movement. The first real woman of the '70s."

As he speaks, Cher has begun to do a very difficult act with Freddie Prinze, the young star of "Chico and the Man." As George studies them working together he says, yes, it is also true that the first real woman of '70s attracts many female viewers with the splendidly and expensively crazy costumes she wears. Such are the complexities of these things.

Just then Freddie and the star get tangled up in each other while doing a comic song-and-dance number. "Let's pick it up from the joke," George shouts. "Cher, when you went over to the piano that time it lacked some of the precision of a Polish parade."

Cher nods, makes a clown face, and resumes her place, ready to try again.

The Reader Writes

Bell's Reply

Editor: The Freeman:
To err from time to time is human and understandable. To try to justify one's error at a later date by quoting one's original error goes beyond these boundaries.

In the February 23rd edition of the Sunday Freeman, Hugh Reynolds reporting on the Temporary Water Supply Commission, writes as if the Temporary Commission were to be continued beyond April 1, 1975.

The Commission is a Temporary Commission. The work of the Commission was programmed to be completed by April 1, 1975, and it will be. At no time has the Commission recommended its continuation beyond April 1, 1975. The subject matter assigned to the Commission has been studied and evaluated most comprehensively. The alternative solutions will be stated in the final report and recommendations to the Legislature. It is now time for action.

Reporter Reynolds, attempting to justify his impression, quotes an article which appeared in the November 24th 1974 edition of the Sunday Freeman. Reporter Reynolds neglects to tell his readers that he also wrote the November 24th, 1974 article and, in effect, is quoting himself to justify his previous error in reporting.

The November 24th, 1974 article involved a speech I made at the Holiday Inn in Fishkill, New York, before the Mid-Hudson Valley Water Resources Forum on Friday, November 22nd, 1974, explaining the revised proposals of the Water Commission brought about as a result of the November 1974 elections vesting control of the Governorship in Hugh Carey and the control of the New York State Assembly in Democratic hands.

In an extremely brief "interview" in the hallway of the Fishkill Holiday Inn while I was on the way to my car in the parking lot, Reporter Reynolds asked what the Democratic landslide of November 1974 meant in political terms. I advised Reporter Reynolds that after January 1, 1975 Governor Carey had the power to fill the vacancies on the Temporary Water Commission, oust the commission Chairman and Vice-Chairman from control, designate a new leadership team and effectively abolish the Commission by firing its present personnel and using the unexpended monies on account for patronage purposes. I explained that, in my opinion, this would be a shame as the Water Commission had assembled an excellent staff and needed the three remaining months of its official term to complete its work, file its final report and make final recommendations to the Governor and the Legislature. This, of course, is not how Reporter Reynolds wrote the story. He may have been pressed by the pressure of the deadline. There may have been some failure in communication due to the brevity of his interview, or it simply might have been error in judgment, as happens from time to time to all human beings.

I left for a vacation with my family on the very next day after the speech—Saturday, November 23rd—and did not return to Woodstock until about two weeks later. At that time I read the back papers and discovered Reporter Reynolds' error contained in the November 24th, 1974 edition. Considering the passage of time, it didn't seem necessary to make a fuss.

Some of these facts were covered in a telephone call Reporter Reynolds made to me on Thursday, February 20th, prior to a speech I made before the League of Women Voters on the same day at the Statewide Savings and Loan Association in Kingston. Once again, however, Reporter Reynolds did not report accurately in his February 23rd, 1975 article and used his previous incorrect reporting to justify the manner and tone in which he desired to write the February 23rd, 1975 article. I discussed with Reporter Reynolds in the Thursday, February 20th, telephone talk the difference between hard news reporting and the work of a political columnist. In my opinion, there is a difference between the two. In a political column, such as "City Beat" a columnist is expected to take certain literary license with facts and truth in an attempt to make the column, hopefully, interesting and, if possible, politically sensational. In reporting hard news a good reporter has an obligation to check his facts, write objectively and make a balanced presentation regardless of his own leanings or prejudices.

Fortunately for the Temporary Water Commission but unfortunately for the people of the upstate community, Governor Carey since assuming office on January 1, 1975 has been too busy with his budget problems to concentrate on the Temporary Water Commission. His chief aims appear to be cutting upstate programs and funneling more state money into New York City, such as, cutting Volunteer Firemen Training Programs and abolishing the Fore Training Academy (no volunteer firemen in New York City, I guess), cutting nursing school training programs in Middletown. Poughkeepsie, ie, Harlem Valley, Hudson Valley and other upstate areas, changing the aid to education formula, which if enacted as proposed, can drain almost $300,000,000.00 out of upstate school districts into New York City schools and last but not least, proposing in direct violation of his campaign pledge an $806,000,000.00 tax increase which includes the now famous ten cent gasoline tax which will be used, in part, to subsidize the New York City subway system.

The final report and recommendations of the Temporary State Commission on the water supply needs of Southeastern New York are now at the printers. The Commission will complete its work, as programmed, on schedule before April 1, 1975.

If Governor Carey and his Democratic followers do not think highly of the Water Commission's recommendations, it will be their responsibility to present constructive alternatives to solve the water supply needs of Southeastern New York, where 70% of the State's population currently resides and where demographic studies indicate there will be a substantial growth in the years ahead.

I thank you for the opportunity to set the record straight.

Very truly yours,
H. Clark Bell

No Poll

Editor: The Freeman
On behalf of the 40,000-member Southern Region of the Civil Service Employees Assn., I am compelled to demand a correction of an erroneous and, we feel, malicious headline on Pg. 1 of the Freeman of 2/20/75—"Poll Shows CSEA 2-1 Against Strike."

As described in the accompanying story, the alleged "poll" was not a "poll" of the CSEA at all; the reporter states that 95 of those polled "belong to CSEA and 85 said they didn't." The reporter also fails to say what proof she had that the 95 did in fact belong to CSEA, which further undermines the credibility of the story.

The reporter says she asked employees "if they want to strike." The headline says the results showed employees are "against strike." The two are entirely different. I am surprised that anyone said they "want" the strike. If Ulster County is shut down Tuesday, it will be because the county legislators forced the strike by their extreme provocation of the employees in not bargaining in good faith. Yet not wanting to strike will not prevent most workers from joining our picket lines—and this is clearly stated far down in the story: "No one wants to strike," said many an employee, adding that if a strike occurs they are "going to have to honor it."

In short, "Who wants to strike?" is a meaningless question which perhaps could have been reworded into a meaningful one if asked by a professional opinion-taking organization. The very presence of a reporter among public employees asking "if they want to strike" would taint the "poll" in favor of a "no" vote. That 51 said "yes" to a reporter shows the determination of the workers to strike if the county fails to come up with a contract by Tuesday.

It was not a scientific poll; the headline contradicted the story; and it was not the CSEA that was "polled." Our members feel most strongly that running this "news story" at all was an act of editorializing against the workers. We still hope that, in accord with journalistic ethics, you will run the correction at least as prominently as the original story.

Open Letter

Sen. Edwyn E. Mason
Room 413, State Capitol
Albany, N.Y. 12224
Dear Sir:

Our local papers carried an article describing your feelings on abolishing the New York Council for the Arts. I was amazed that a man of your position could take such a callous and ruthless stand concerning the Council!

My purpose of writing to you opposing your stand is threefold: (1) I am President of Local No. 215, American Federation of Musicians which is very much concerned about furthering culture throughout our area and the State; (2) I am an Executive Board Member of the N.Y. State Conference of Musicians which represents some 48,000 musicians throughout the State, some of whom directly benefit from the Council of the Arts; and (3) I am a private citizen, residing in Woodstock, N.Y., concerned about the future growth of the arts so that my family and children can enjoy the knowledge reaped there from.

The Council of the Arts affords talented people a full or supplementary living in their chosen profession. They have spent many hours improving their skills so that others might enjoy and grow from their endeavors. I think you would readily agree that our world would be very unpleasant without music and art.

Your remark that N.Y. State is excessive in its budget allocation for the arts is irresponsible. I have always felt that New York State has been and is a leader in the U.S.; not a follower. Thank God the past leaders of this state have had the foresight to bring in new innovations which other states have copied!

You state that abolishing the Council is a better move for the poor than to tax them for haircuts, bowling and other recreations. While I'm not in favor of this method of tax either, are you of the opinion that enjoying music and art is only for the upper and middle class? Why must the poor be deprived of enjoying the arts?

No program is perfect, as we both would agree. I believe an outside audit of the Council at a fee of $100,000 could be saved and executed by State Auditors already employed in that capacity. This would cut out a redundant expense to the Council.

In summation, Sen. Mason, I would ask that you re-evaluate and re-examine your thoughts regarding the Council. Changes are always in order to make a program better or to help it survive but to completely abolish a program affording people such total enjoyment is unthinkable. I do hope that in review you will see that in losing the Council of the Arts would be a detriment to not only the State but the country as well.

Very truly yours,

Local No. 215, A.F. of M.

Arts Council

Editor, The Freeman:

Your readers should be interested in certain unfortunate aspects of the conference of the Ulster County Council for the Arts held in New Paltz last week. As taxpayers they will be ultimately paying the bill for the Council.

At the Friday evening session the co-chairman, Arthur Rashap, gave a rambling, disconnected talk during which he asked himself at one point the question: "Why am I here?" and then shrugged his shoulders and replied, "I really don't know why I'm here."

This Rashap is a young lawyer connected with the Rockefeller Associates in New York City who has been talked about as a possible executive director of the Council. The public should therefore be made aware that he has on more than one occasion publicly stated that he envisions an administrative budget of $50,000 for the Council. This would be 50% of the entire amount of money for the arts which Ulster County would be entitled to under the present per capita funding formula! With his sense of fiscal responsibility I would suggest that his talents are better suited to his present employers than to the economy of Ulster County.

Also speaking Friday night was Gray MacArthur from the New York State Council for the Arts who delivered a pedestrian address at an equestrian gallop and then made a disingenuous reply to questions regarding the role of local arts councils in the funding process. Unfortunately those in the audience were insufficiently informed to ask the proper follow-up questions.

Probably the worst damage was done on Saturday when acting chairman Irving Brown of SUNY New Paltz condescended the assembly into scuttling the whole afternoon agenda in order to ram through what would have been a simple procedural matter at the end of the day. In so doing he was able to avoid debate and a possible approval of the by-laws; and he thus perpetuated control of the Council by a small group of self-appointed guardians. By a parliamentary maneuver I was able to secure enlargement of the Board by several new members, but I failed in a motion that would have insured new blood being brought into the Board.

This was unfortunate as several members of the present group take no active part in the Council's work, and at least three of the others, who have been active, have failed to carry out their assignments competently.

I still think there is a place for an arts council in Ulster County. The purpose of this letter is to alert the public as to what has transpired to date and to make certain that enough concerned and well-informed organizations, artists, and citizens are on hand at the next meeting scheduled for June.

Sincerely,
Paul Miller

Gun Controls

Once again the "Anti-Gun" forces are at work both in New York State as well as Washington, D.C. I find as I read today's newspaper that Patrick Murphy, the man who was a failure as Police Commissioner of the City of New York is once again voicing his frustrated opinion and I quote, "The solution to the problem is to disarm the citizens—who have entirely too many handguns in their possession." Unquote. The statistics, that are never mentioned, are to the effect that legal guns, legally registered, are not the ones responsible for the assaults and murders of policemen and other victims. All people of Mr. Murphy's caliber look for the easiest path to take to confiscate first handguns and then as time goes on all guns.

If Mr. Murphy and his cohorts spend more of their time and so called intelligence to see that present laws are enforced to the letter, and also that the courts dealt out the punishment to fit the crime, then I firmly believe that there would be much less crime and assaults against police officers as well as the entire citizenry.

In New York State, which by the way has one of the toughest gun laws, "The Sullivan Law", which very seldom is enforced in regard to illegal guns, there is no need for further harassment of the honest gun owners; however I again in reading today's newspaper find that Mayor Beame of New York City is also siding with Mr. Murphy. This point however is nothing new since Mayor Beame has been crying to Governor Carey in Albany for more gun controls ever since January. Since New York City seems unable to cope with their problems (and now that they have a New York City man as Governor, which will probably help their cause) it will because of them make everyone in New York State as well as the rest of the country suffer. I find it very sad to think that many of the same people who clamor for more gun laws, by the same token would fight to legalize marijuana and probably in due time other forms of dope that cause untold harm and death to not only our young people but many adults as well.

Now is the time for all law abiding people to call upon their state and federal lawmakers to put down these hairbrained schemes of these so called intelligent people who want to do away with all guns. This is seemingly another part of the subversive plan of certain factions to bring our country under the rule of dictatorship. These factions are constantly attempting to and in many cases already have taken their toll on such important things as morality, law and order and now on private ownership of handguns. It makes a loyal American, who served his country in time of need, wonder just what has been offered to these people and by whom.

Taking legal guns from honest private citizens, the great majority of which would lay down their own lives for the cause of law and order, will never take guns from the hands of criminals and by the same token will never do away with crime. The only way to effectively combat crime is in the courts and through the new existing laws on the books.

Let us hope and pray to God that this great country will never be in the position that England was prior to World War II with no guns for the Home Guard to protect themselves. However, I do feel that if something is not done now to stop the Bingham, the Harts, the Murphys, the Beames and any other advocates of gun confiscation, then all decent people will be in trouble not only from gun control but also many other dictatorial controls.

Yours truly,
Joseph M. Carle

Water Study: Commission Dead But Controversy Lives On

FOR THE RECORD — "To err from time to time is human and understandable. To try to justify one's error at a later date by quoting one's original error goes beyond these boundaries."

If that quote looks familiar, it should be. It leads off a letter to the editor (above) authored by former Assemblyman H. Clark Bell, attempting to prove, apparently, that "Reporter Reynolds" (a term he uses no less than nine times) "erroneously reported" on Bell's position on the northeast New York water supply study commission and then tried to cover his "mistake" by referring to the original quote.

Bell completes his three-page letter by thanking the editor "for the opportunity to set the record straight."

Bell's contention, and the basis for his beef with us, is that his position on the future of the water supply commission, of which he is vice-chairman, has been "erroneously reported" by us.

Bell is suggesting that we got it in our head that he was in favor of continuing the life of the commission beyond next March 31 and that when we were told in no uncertain terms that that was not Bell's position, we attempted to show, by some rather insidious journalism, that it was Bell who was double talking, not us.

"Reporter Reynolds asked what the Democratic landslide of November 1974 meant in political terms." (This is a subtle rewording of the question we posed. We had our own ideas on what it might have meant. We wanted Bell's views.)

To quote Bell's letter above: "I advised Reporter Reynolds that after January 1, 1975, Governor Carey had the power to fill the vacancies on the Temporary Water Commission, oust the Commission Chairman and Vice-Chairman from control, designate a new leadership team and effectively abolish the commission by firing its present personnel and using the unexpended monies on account for patronage purposes. I explained that, in my opinion, this would be a shame as the Water Commission had assembled an excellent staff and needed the three remaining months of its official term to complete its work, file its final report and make final recommendations to the Governor and the Legislature. This, of course, is not how Reporter Reynolds wrote the story."

Check the quote of Nov. 22 against Bell's version above. They are substantially alike. Bell's position was not—repeat, not—"erroneously reported." His letter to the editor in fact substantiates the Nov. 22 quote which appeared on Nov. 24 and again on Feb. 23, 1975.

There are two other points we'd like to clarify here.

First, Bell's emphasis that the commission was TEMPORARY and ergo any extension of its term of office would be contradictory.

Since we're setting the record straight, let's take a look at an article published in the Freeman Nov. 14, 1970 in regard to the "new" commission. The article notes that $186,000 had been appropriated for an 18-month study that would be completed at the end of the first three months of 1972. Now, that's TEMPORARY.

The Commission lived on, however, with no official word on why it did not expire or at least report out on March 31, 1972. The next "expiration date" was March 31, 1974. Or so it seemed. The June 7, 1974 Freeman announced that the commission had been extended until March 31, 1975.

Based on that, a reasonable person would find it difficult to entirely rule out the commission's hanging on for another year or two.

The other issue is one of timing: Bell's.

We raised that question immediately with Bell on the phone Feb. 20 when he raised the subject of "erroneous reporting."

We asked him why he had allowed three months to go by without attempting to set the record straight, in fact he was convinced his views had not been accurately reported. Bell's answer over the phone was, "Why should I? You made the mistake. Not me."

Bell says in his letter that he and his family left for vacation the day after the Nov. 22 meeting and that he didn't see the article until he returned some two weeks later. "Considering the passage of time," he says, "it didn't seem necessary to make a fuss" (on the Fishkill story).

Of course, there was no reason to make a "fuss." The report was accurate.

City Beat

By Hugh Reynolds
Freeman City Hall Reporter

Assuming Bell's position is that the commission should be allowed to expire (by law) on March 31, and that is what he says his position is, the salient question is: did we misquote Bell or did we "erroneously report" his position?

In order to have erroneously reported on Bell's position, we would have had to have written or misquoted Bell as saying that he was in favor of extending the life of the commission beyond March 31, 1975.

We hate to break this news to Clark Bell after he went through all that trouble, but nowhere in any of the articles we've done (and we've done most of them) is Bell quoted or is the statement made that he is in favor of extending the life of the commission.

We do quote Bell as saying in Fishkill on Nov. 22 that "They're (the Democrats) in the driver's seat may just abolish the commission and use the money for patronage. That would be a shame because we've assembled one of the best staffs in the country. It would all go down the drain."

Bell's version of that conversation, which was "off the record" in the sense that it was not formally delivered to the water forum meeting in Fishkill, but was solicited by us in the hallway as Bell was leaving, is this:

Ham Station Dedicated

STONE RIDGE

An amateur radio station, WA2MJM, was officially dedicated recently in room 414 of the John Burroughs Science Building at Ulster County Community College (UCCC).

This station was set up in a joint undertaking by UCCC and the Overlook Mountain Amateur Radio Club as a memorial to the late Jean M. Fox, a graduate of the college and a member of OMARC until her death.

Miss Fox became a licensed amateur radio operator after the loss of her sight with the help of members of the Overlook club, and became an avid 'ham' with world-wide contacts including one with King Hussein of Jordan, himself an ardent radio amateur.

After her death, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Fox of Kingston, donated her radio equipment to the club, and plans for the memorial station were worked out with the college. The Federal Communications Commission later assigned Jean's original call sign, WA2MJM.

Attendees at Saturday's dedication ceremonies were President Robert Brown of UCCC, Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey (D-101st District), members of the Fox family and members of the Overlook club.

After short addresses by Brown and Hinchey, and comments by club members who had helped Jean get started, an attempt at making the first two-way contact resulted in 'raising' another member of the club, who lived a mere two miles away in Stone Ridge. A second try, however, brought contact with the U.S. weather station on Swan Island, off the coast of Honduras, and the station was then declared fully operational.

Interested students at the college may contact faculty member Derwin Stevens, trustee for the station, and also a member of the club, or Robert W. Schwenk, 141 Clifton Avenue, Kingston.

Plans are being made for possible credit-free courses in amateur radio to be included in UCCC curricula at some future date.

Discussing Court Procedures

DA's Office Aids School

STONE RIDGE

The Ulster County District Attorney's office is providing instruction in court procedures and court demeanor to policemen attending the second annual basic Municipal Police Training Course at the Stone Ridge campus of Ulster County Community College.

A recent lecturer was Assistant District Attorney John Dall Vechia.

The coordinator of the school, Associate Professor Theodore Dietz, of UCCC, said the instruction proved most beneficial for the policemen attending the school.

"We're very fortunate in having dedicated professionals like John Dall Vechia and his associates in the District Attorney's office as instructors."

Their sharing of their experience with young police officers is a valuable contribution to Ulster County law enforcement."

The eight-week school was sponsored by the College, Ulster County Sheriff's Department, Kingston Police Department, and the Police Chiefs Association of Ulster County.

Vols Documentary

HURLEY

A visually hard-hitting documentary produced by ABC Television News, featuring Science Editor Jules Bergman, will be shown Monday night at 7 o'clock at the Hurley Volunteer Fire Company, No. 1 station.

Chief Earle McLane said local legislators, city, town and other government officials as well as fire officers and firefighters are urged to be on hand for this fire safety message.

The film, running 54 minutes, will be shown at 7 o'clock prior to the regular meeting of the fire company. It is open to the public.

Chief McLane said the ABC film examines the economics that industry and government allow themselves when it comes to protecting people from fire. The use of polyurethane, insulation, currently high-rise building practices, the flammability of children's clothing and automobile gas tanks are just a few of the hazards discussed in this film.

Civil Defense Police Meet

CD Training Program Set

KINGSTON With a new training program set to begin this spring, the Kingston-Ulster Civil Defense Auxiliary Police Service is seeking new members.

The completely volunteer, uniformed unit is an arm of the Office of Natural Disaster and Civil Defense under the direction of James H. Glemming.

Members of the unit serve not only during floods and other disasters, but also are available to assist regular police and for traffic control and parking assistance during public events.

The approximately 40 members presently on the roster put in some 1,800 man-hours annually at such activities as the Lions Exposition, Memorial Day and firemen's parades, Halloween patrol and Boy and Girl Scout activities.

Open to men and women with clean police records, the service provides insurance coverage for members while on duty and offers an extensive training program in various aspects of police science, according to its chief, George Alpaugh. When on patrol, gasoline is provided by the governmental unit requesting service.

Members provide their own uniforms and radio equipment. Civil Defense Auxiliary Police do not carry firearms.

The new training program to begin this spring will cover such topics as protection of property and prevention of looting, crowd control, basic concepts of criminal law, department rules and regulations and police public relations.

The unit meets the second and fourth Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room at the Ulster County Office Annex, 300 Flatbush Avenue. Persons interested in applying for membership may do so at one of the meetings or by contacting the Civil Defense and Natural Disaster Office.

Rondout Savings Elects First Woman Trustee

KINGSTON
Mrs. Evelyn L. Corsones of Kingston has been elected to serve on the Board of Trustees of the Rondout Savings Bank. Mrs. Corsones is the first woman to serve on the board of the 107-year-old savings institution, according to James E. Norton, Rondout president, following the recent meeting of the trustees.

Mrs. Corsones, wife of Dr. Peter D. Corsones of Kingston, is well-known in Kingston for her active participation in educational, medical and community affairs. She is currently serving her second term on the Kingston City Schools Consolidated Board as chairman of the Building Committee after having been chairman of the Personnel and Business Management Committees. She also is serving on the Advisory Committee for the Mid-Hudson School Study Council at State College in New Paltz.

Mrs. Corsones also is president of the Board of Managers of Hudson Valley Senior Residence and vice-president of the Board of Trustees for the Home.

Mrs. Corsones also has served on the boards of the Kingston Hospital Auxiliary, Y.W.C.A., Red Cross, Ulster County Medical Auxiliary, New York State Medical Auxiliary and the Junior League of Kingston. She is a past president of both the Kingston Hospital Auxiliary and the Junior League of Kingston.

Mrs. Corsones attended Kingston Public Schools and received the Bachelor of Science degree at Syracuse University. She is the mother of three: Mrs. Paul L. Gruner and Mrs. Brian L. Findholt. Both daughters are teachers in area schools. A son, James Peter, is a senior at Princeton University who plans to enter medical school after graduation.

Accord Man First

BOONE, Iowa
Roger Anderson, Accord, in Ulster County, won first place in the state of New York in the Non-Irrigated Division in the National Corn Yield Contest, conducted by the National Corn Growers Association, with a yield of 188.33 bushels per acre.

Second place in New York in the Non-Irrigated Division went to Dennis C.

McNamara, Stanley, Ontario County, with a yield of 149.83 bushels per acre.

Howard J. Gabel, Collins, in Erie County, New York, placed third in the Non-Irrigated Division with a yield of 132.8 bushels per acre.

More than 1,270 entrants from 44 states ranging from coast to coast competed for the top three national trophies awarded in both the Irrigated and the Non-Irrigated Division and the all expense paid overseas trips the national winners and their wives will receive from Shell Chemical Company's Agricultural Division, producer of Bladex corn herbicide. The contest field had to be at least 25 acres in size.

County Legislator Richard Nace (District 2) was on hand for the recent grand opening of the Ulster Sport Center, 576 Ulster Avenue Mall. Legislator Nace helped in the opening day ceremonies along with the owner, F. Morgan Turner (L) and his son, Thomas Turner (R), who is manager of the new business. Ulster Sport Center is the only Mercury outboard dealer in Ulster and Greene Co.

Realtor Network . . . A Big Assist

TOWN OF ULSTER
David Gally, president of Bertha Gally Inc., 133 Boices Lane, Town of Ulster, reports that the Homes For Living Network, of which Bertha Gally Inc., is the exclusive Ulster County affiliate member, culminated 1974 with a substantial increase in the number of families it assisted being transferred and in total dollar volume of referral business generated between Homes For Living Network members.

The HFL Network, with national headquarters in St. Louis, Mo., is a national marketing network of Realtors comprised of more than 1,000 real estate offices in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. Through numerous programs and services, HFL Network members serve the vital needs of American home buyers and sellers.

The number of relocating families being referred between HFL members increased 20 percent in 1974, amounting to over $52 million in referral sales documented by members.

With approximately 40 percent of the 1,000 HFL offices actually reporting referral statistics to HFL Headquarters, it was estimated that total sales generated was in excess of $120 million.

"Having affiliated HFL members in more than 8,000 communities means that Bertha Gally Inc. can facilitate transferring families' needs by directly contacting HFL members in other cities. At the same time with roughly one-fourth of transferees today moving across state lines, we continually assist persons moving to the Ulster County area through HFL members in other cities assisting families moving to our area, Gally said.

The Homes for Living magazine, the exclusive photo listing magazine of each HFL member, reached a combined monthly circulation in excess of 750,000 during 1974. The magazine, which is exclusive in the Ulster County area, depicts photos, prices and descriptions of homes available here.

Gally noted with pride the quality of HFL members nationally. "Again in 1974, 20 per cent of all presidents of state Realtor associations were HFL Network members. I am proud, as I know all our members are, for the quality of HFL members and the total services we provide the American public."

Are you minding your own business?

Eventually, your business, like everyone else's will require disposition in one of these ways:

- 1) Willed to heirs
- 2) Acquired by associates
- 3) Sold to employees
- 4) Purchased by competitors
- 5) Liquidated by estate

There are many problems as well as considerable expense when business assets have to be sold or transferred to a new owner. Business history shows that when a business is eventually transferred, it may suffer loss in value from taxes, administrative costs, decline in market value, etc. Without careful planning a business will be worth far less to heirs than to you as a going concern.

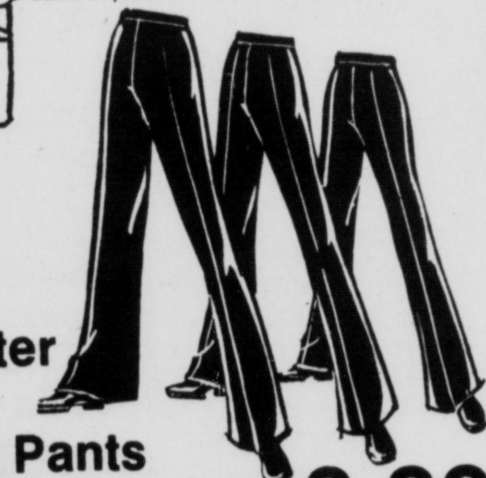

The right kind of Business Life Insurance planning eliminates many of these problems, regardless of the final method of disposition . . . and results in greater asset value for your family. So, if you are minding your own business, why not find out about Business Life Insurance.

Zoning Change proposed

GARDINER

The Gardiner Rod and Gun Club has announced its opposition to a zoning change request that would permit development of part of the 3,000-acre Minnewaska resort.

Claiming that any development in the area could jeopardize the environment and natural resources of the Shawangunk Mountains, the club has suggested that the state condemn the land in question and add it to the existing state park system.

Kenneth Phillips Sr., president of Lake Minnewaska Mountain Houses Inc., has applied for zoning changes that would permit construction of about 400 housing units on the land. He also seeks to establish two high-way business zones along Route 44-55.

Some of those who oppose the plans claim that the additional housing units would add another 2,400 residents to the area.

Calling Phillips' plan "extensive and grandiose," the Gardiner sportsmen stated that, "This development, situated next to the Mohonk trust lands and the Minnewaska State Park, would stand out in blatant contradiction to the purpose and intent of a Forever Wild Park Area."

"For some, a mountain lit with neon will undoubtedly bring visions of gold; and many will respond to the siren song of jobs, progress, economic salvation and the convenience of a service station lavatory. The realization of this development would create numerous problems and, in fact, augment existing problems in some of the nearby communities."

Specifically, the club noted that the additional private homes would have a severe impact on the already overburdened landfills in the townships that surround the Minnewaska area. And the club warned that the "problems of sewage and water demand careful examination" because the National Park Service has termed the soil in that area "extremely fragile."

The sportsmen also pointed out that attempts to reintroduce the rare peregrine falcon to the Shawangunk Mountain area could be jeopardized if the proposed development is approved.

In a letter addressed to the town boards in Gardiner and Rochester, as well as the Ulster County Planning Board, the rod and gun club states, "there are a wealth of subtle and complex factors linked to the fate of these mountains, and we wish to encourage their utmost scrutiny in deciding for us and our children the future of the area."

Almost 7,000 acres of Minnewaska land were purchased by the state in 1970 for use as a state park. The sportsmen suggest that the state purchase another 3,000 acres to further protect the area from development.

Phillips has stated that the proposed development is necessary to guarantee the economic viability of the Minnewaska corporation. He has pointed out that taxes have increased from $26,000 to more than $111,000 during the past 10 years. —Both the Rochester Town Board and the Rochester Planning Board have deferred action on the zoning change request pending further study. The Ulster County Planning Board has delayed its recommendations and decisions until March.

The Federated Sportsmen's Clubs of Ulster County, the Rondout Valley Rod and Gun Club and a number of environmentalists and private citizens have previously stated opposition to the Minnewaska proposals.

Bride and Groom Bolster a Sagging Economy Year after Year

By Dorothy A. Narel
LIFE Editor

The vision of beauty in a white gown walking down the aisle on her father's arm may not look like it but she is the symbol of an $8 billion market. According to experts, there were an estimated 2,307,000 weddings last year—there will be more this year and more than 75 per cent of them will be first marriages.

With the record number of weddings taking place, it doesn't seem brides or bridegrooms are anguishing over inflation, rising unemployment figures or the deep recession. Couples today are following through with their plans for a formal wedding and reception and beginning married life in their own home (if they can get a mortgage), an apartment, even a luxury trailer.

While married couples may be angry about increased costs of food, utilities and gasoline, the bride and groom are accepting inflationary prices as a way of life. They simply don't have a choice. They must make the major purchases for their first home even though many of the luxuries will be supplied by family and friends as shower or wedding gifts.

In all, the total cost of weddings and receptions this year will be $2 billion, according to one trade source.

The tip of this economic iceberg is the very visible wedding gown and the attendants' dresses. Contrary to beliefs, the bride today is just as traditional as her parents could wish. She is spending an average of $243 on her gown, judging from the national figures, and this is up more than 100 per cent from a decade ago.

Locally, designer Carl Rea tells us a bride does far better for a complete bridal ensemble, that includes everything except undergarments, costs an average $200. Our area brides can expect to pay an average of $145-185 just for a gown but the "bread and butter" price range, according to the local industry, is anywhere from $89-$379.

Receptions, which vary in style from one part of the country to another, from formal sit down dinners in the northeast to champagne punch and wedding cake in some parts of the south, average out to $721. Yet, parents of 21 per cent of the brides who have receptions spend anywhere from $1,000-3,000 and more. You have to decide how plush is plush going to be.

Another fact on the wedding scene these days is that "family" living is not yet outmoded. During the 1960's many parents feared their offspring were ready to chuck the family unit as a way of life and with it all the familiar trappings. However, facts diminish the feverish talk of young women going it alone, communal living, and more singular one-to-one arrangement. These are still in the minority. All indications, according to one authority, point to more new household formations during the 1970's than in any other decade in the country's history.

Our young adults many

Our young adults may be more relaxed and more permissive about social mores but, despite all, they still have their feet planted firmly on the ground.

Flower Children Have Come and Gone; Couples Share Duties

The "unrealistic" children about whom most adults worried while the children were in their teens, seem to know where they are going and what it costs to get there. The flower children have come and gone and successive generations now seem to appear with alarming frequency, each somewhat altered from the preceding one.

A major factor for the "difference" in today's couples is that the average bride and bridegroom are usually independent wage earners and somewhat older by the time they exchange wedding vows. Today's couple can wait until they can afford to begin their future as man and wife in the lifestyle they choose.

Two economically-independent individuals can save towards a house, more vacations that could be as exciting as honeymoons, and purchase the latest electronic devices for their households in line with their own time tables. When they decide to have a child, they will plan for that event. Today, the belief is that young marrieds will keep their families down to zero population. However, they will become a family and their children will be wanted when they arrive.

At the moment, it appears that young men and women planning marriage are as materialistic as their parents. They want to "get ahead" and they will both work towards success. More and more brides are continuing to work after marriage. The double income insures economic safety particularly in this day and age.

Women's Lib, which has permeated most consciousness, frees both the bride and the bridegroom to work and to share. The man no longer has to be the lone provider unless the couple wants it to be that way. The woman, on the other hand, is no longer forced to feel that cooking and cleaning must be her "career."

The income of these young, better educated workers, both male and female, has shot up more than 100 percent since 1955, statistics indicate. This, coupled with planned families, means that given the right circumstances couples can save for the future even as they spend at the moment. Apart from their home, they will continue to enjoy the pleasures which entertained them before marriage. The campers, skiers, sports enthusiasts, art and music lovers will continue their interests some maintaining separate interests as well. This type of independence provides healthy atmosphere in which marriages can grow.

In today's marriage picture is the significant fact that $6 billion will be spent on furnishing first homes or apartments. At a time when a great many established families are delaying a new major purchase because of economic uncertainty, the bride and groom of the 70's are moving ahead just as one might expect of children raised in an affluent society. They are not frightened by crop failures and the increased cost of meats and utilities, they seem to pay no attention to Dow-Jones averages. All they know is that they must furnish their first home and they either have the money or the credit rating that will enable them to do it.

The days when newlyweds were satisfied or made do with had-me-downs and happily turned orange crates into bookcases or coffee tables seems to be dead. It seems to be a case of: they want what they want when they want it.

Understandably, their buying spree is out of proportion to their numbers. Manufacturers however, and retailers know the bride is providing an economic booster shot to their businesses that cannot be ignored.

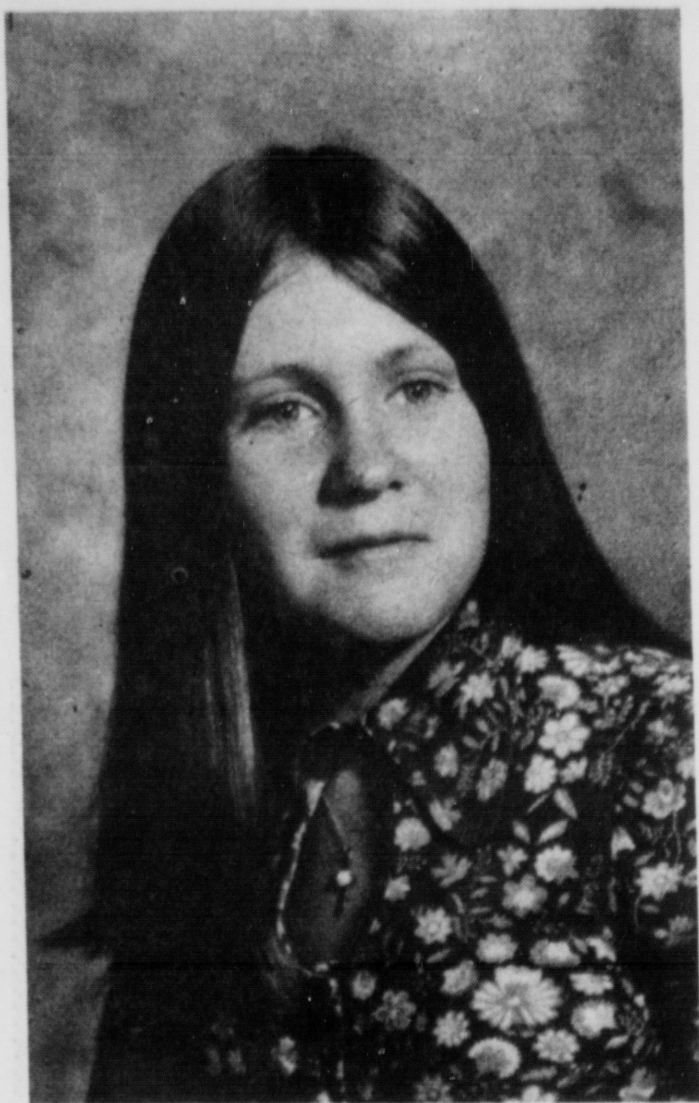

Now that the "flower children" have more or less faded from the scene, adults will find the newlyweds are more alive to what the union of two people really means. If the young people of today are of good conscience, they will work at their marriage. Many, starting with the wedding ceremony, will display a sense of creativity. They will have a voice in the shaping of wedding vows with the approval of most clergymen of all faiths. Priests, ministers and rabbis are of the opinion the more couples get involved in the service, the more they will understand the deep-rooted meanings handed down century after century. They will also understand, many feel, that modernizing a ceremony does not altar basic marriage ideals or principles.

The majority of today's couples share duties and responsibilities in the home and outside and acknowledge traditions with but one difference—everything gets their own distinct personal stamp.

MRS. ROBERT E. AMBROSE
(Deborah F. Keddy)
(Lakeside Studio)

Deborah Keddy Weds Robert Ambrose

Deborah F. Keddy, daughter of Mrs. Audrey M. Keddy of 412 Albany Avenue, Kingston, became the bride of Robert E. Ambrose, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emilio Ambrose of 152 Foxhall Avenue, Kingston.

The Rev. James Derrenbacher officiated at the ceremony February 22 at St. Mary's Church in Kingston.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Daniel Moulton. She selected a gown of white Dutchess satin with a shaped and modified Empire bodice featuring a high sheer neckline and long tapered sleeves. Re-embroidered Alencon lace in floral motif with seed pearls trimmed the sheer yoke on the bodice and created the stand-up collar. Similar lace shaped the midriff of the front bodice and edged the sleeves. Hand-clipped appliques accented the A-line skirt and similar lace bordered the hemline which swept back to form an attached cathedral length train. She wore a crescent of matching fabric applique with seed pearls to which was shirred her cathedral length, lace-edged mantilla. LuAnn Whalen served as honor attendant in a gown of royal velvet, fashioned with a shaped Empire bodice in modified halter design with a high neckline, and A-line skirt.

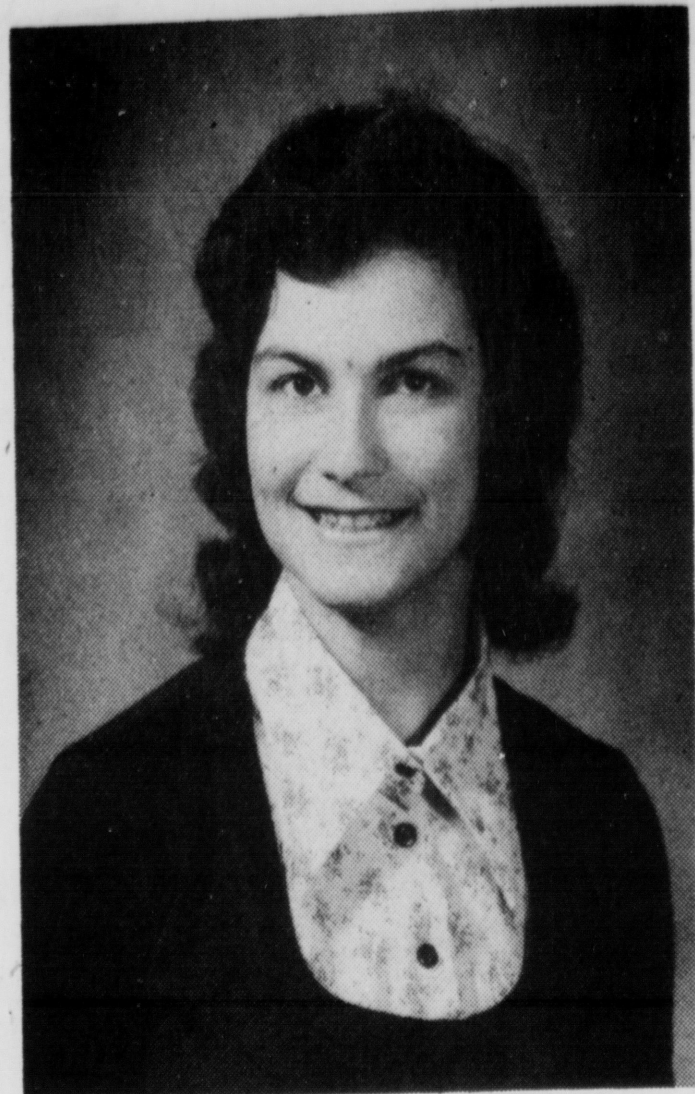

A wide applique of hand-clipped Venice lace in ivory created a bib effect on the front bodice. Narrow Venice trim accented the high collar. An ensemble look was created with an Empire length jacket designed in matching fabric and trimmed with narrow Venice lace.

Liz Ambrose, sister of the bridegroom; Pam Keddy, sister of the bride; and Debbie Boughton, served as attendants. Their sugarbeet velvet gowns were identical in styling to the honor attendant's.

John Duire of Foxhall Avenue, Kingston, served as best man. Ushering were James Barnes, Russell Kell and Richard Ambrose, all of Kingston.

A reception was given at The Hedges in West Park. The bride, a graduate of Rondout Valley High School, class of 1973, was formerly employed as assistant manager at Continental Restaurant in Kingston.

Her husband, an alumnus of Kingston High School, class of 1973, is attending Albany Business College, and is employed at National Commercial Bank and Trust Company. Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose will reside in Albany.

Benton-Simmons

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Benton, Lindorf Street, Port Ewen, announce the engagement of their daughter, Bonnie Lee, to James Patrick Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Simmons, 88 Livingston Street, Saugerties.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Kingston High School, attended Hope College in Holland, Mich., and is now employed by the Rondout National Bank in Port Ewen.

Her fiancé, an alumnus of Saugerties High School and Ulster County Community College, is employed as a bookkeeper by Statewide Savings and Loan in Kingston.

A November 8 wedding is planned.

Pertinent Facts for All Engaged Couples Regarding Marriage Licensing Procedures

Whether the bride-to-be and her fiancé have decided on their marriage date, selected their wedding finery and even put a down payment on their honeymoon cottage, unless they have followed the marriage licensing procedures to the letter of the law, there is a very real possibility their wedding will not take place on the date anticipated.

In order to avoid last minute disappointments, the Life Department offers to engaged couples the following essential information regarding Domestic Relations Law, received from the state health commissioner's office, with updating changes confirmed by Louis DeCicco, Kingston City Clerk.

Persons planning to marry in New York State must have had a blood test at least 10 days before the wedding. The increase in the previous three-day pre-ceremony waiting period was one of several changes in the State's marriage laws.

The blood test for syphilis must still be performed within 30 days of applying for the license.

The 24-hour waiting period after the license is issued remains unchanged. A person under 18 years of age must have parental consent before a marriage license can be issued.

Town justices and village justices may officiate at the wedding of persons who are 18 or over. The age of consent for males and females has been reduced from 21 to 18. Persons under age 18 must have written parental permission and parents must be present at the ceremony.

Written permission and the presence of parents is not required if the minors are married by a minister of any religion, a leader of the Society for Ethical Culture, a city mayor, a justice or judge of a court of record, city court, or district court, or city clerks of cities of over 1,000,000 population.

Marriage licenses may be obtained at the city or town clerk's office.

It is suggested that persons having questions regarding marriage licensing procedures or those in need of additional information should contact the Kingston city clerk's office.

Theberge-Graham

The engagement of Donna Lee Theberge of Red Hook to Joseph C. Graham III of Tivoli has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Theberge of 8 Bard Avenue, Red Hook. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Graham Jr. of 52 North Road, Tivoli.

The bride-elect, a graduate of Red Hook High School, class of 1971, received an AA degree in Liberal Arts at Dutchess Community College in 1974. She is now attending Dutchess Community College and plans to graduate in June with an AAS degree in Secretarial Science.

Her fiancé, also an alumnus of Red Hook High School, class of 1971, is a senior at Cornell University. He will receive a Bachelor of Science degree in Industrial and Labor Relations in December.

An August 16 wedding is planned.

Our Clergymen Speak About Marriage

Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool, Pastor Emeritus, Old Dutch Church.

Modern marriage is a mess but it is the best arrangement we have for this domestic relationship. Many say that something better is coming but cannot agree on what it is.

The current condition is a critical one. Many marriages are muddles; more are miseries; only a few are masterpieces. Causes of the breakdown are many. Many enter into the bond not expecting it to last. They are like the cynic who greeted a newly married young couple saying, "congratulations on your first marriage."

Also, some contract themselves in marriage for the wrong reasons. They marry for economic, social or inheritance aims.

Our fast changing, secular culture has an enormous disturbing impact upon marriage. Yeasty unrest, unfeeling spiritual faith, lowered standards, increasing economic pressure, corrosive cynicism tell terribly on marriage. Attractive digressions, tempting alternatives, exciting adventures beseech couples, convincing some; honestly confusing others on what is right or wrong. Life is complex, contradictory today, making it harder to know the truth and to live in harmony. Permissiveness is popular. The prevailing standard is not in its moral or legal but in its operational and can you get away with it.

Ignorance is also involved in the marriage muddle. There is a lack of adequate preparation. Most people are not grown up, for all their size and age. They are immature emotionally, intellectually, socially and religiously. They are adolescent adults. No longer do they play with toys but they do with life.

Marriage is a calling from God. It is not just a union of two persons who give up their individual selfishness in the interest of a mutual selfishness. Rather it is the response of two persons to achieve their destiny by a mutual, life-long dedication to each other and their children.

This reality gives marriage a special beauty and dignity which sets it apart from anything like a career or profession which are basically self-centered.

By its very nature marriage is a way of life involving a pattern of duties and responsibilities. It involves and requires the expression of love, psychological and physical and without this a marriage will fail or create deep unhappiness.

The reason many marriages fail today is because so many people have no true idea of what love really is. Love is not sex. It's a part of love a means toward love but love is far stronger. Love is self-seeking. It does not use the beloved. What then is love? It is the thinking, willing Suggestions for solutions are obvious. A happy, lasting marriage is not something ready made. It has to be made. It doesn't just happen. It has to be achieved through effort. You have to constantly work at it. Rather than 'falling in love', you climb into love. Walking different paths, from different origins and backgrounds, a couple meet in the lottery of life and are drawn into the chemistry of marriage where it takes a lifetime of doing to make it go. From the start there must be a determination to see it through. Give up any thought of a temporary arrangement. Aim at permanence "for better or for worse."

An underlying adequate philosophy of life is essential. More than a civil contract or license, witnesses and promises, marriage is a sacrament with real meaning, priceless values and lasting concerns. Besides the fulfillment of personal desires, social implications are present. The social order and natural rights have a stake in marriage. The evolution of life to its finest, fullest, freest form is the larger goal.

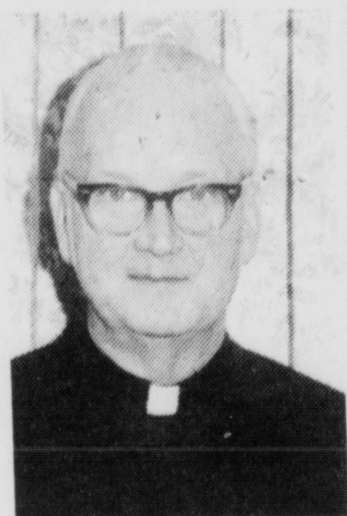

One must be realistic as well as idealistic about marriage. It is not all smooth sailing. We start off thinking of it as all roses and romance, forgetting the rough places along the way. Much risk and failure is mixed with pleasantness and success. There are pains as well as gains. We must not expect too much to do too little. Each partner must take equal share in the work and responsibility. Its a fifty-fifty proposition, calling for the adjustment of differing ideas, habits, likes and dislikes. Honest and kindly communication is necessary. Talk out differences calmly, reasonably. Practice give and take. Mutuality is a key.

A marriage may be holy wedlock, or an unholy deadlock — it depends on whether our life is outgoing or ingrowing.

and doing for the good of another. Love gives freely. Love is responsible, it is respectful and compassionate. Love is also exclusive and involves risks.

Marriage without this type of love will never succeed. It is not a way of life for the emotionally immature or the selfish. It is the serious yet happy business of life for the perceptive, understanding man and woman.

In these days of 1975, because too many get married looking for what they can get rather than what they can give — they are dooming their marriages to disaster before they even begin them.

Msgr. Robert B. Loftus, pastor, St. John's R.C. Church, West Hurley and Vicar of Ulster County.

Rabbi Jonathan Eichhorn, Temple Emanuel, Kingston

Judging by all available indications, the institution of marriage seems to be in deep trouble. The rising rates of divorce, separation and marital conflict are clear signs that the hopes and expectations of married couples are often not being met. Many marriage counselors and clergymen agree that only about twenty per cent of all marriages today could be considered "successful." This means that four out of five marriages eventually develop into a disappointing and often disillusioning relationship. More than ever before, couples are marrying and failing to find the fulfillment and personal satisfaction they seek.

There are a number of factors responsible for this rather dismal state of affairs. Perhaps the most significant is the misconception couples have concerning "being in love." Given the high rate of unsuccessful marriages, it is obvious that most married persons do not ever really love, each other, for it is highly unusual to "fall out of love." Real mature love is a very precious achievement, not easily attainable. It normally takes years of mutual personal growth. Once attained, it is not easily lost. Instead of being in love, most newly married individuals are infatuated; infatuated with themselves, or with the other person, or with the idea of love itself. It is not difficult to understand how such self-delusion can lead to inevitable discord and disharmony in the marriage relationship. Despite this pessimistic assessment of contemporary marriage, there is another side to the picture. Some marriages, thank goodness, do turn out well! And hopefully, the number of successful unions will increase in the years ahead. For love and marriage do offer the potential for a wonderful, wholesome sense of spiritual attainment unknown in any other human endeavor. Marriage provides the best opportunity to live by the beautiful Jewish principle that the key to finding real personal happiness is life lies in making other people happy. For in no other human situation do individuals have such a golden opportunity to realize the validity of this profound truth.

Although good, solid marriages are not easy to attain, with a real effort, and a "a little bit of luck," they will be around for a long time to come.

The marriage of Miss Mary Rose Nanna, daughter of V�ndura Nanna, 65 South Manor Avenue and the late Dominica Nanna, to P.F.C. Matthew Anthony Pisano, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pasquale Pisano, 45 Levan Street, took place in St. Joseph's R.C. Church, Saturday, Nov. 3, 1951, at 2 p.m. The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Stephen P. Connelly, pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory dutchess satin fashioned with a shaped and modified Empire bodice, high neckline and long Juliette sleeves. Peau d'ange lace accented the bodice and accented the mandarin collar which was trimmed with seed pearls. The A-line skirt featured a double border of matching lace. She wore a Juliette-designed bonnet accented with lace and seed pearls to which was shirred her cathedral 1-length, lace-edged mantilla.

self-control is always vital, the discipline of self. If you cannot have what you want, suffer a little. It builds strength and character. Sublimate your frustrations. If you cannot have your first choice, always a second is available. Ignore most irritations. Forgive and forget. All have their weaknesses. A husband wears no halo and a wife has no wings of an angel. Practice patience, kindness, and goodwill. Agree to disagree understanding and a sense of humor. The art of marriage consists in not only marrying the right person but also in being the right person.

A happy marriage seeks union, no uniformity of personalities. Each partner is free as well as subjugated; independent and interdependent; unique and united. Marriage is a comradeship of equals where each contributes of its own. One complements the other. It's fusion, not friction. You see your need of the other. Empathy is required, putting yourself in the other person's place and getting his point of view. Don't wait for feeling to motivate. Often feeling follows action. The monotony of monogamy disappears when husband and wife grow together as they live together.

DEAR SIMON: I'm getting married and I'm hassled over my music for my wedding. I want "If" by Bread for my first dance. I want to do "bumps". I want to hear some of the old Beatles from the 60's and want to sing along to my old favorites from the 50's. But my parents, who have never left the Big Band Era, think Bread is something to eat, a bump is something you get when you fall, Beatles are what invade their roses. They insist on Glenn Miller alone! Help! What can I do to keep us all happy on my wedding day???— Confused in Kingston.

New Bridal Fashions Are Now Individualistic

BY MARIAN CHRISTY

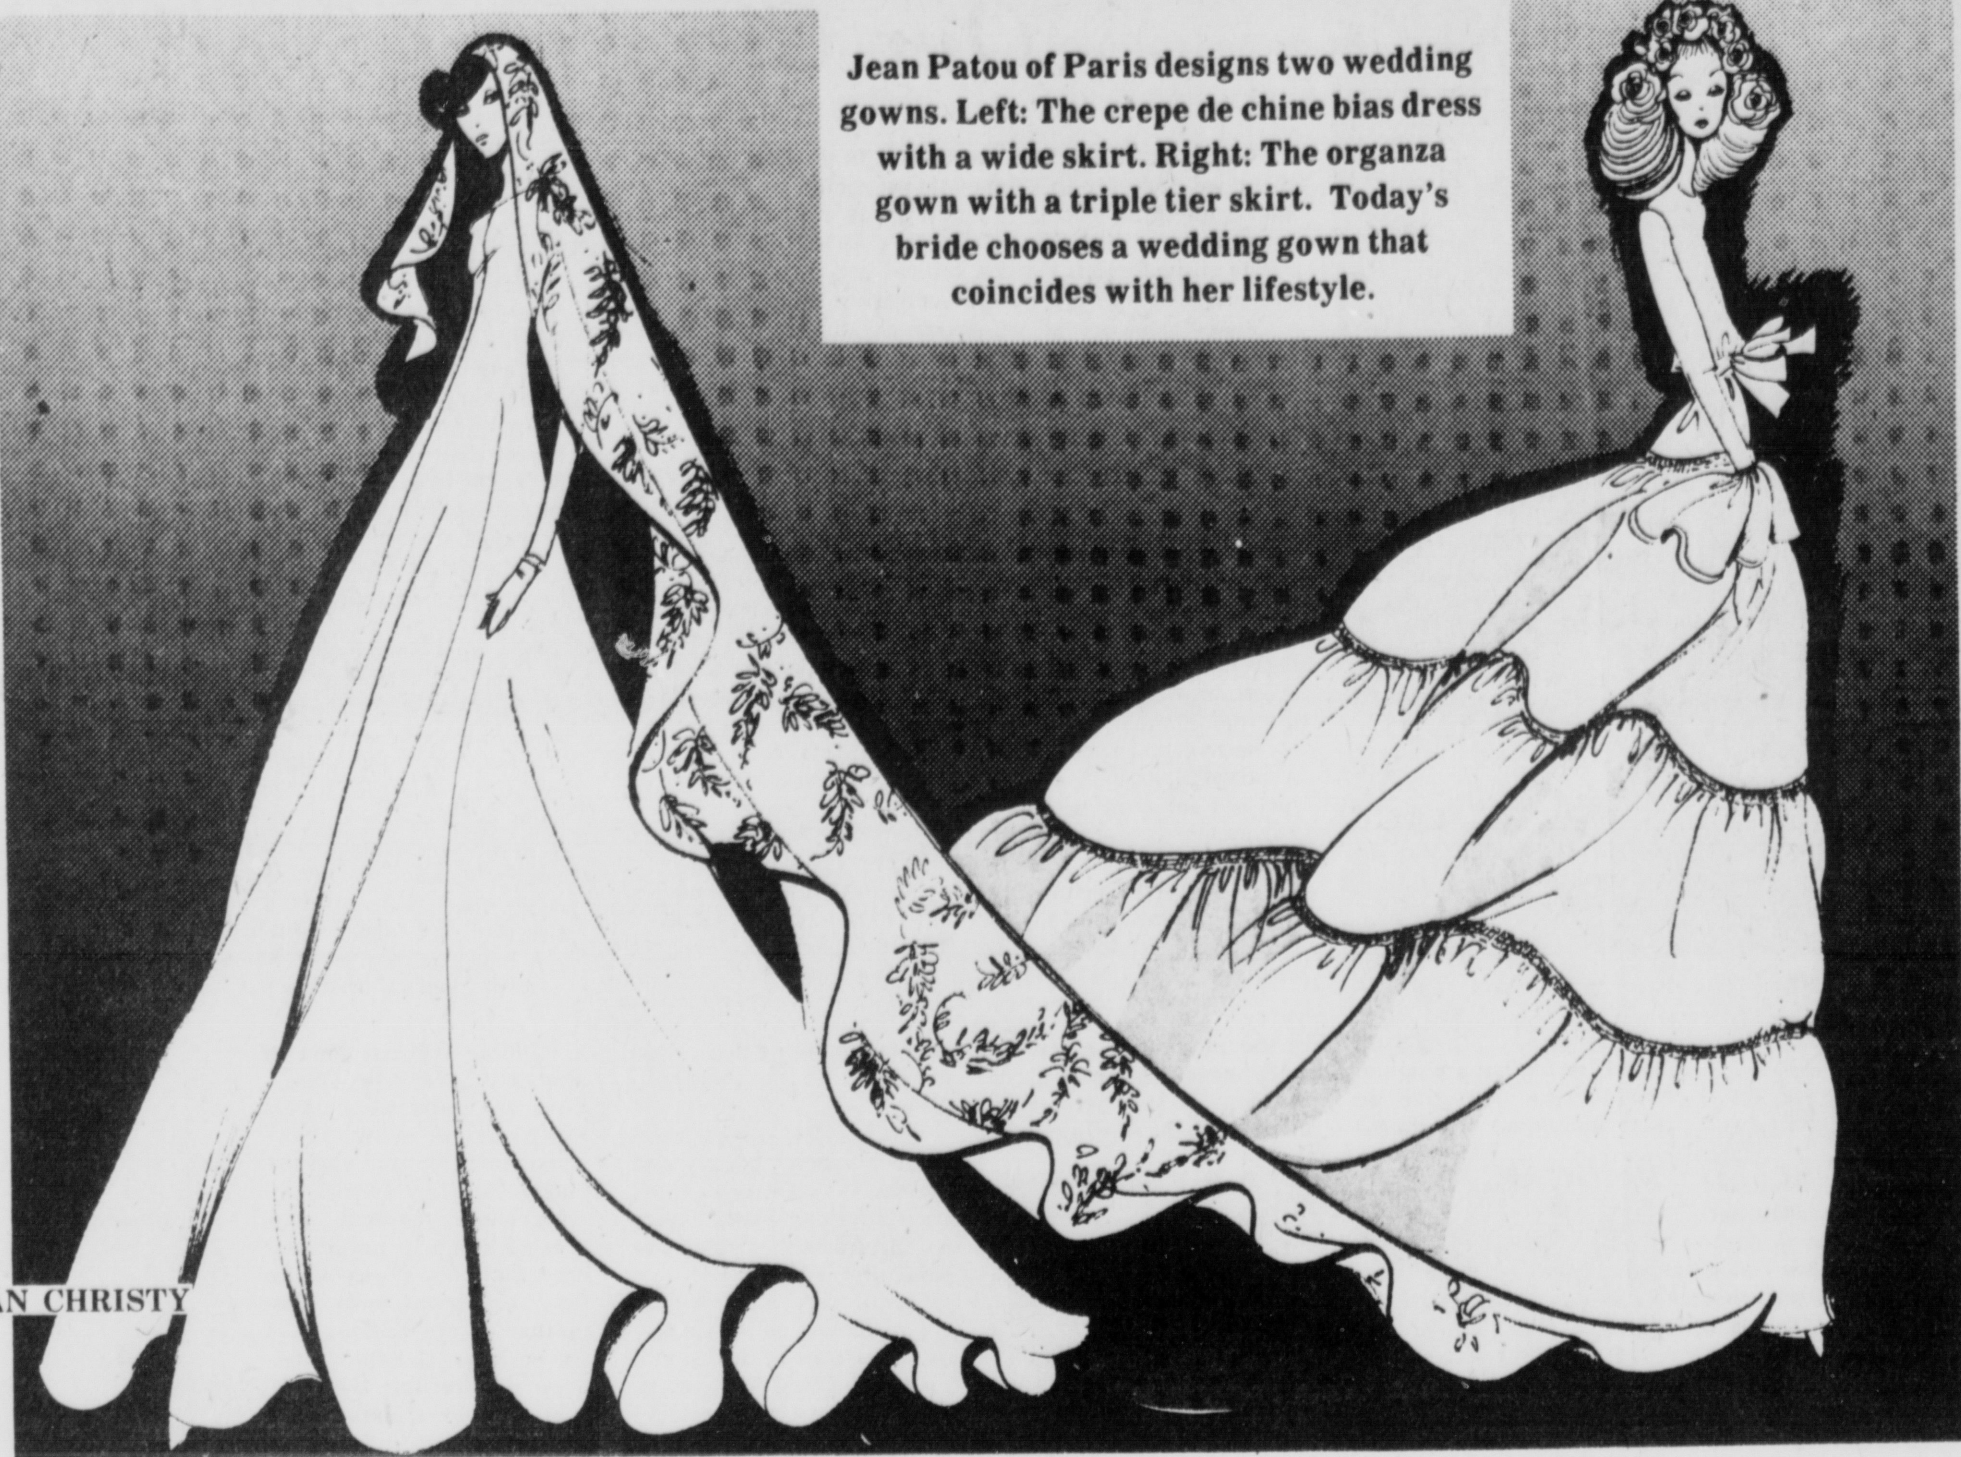

There's a new twist to wedding gown fashions. More and more top designers are now talking about how bridal fashions should relate to the self-image and lifestyle of the couples exchanging those "I-do's."

There's no one kind of bride so there can't be one trend in bridal wear," says Barbara Donovan Tober, editor-in-chief of Bride's Magazine. "A bride should choose a gown on the basis of how she sees herself on her wedding day and in her future."

Never before has there been a greater diversity of styles for spring-summer 1975 weddings. Brides now make choices of wedding fashions based on their sense of individuality rather than fashion dictates.

If you're that kind of a woman, think in terms of a Scarlett O'Hara-inspired bridal gown made from dotted swiss, organza or organdy. Bridal couture designer, Frank Masandrea, has done a series of gowns with low necks, pinched waistlines and full hoop-exaggerated skirts.

Some traditionalists lean toward the country wedding dresses that suggest keeping family customs of the past. These are "peasant" peasant-y in spirit and usually have puff sleeves, apron effects and bonnets dripping ribbons.

Designers talk more and more about the black bride achieving a new prominence. "The black bride is definitely coming into a new era," says Ms. Tober. "She has moved into affluent, middle-class American Society." According to Ms. Tober, the black bride is the "Ultimate Traditionalist" who generally shows definite preference for the classic wedding gown—namely the A-line empire with long, slim sleeves.

She says: "The black wants to blur into the solidarity of the Establishment image. Her choice of fashion reflects that cultural attitude."

Suppose you're a bride for the second or third time? Suppose you're over-30 — or older?

If these descriptions fit you, why not opt for the glamorous, the offbeat, the original, the sophisticated wedding gown? Designers who create gowns in this spirit know that this bride wants something "superchic" that can be worn often rather than "once."

A New York bridal firm called "A Time For Us" has created a re-embroidered lace gown that combines a slinky riding jacket with a strapless dress that later goes to formals. Other wedding gown collections feature long, flowing matte jersey capes to top scooped-necked dresses with tier skirts. This type of bridal gown is seasonless and will wend its way to many formal parties in your future.

"The bride who's starting married life over again does so with a great rush of enthusiasm," says Ms. Tober. "But, because of her experiences, she has a very definite idea of herself. However, she still wants the regular choreography of a wedding — the costume, the toast, the participants and the sharing of food and drink which connotes her new-found sense of happiness."

Fashions for bridesmaids follow these same patterns. The big news is that the bridesmaid gown is more of a "regular gown" than merely a one-time "member of the wedding dress." Very new and very modern are off-the-shoulder ruffled gowns translated from a peasant's costume. Many are done in soft pastels, English floral bouquets, calico checks and plaids.

Other bridesmaids gowns feature V-necklines, capelet sleeves and easy skirts. For the more tailored types of bridesmaids, there are coattresses that could easily be shortened for street wear.

Not-so-incidentally, as part of the Bicentennial influence, there are Victorian bridal gowns that are Puritan in feeling. Most have high necklines, puff sleeves, empire waists and bias-cut skirts. Instead of a headpiece, the bride wears a tiny baby's cap that ties on under the chin.

"But," says Ms. Tober, "that goes back to the point about certain types of brides wearing particular looks. Victorian gowns are for the traditionalist who wants what has been before."

Grooms have been disenchanted with being the "after-thought" in the wedding. Weddings represent togetherness. The enlightened attitude is obvious in new wedding invitations both the bride's and the groom's parents join in announcing the upcoming nuptials.

A wedding isn't the bride and the bride alone. No longer is it assumed that the bride is being given to the groom—period. Each is marrying the other. This liberated view represents a great sense of unity.

The new attitude is reflected in what the groom wears. Instead of being a "backdrop" to the bride, he has become a major figure. The groom now wears, for example, a light blue tuxedo with velvet lapels for the pastel summer wedding. An all-white wedding with the groom wearing a white tuxedo is very new — and very smart for an outdoor garden wedding.

If the groom prefers, he can wear classic black tuxedo pants with a colored dinner jacket. The color chosen might be of special romantic significance to him and his bride.

Today's usher often wears a jacket that is the same color as the bridesmaid he is escorting. Very fashionable is the rainbow wedding party where each usher wears a different color jacket that coordinates with the individual colors of the bridesmaids' gowns.

If it all sounds too expensive, consider having ushers wear white jackets and colored shirts that coordinate with the bridesmaids' gowns.

The point: The social structure has changed. So has the fashion.

Second Time Around Poses Some Problems

By ELIZABETH L. POST

Getting married for the second time often poses more problems than the first wedding does. The following letter asks many of the most common questions all at once, so I'm sure it will be a help to many of you "second-time" brides.

Dear Mrs. Post: I was married when I was very young. I have since been divorced and have taken back my maiden name. I'm now 28. I am to be married early next summer and would like to start making plans, but I'm unsure of the proper way to proceed. My fiancé and I would like to have an afternoon wedding, and we would appreciate the answers to the following questions:

1. May I wear a long dress? I know I can't wear white.

A. A long dress, certainly. It may be off-white, a pastel shade under white organza or lace or white with color in trim and flowers.

2. What should the groom and his attendants wear?

A. Same as any groom. Sack coat and striped trousers or white pants and navy blazer, depending on the formality of the setting. His attendants wear the same type of clothes.

3. How many attendants may we have?

A. Attendants should be limited to a maid of matron of honor and a best man. If enough guests are invited to the church to warrant it, the groom may have one or two ushers to help seat the guests.

4. Type of bridal music?

A. Anything you like as long as it is acceptable to your clergyman and the organist.

5. How large a reception? May we have a bridal dance?

A. As large as you wish. Certainly you may have dancing.

6. May we have a regular wedding cake? What type of top should we have for the cake?

A. Again, yes. My personal preference is fresh flowers for the top of the cake, but a wedding bell or other ornament may appeal to you more.

My booklet, "How to Plan and Budget Your Wedding," is ideal for brides-to-be, their fiancés and parents in helping to prepare for the "perfect" wedding. To get a copy, send 50 cents in coins to cover booklet and mailing expenses to Elizabeth L. Post in care of this newspaper.

Trial 'Marriage' An Ancient Custom

Not tying the knot? Not all that strange, when you look at customs of the distant past. For instance, an ancient Celtic tradition involved not only the trial marriage concept, but also the prewedding honeymoon.

Young men and women gathered on opposite sides of a high wall, not able to view one another. Then, each woman would thrust her hand through a small hole in the wall, and her (hopefully) "intended" would grasp it on the other side. (How important hands are, after all!)

At any rate, the couple was required to live together only for a year and a day. If they decided they didn't want to make a permanent relationship, a deed of separation was obtained, and no hurt feelings. The records do not mention any results of this getting-together, but considering the times, no doubt, if anyone suffered, it was the unwed "bride." No offense, fellas. That's the way it was apt to be, in those days, among most ethnic groups.

How to Plan Your Wedding Photography In Advance

Your wedding is a very special day full of happy memories for the rest of your lifetime. You can relive each moment of that great occasion through photographs.

But planning the right photographs in advance is the only way to preserve those memories, advises the Professional Photographers of America, Inc.

For the best results, you should plan your album several months before the wedding. Arrange a meeting with your photographer to discuss what photographs you want taken. He or she will have many suggestions to add to your ideas, so that you have a very complete record of the wedding.

Two important elements of your album are your formal bridal portrait and your wedding candid.

Formal portraits may be made of the bride alone, or may also include the wedding group or the bride and groom together. There is no longer any "taboo" against having the groom see his bride in her wedding gown before the ceremony. Instead, it is more sensible to pose them together in advance so they are both fresh and relaxed.

You should schedule your formal bridal portrait as early as possible before your wedding. A good time would be when your gown is ready. This gives you enough time to send prints to your newspapers. And your schedule will be less hectic then, so you will be able to look your best for your portrait.

Your photographer may suggest that your portrait be taken in a studio, where he or she has the proper equipment and lighting to give your portrait the best professional touches. When you come to the studio, bring the same underclothes you will wear on your wedding day, as well as the shoes, gloves, necklace, earrings, etc.

Make arrangements for your candid at the same time you plan your formal portrait. Your professional photographer will be able to offer many helpful suggestions about the scenes you'll want and the best way to get them without interrupting the smooth flow of the festivities.

The prospective bride, and perhaps her family too, will want to outline in advance just what pictures they wish taken and of whom. The photographer will also need to know how to assemble or identify family and friends. One suggestion is to arrange for a (younger) member of the family to act as a photographer's guide at the reception.

Tell your photographer the name of the church and the clergyman who will perform the ceremony. He can then contact the church in advance to learn what regulations may affect photographs in the church. Some churches do not permit flash photographs, for example, so the photographer will have to allow for time exposures or special fast film.

Organize every detail in advance and give specific instructions to the photographer as to special locations of the wedding party, etc. There's a world of difference between preplanned, professional coverage and shoot-from-the-hip amateur snapshooting.

It is a must that your wedding photographs, both portraits and candid, be mounted in a good sturdy album. They're a family treasure that you'll come back to again and again for the rest of your life. The photographer can show you sample albums from which to choose, as well as give you ideas on how many photographs should be included in the album.

Only a professional photographer can capture all the important details that make a wedding beautiful. You can't rely on "good old Uncle Harry" or other guests to carefully plan and take each photograph at the right time. A professional who has worked with many brides, grooms and their families knows each phase of the ceremony and all the events that follow.

CANDID photographs of your wedding ceremony and reception, taken by a professional photographer, are a 'must' for your wedding photography album. To recapture every moment of the day, plan your album several months before the wedding with your photographer.

Betrothals and Weddings Are Published FREE!

Contrary to what some people are led to believe, The Daily Freeman DOES NOT charge any fee for the publication of either an engagement or wedding announcement.

These announcements have always been published as a public service. There ARE certain regulations observed and these include:

- That photographs be black and white glossies;

- That, in the case of a wedding, the photograph be of the bride alone;

- And that wedding announcements must be submitted within 10 days after the ceremony.

Our policy regarding engagements and weddings is one of the most liberal in the newspaper industry for dailies. We ask, therefore, that out-of-area weddings be planned in accordance with the above-mentioned policy.

Since it is our sincere desire to aid in making your engagement announcement or wedding a memorable occasion, your cooperation will enable us to publish your picture and story as a record of this happy event.

Marriage Is a Sometimes Thing

French Couples Loosen the Ties That Bind

We Believe—that the "Mother of the Bride" should look just as lovely as the bride . . .

Our Mother of the Bride Dress Styles are proof of this statement!

1 main st.
kingston, n.y.

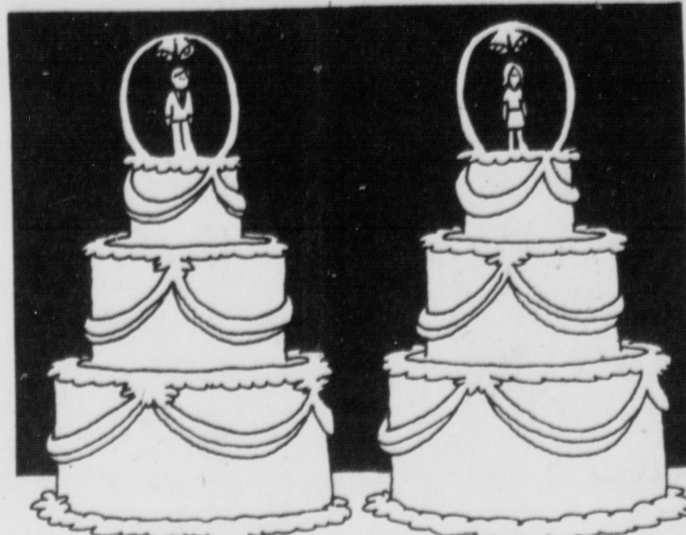

PARIS — (NEA) — The French have not waited for the current International Woman's Year or the growing influence of Women's Lib to ride roughshod over the observance of the once sacrosanct marriage ceremony.

Among the female minirevolutions of the last decade in this country is the tolerance of unmarried couples in present-day society, save in last-ditch conservative bourgeois circles and, strangely enough, among the working masses.

"Marriage," a current film produced by Claude Lelouch (an avant-gardist if there ever was one, illustrates somewhat mercilessly the process of dissatisfaction and disenchantment which so often takes place after, say, 10 years of married life. In 10 years, love has given way to egotism, intimacy to loneliness, bitter words to total unconcern. The only thing remaining is the marriage contract, middle-class "must" in France. Two other recent films on the same topic are just as cruel and pessimistic.

Figures always are eloquent. Each year the number of unmarried couples grows, ignoring what jurists and sociologists call the "marital institution." This is confirmed by the figures of the National Institute of Demographic Studies. In 1972, 417,000 marriages were registered; in 1973 this had fallen to 401,000. While figures for 1974 are not yet available, it is estimated that they will be around 390,000. Although not exactly a spectacular drop, as pointed out by the weekly magazine "LePoint," still it is continuous.

What is even more significant is that there seems to be a tendency towards the de-sanctification of marriage. For 41 per cent of Frenchmen, the civil and religious ceremonies are considered "mere formalities which society expects," according to a Ministry of Justice official.

Although the civil marriage in France is the only legally required tie, as in all Catholic countries the majority of couples hitherto were, this formality over, also married in church.

While so many rules and regulations today are apt to be bypassed, the not-so-young as well as the younger generation's attitude is: Why bother? Living together and achieving, if possible, a harmonious relationship is one thing. But the reaction is "no" to a formal tie.

The age group most convinced that the end of the marital institution is near seems to be the 20s plus. They are usually city dwellers with a reasonably high cultural leave. They are firm believers in complete individual freedom.

More and more young couples are living together without even attempting to conceal the fact. According to the Ministry of Justice, 66 per cent of Frenchmen either admire or recommend "trial marriage." Five years ago a poll of young men and women who proposed to be married in the Paris diocese favored premarital relations.

This does not mean that marriage is rejected altogether. Some "free love" couples even seem to consider it as an eventuality. Said 22-year-old Gerard A., medical student and 20-year-old secretary Jeanine S., who have been living together for over a year: "We just did not plan it. We had known each other in high school. One evening Gerard came to my rooms and did not go home. If we do marry one day it will be with our eyes wide open."

According to filmmaker Lelouch, it's the daily deadly routine that destroys a union. "No need to be intellectual giants, but simply blessed with an open mind and great curiosity about everything," he declares. "In a free union, it's the sense of constant insecurity which acts as a bond."

Most of the advocates of free union, however, change their turn when a child is expected. Here the question of security intervenes. Legally an unmarried girl in France has no rights at all, either to her share of her companion's estate or pension (unless he has made a will in her favor) nor to the many advantages available to a married woman under social insurance. Any children he may have had by a former marriage are entitled to a third of his estate.

Still another symptom of the times: In the professional classes where both man and woman have careers, free union presents few difficulties socially. Whereas their respective families and friends might once have refused to receive them together, this seldom happens today. It is only among the blue collar classes that women look upon marriage as an absolute necessity. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Gems Can Mean Anything From Friendship to Love

When you are engaged to wed, you usually receive a ring. When you wed, you will most likely exchange rings with your bridegroom.

Throughout the ages gems have had special meanings and histories when given as gifts of friendship or love, or any degree of affection in between.

History shows that Queen Elizabeth gave a handsome sardonyx ring to her favorite minister, the Earl of Essex, late in the 16th Century. For more than 2,000 years the beautiful, reddish sardonyx has been a recognized symbol of "warmest friendship." However, the Earl later organized troops to fight against the Queen's government and was imprisoned in the Tower of London. He tried to use the ring to appeal to the Queen, but lost his attempt, and also lost his head—to executioners.

According to the American

Gem Society, an international association of retail jewelry firms, a wide variety of gems are symbols of special feelings between humans.

A beautiful stone signifying a more platonic relationship is the garnet, which stands for true friendship and fidelity. Interestingly, a huge garnet was reputed by Talmudic legend to have provided the only light in Noah's Ark.

A more modern symbol of friendship is the moonstone, a precious form of feldspar in which a milky sheen plays across the stone like moonlight.

The topaz has stood for loyalty in friendship since earliest times and also has been reputed to cure insanity, asthma and insomnia, give strength and help the wearer avoid sudden death.

One of the richest signs of sincerity and faithfulness in friendship or in love—or both — is the sapphire, a precious form of the mineral corundum, found in colors and shades ranging from white to almost black, and including blue, violet, yellow and green, sometimes with a six-rayed star.

The American Gem Society reports the sapphire is one of the most imitated gems in existence. It urges shoppers to seek out a Registered Jeweler to make sure of getting an accurate identification on sapphires and other gems.

The ruby, like the sapphire, is a form of corundum, but the color is red. It often is used with diamonds in engagement rings.

The opal, currently enjoying a wave of great popularity, is known as the symbol of hope and often is used in engagement rings with diamonds or other stones.

The turquoise, currently one of the most popular stones in the United States, is reputed to bring success not only in love, but also in money.

Of course, one of the really romantic gems of the ages is the emerald, which is thought to bring happiness in love, bliss in married life and even safety in childbirth.

The amethyst, currently a very popular stone, also was well received by ladies of the Roman Empire, who believed it would insure their husbands' love.

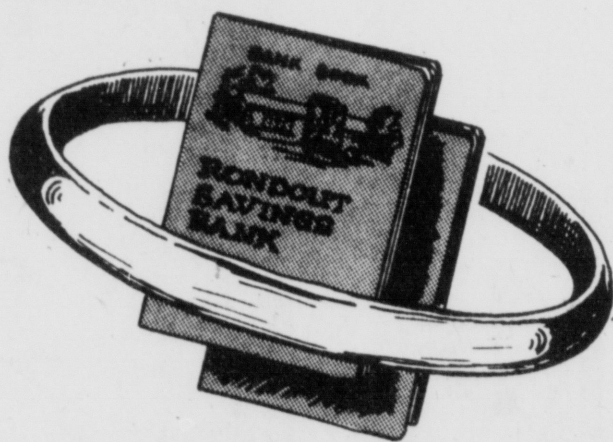

Pearls and peridots also are expressions of love and admiration.

Certainly, the most romantic of all gems are diamonds, at least to the Western civilization of modern times, which considers them the symbol of martial happiness and good luck.

All these gems are in use currently in the United States and enjoy a good measure of popularity.

Beautiful Bride Schedules Precious Time

The bride is always beautiful; everyone knows that. What isn't known is exactly how she manages it, considering the drama, the trauma, the exhausting days she spends before her wedding day.

The solution is simplicity itself: a practical, bride's guide that schedules her activities so she gets them done on time and enjoys herself all the while. After all, happiness is her privilege those busy, pre-wedding days.

To keep every bride frown-free and carefree right up to the altar, the Jewelry Industry Council recommends the following "calendar of events."

Three Months Before the Big Day

1. Decide upon the type of wedding, whether formal or informal.
2. Consult with your clergyman to arrange necessary details.
3. Make up your guest list, consult with the bridegroom's family.
4. Make arrangements for reception, catering and music.
5. Choose your bridal party; order your bridal gown and plan what the bridesmaids will wear.
6. Select your silver pattern as well as your china and crystal, and register your choices with your jeweler.
7. Decide on decor and furnishings for your new home or apartment.

Two Months Until W-Day

1. Order your invitations, announcements and personal stationery.
2. Buy now what you will need and use for your trousseau.
3. Set a date for wedding rehearsal and arrange for rehearsal supper.

One Month to Go

1. Address and mail invitations.
2. Buy gifts for attendants and bridegroom, and make plans for luncheon for your attendants.
3. Try to have your friends give showers now, and then finish your shopping for lingerie, linens and household furnishings.
4. Check up on outfits for bridal party, and have fittings on your wedding gown. Arrange for photographer to be present at final fitting.
5. Buy your bridegroom's wedding ring and he should get yours. Go with him to apply for a marriage license, and have the necessary pre-marital medical examinations.
6. Remind bridegroom to order boutonnieres and flowers for wedding party and for the two mothers.
7. Consult your caterer about reception menu and cake. Take up the matter of decoration with the florist.
8. Arrange for accommodations for out-of-town guests.

Just One Week Left

1. Send wedding announcements to the local papers, including the formal portrait that was taken at your final bridal gown fitting.
2. Check on the arrival of gowns, trousseau items.
3. Make a beauty shop appointment for wedding hair-do.
4. Have bridesmaids' luncheon.
5. Put your gifts on display. Be as prompt with your gift acknowledgements as you can.
6. Pack uncrushables when you have free time, and spend leisure time with your family.

The Day Before

1. Tell someone your honeymoon itinerary, and arrange for someone to check your new home while you are gone.
2. Go to hairdresser's early, and then to wedding rehearsal and dinner.
3. Check your luggage, and go to bed early.

Wedding Expenses — Who Pays for What?

The significance may be on sharing when today's couples exchange their vows. But who shares the wedding's expenses? Here's how it goes — and it looks like everyone gets a share of the bill!

The Bride

1. Her trousseau.
2. Wedding ring for her bridegroom.
3. Wedding gift for her groom (optional).
4. Presents for her attendants.
5. Accommodations for her attendants.
6. Personal stationery and calling cards.
7. Her medical examination.

8. If she is financially independent, the bride may assume any other of her family's traditional responsibilities.

The Bridegroom

1. Bride's engagement and wedding rings.
2. The marriage license.
3. Gift for the bride.
4. His medical examination.
5. Bride's bouquet and going-away corsage.
6. Boutonnieres for men of wedding party.
7. Flowers for the two mothers.
8. Gloves, ascots or ties for the men in the wedding party.

9. Gifts for his ushers and best man.
10. Accommodations for his best man and ushers.
11. Fee for the clergyman.
12. The wedding trip.
13. Flowers to the bride's mother after the wedding, accompanied by a warm, thank-you note.

The Bride's Family

1. Wedding invitations and enclosure cards.
2. Announcements.
3. Engagement and wedding photographs.
4. Rental for church.
5. Fees for the organist, soloist and sexton.
6. Aisle carpet.
7. Flowers for the church.

8. Bridesmaids' bouquets and flower headdress.
9. Gratuity for traffic policemen.
10. Transportation for bridal party from house to church and to the reception.
11. Bridesmaids' luncheon.
12. Entire cost of the reception.

The Bridegroom's Family

1. Clothes they wear to the wedding.
2. Any traveling expenses and hotel bills.
3. Wedding gift for the bride and bridegroom.
4. The dinner preceding or following the wedding rehearsal can be given by either the bride or bridegroom's family.

The Bride's Choice

Handcrafted American Glass

Brides have been receiving gifts of sparkling handcrafted American glass for years — for more than 200 years. Today's bride, circa 1975, can have that same sparkling glass so deeply rooted in America's past in reproductions of Early American designs or totally modern pieces.

Whatever the bride's style — traditional and Early American, sleek and modern, or an eclectic mix of both — a gift of American glass is a treasure trove reflecting America's past as well as making a bold statement for today's entertaining styles.

It was our forefathers' artistry and skill that shaped the history of American glass starting in 1608 when these settlers landed at Jamestown and built the first glass factory. This 17th century glass house, as it is historically called, was reconstructed by the Glass Crafts of America Association.

According to Glass Crafts, handcrafted American glass that dates back to the beginning of the 19th century is today's collectible because many of these pieces available in gift and department stores are created from molds designed in the 1870s.

There is lacy Sandwich glass brilliantly colored in ruby, olive and amber; intriguing milk glass pieces — bowls edged with dancing sailors and ring and petal designs or dishes covered with hens and rabbits; slag glass in swirling purples and brown made at the end of day by glass workers; and iridescent carnival glass so named because it was given away at local carnivals.

The original pitchers, punch bowls, candlesticks, goblets, compotes, and plates created from these famous types of glass command high prices by collectors, but the reproductions, ideal as gifts for brides, are moderately priced from $5.00 to $35.00.

The uniqueness of handcrafted American glass means that it has been blown or pressed by hand, be it antique crystal stemware, a pitcher, terrarium or candy dish. The hand-blown method probably started in Egypt and American glassmakers are still creating wine glasses, decanters, and compotes with the same care and craftsmanship practiced centuries ago. These beautifully blown pieces so much a part of young lifestyles are created with an iron blow pipe in the hands of a skilled glassblower assisted by a gatherer. As with the reproductions, modern pieces are moderately priced and readily available.

About 1825, American ingenuity created a way to shape designs by hand pressing molten glass into a mold with an iron former. Hand pressed glass has softly rounded outlines, often in eye-catching decorative patterns such as moon and star, daisy and button, bull's eye, and New England pineapple. In vibrant shades of ruby, olive, amber, and bright blue, hand pressed glass was originally intended as a substitute for the very expensive cut glass of the day, but these arresting patterns made it highly sought after.

The artistry of American glass lives on. From original pieces that command high prices by collectors, to the reproductions sought after by lovers of Americana, to clean lined wine glasses and decanters so much a part of today's entertaining, American handcrafted glass adds beauty and charm to any home.

Fashion and Beauty Tips

Soft and Summery

The soft skirt and tank top are the new combo that sportswear and ready-to-wear designers are showing for summer. It's done beautifully for 1975 summer collections by John Kloss, Calvin Klein and Geoffrey Beene.

Variations on a theme

Any one girl can be lots of girls. All she needs to do is find hair coloring she can handle herself (there are several) and go to a hairdresser who doesn't mind changing her hairstyle week after week. A "new person" is always fun in an old friend and a conversation piece at any party.

'Air ring' earrings

There are new earrings that are so light in weight that they are called "air rings". They come in loop shapes and beautiful translucent colors. They're a summer fashion joy.

Midi mistake?

The midi is back in business. One failure wasn't enough. It won't work this time any more than it did the last time. But it's here again for anyone who wants to look older. Women will be told what to wear until they have enough fashion sense to stomp their feet and refuse to look ridiculous any longer.

Beatitudes FOR MARRIED COUPLES

Blessed are the husband and wife who continue to be affectionate, considerate and loving after the wedding bells have ceased ringing.

Blessed are the husband and wife who are as polite and courteous to one another as they are to their friends.

Blessed are they who have a sense of humor, for this attribute will be a handy shock absorber.

Blessed are the married couples who abstain from alcoholic beverages.

Blessed are they who love their mates more than any other person in the world, and who joyfully fulfill their marriage vow of a lifetime of fidelity and mutual helpfulness to each other.

Blessed are they who remember to thank God for their food before they partake of it, and who set aside some time each day for the reading of the Bible and prayer.

Blessed are they who attain parenthood, for children are a heritage of the Lord.

Blessed are those mates who never speak loudly to each other and who make their home a place "where seldom is heard a discouraging word."

Blessed are the husband and wife who faithfully attend the worship service of the church for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom.

Blessed are the husband and wife who can work out their problems of adjustment without interference from relatives.

Blessed is the couple who have a complete understanding about financial matters and who have worked out perfect partnership with all the money under control of both.

Blessed are the husband and wife who humbly dedicate their lives and their home to Christ and practice the teachings of Christ in their home by being unselfish, loyal and loving.

Lavish Festivities May Be Curtailed But Spring Weddings Can Have Color

Recession blues may color the thinking of the bride-to-be regarding the number of her guests and lavishness of wedding festivities. But one thing is certain... the most memorable day of every couple's life will continue to be formal and beautiful according to surveys conducted by Modern Bride and Bride's magazine.

Where once the bride was the focal point, dashing young grooms and their attendants are now commanding their full measure of attention. Formal wear for the groom, once drab and lackluster... black or grey... is now light and bright.

One of America's most influential producer of men's formal styles has introduced colors like Something Blue, Happy Maize, Misty Grey, Seafoam Green, and Cloud White in a variety of styles designed to add a most happy note to the wedding party. The company advocates complete color coordination in two-tone shirts, butterfly and teardrop ties to match the jackets with a single or double breasted vest, replacing the tired old cummerbund.

For Spring/Summer 1975 the bride can let her fancy for color go high, wide and handsome. She may elect to dress her bridesmaids in a variety of pastel colors, solid or print, and have each of the groom's ushers wear color coordinated formal for a picture-perfect rainbow wedding. She may also decide on a monochromatic color scheme and can choose from a full range of color coordinated designs to make certain that harmony prevails.

Since the groom is sometimes timorous and less adventurous in terms of style and color, his bride should join him at least two months before the wedding date to shop at their favorite formal wear rental specialist for the ultimate selection.

Together, they might fall in love with the Windsor model with its unique cloverleaf shaped lapels, also trimmed with matching braid. They may also be attracted to the more conventional Wyncote with notch lapels, framed with velvet braid and velvet top collar.

No matter the choice of jacket, formal trousers, too, may also be color coordinated if traditional black trousers are not their cup of tea.

In the event a very formal evening ceremony is planned complete with flickering candles under a star-lit sky, one rental specialist has translated the ultra elegant tailcoat in Cloud White or Something Blue. It becomes increasingly apparent that fashion has finally caught up with the groom and that today his choice of wedding apparel is just as varied as the bride's.

And one more practical thought for the couple planning a wedding on a budget. The latest and most up to date men's formal fashions may be conveniently rented at a modest cost to help make that day of days unforgettable.

'Who Proposed . . . . You or Your Wife?'

By JOAN L. WOINOSKI

Contrary to what women's liberation and the explosion of new lifestyles would have us believe, nine times out of 10, it's either the man who does the proposing or — and this seems to be the current trend — (we quote) "If you're in love, what difference does it make who pops the question? It's just taken for granted that we'll marry . . . sort of an unspoken mutual agreement."

Things were not always so!

The Life Department conducted a survey among some old timers as well as newlyweds. Asked: "Who did the proposing, you or your wife?" . . . These are some of the responses: "I called her up and said: 'Look, we're gettin' married. Be ready Sunday.' She couldn't talk for two days."

"I forgot . . . it's 29 years ago."

"I think I did. I just don't remember. I can't even remember when I wasn't married."

One man said he was driving up Wall Street with his girl friend and they were discussing marriage. From the way the conversation was headed, he finally got the hint and asked "Do you want to get married?" Since they'd been keeping company for four years, it didn't come as too much of a shock, so she said "yes." He claims he made a right hand turn to Maiden Lane and stopped at the doctor's office for a blood test. (We don't know how many years ago this was but if he took a right hand turn to Maiden Lane while driving "up" Wall Street, it must've been back when Wall Street offered two-way traffic.)

Although we don't see the connection, one man said he proposed to his girl on the way back from his uncle's funeral. (It was not in the hearse, however.) In this day and age, we found it a bit quaint that his bride-to-be answered: "Ask my father." To make a long story short, the father answered his question with another question: "You got money?" Blunt . . . but honest!

Another man who married his childhood sweetheart didn't let their pre-assumed marriage take away any of the romance. He got down on his knees . . . Sir Lancelot-style.

Getting around to the 1970s, we heard these versions:

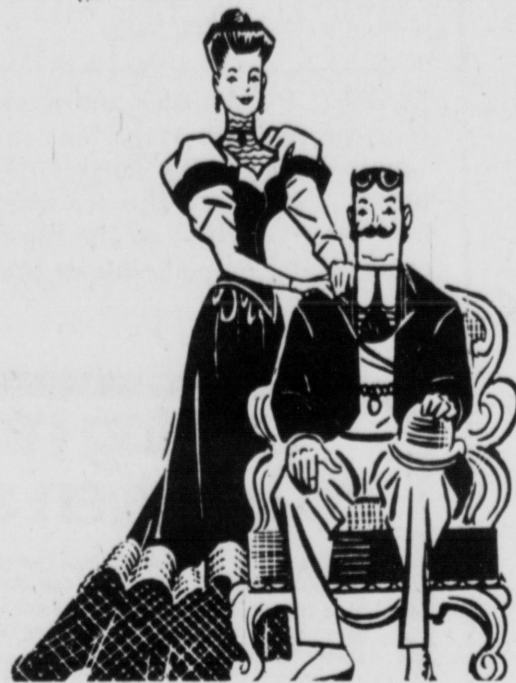

(Him) "Hey, do you wanna?"

(Her) "O.K., what the heck."

As well as:

"Well, it was this way. I got two letters, one from Uncle Sam, one from her father. I took the easy way out." (If he'd gone in the army, he'd have been out by now.)

Surprisingly, with all the persons questioned we did not find one woman who had proposed — or, at least, not one who admitted to it. Maybe it was bad timing on our part. Perhaps we should have waited for 1976 . . . when leap year rolls around. It should be a whole new story!

To each BRIDE and GROOM, we recommend:
"AN HOUR OF ENCHANTMENT," ... BeeVer House style!

During this hour we will teach the two of you about wax, where it comes from, how it is formulated and what type is used for different effects. We will teach you how to shape our handsome pillars, and guide you in selecting the best colors and scents for your new house or apartment. You will learn how to create the right mood for a breakfast, or a luncheon, or an intimate dinner with friends.

And . . . in this hour together, we will serve the two of you wine and cheese by candlelight!

What a glorious way to spend an hour . . . BeeVer House style!

Beauty, Make-up and Count Pablo

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — "Too much is too vulgar!" wince Italian Count Pablo Manzoni about the overapplication of make-up behind which too many insecure women hide. "If a woman's cosmetics are as obvious as a mask, so is she!" adds outspoken Pablo, Elizabeth Arden's Creative Director who has done the world's most famous faces.

The dashing aristocrat admits that occasionally even the most distinguished elegantes — who reportedly pay him $75 an hour, plus expenses — bypass his expert advice. Pablo often consults the privileged in the privacy of palace, villa, estate or townhouse.

Example: It was Pablo who suggested to Jacqueline Onassis that her illustrious hairdresser, Kenneth, create a coiffure that covers the side of her square face to make it look angular.

"She has done none of that," says Pablo who also tried to get Jackie to wear more rouge for the same effect. She hasn't. "Mrs. Onassis is a distinctive queen and that's good enough for me," says Pablo diplomatically.

Pablo is especially face-conscious in this depressing era of inflation. Clothes have spiraled in price. Pablo's point is that an updated image can be achieved quickly and completely with a small, relatively inexpensive collection of cosmetics. Even a $3 lipstick can alter the face.

"Your face is your calling card," says Pablo who also works with plastic surgeons who want patients to have constructive, ego-lifting postoperative cosmetic advice. "The face announces everything you have to say about yourself and your image."

Liberal Pablo doesn't deliver hard-fast rules. But he's got workable tips to help women make the most of themselves. "I don't believe in the perfect beauty," says Pablo. "Flaws are interesting. They're what make a woman individual."

Pablo, who does a syndicated television show "The Art of Gentle Make-up," outlines workable tricks any woman can deftly use. Here are the standout ways to avoid the most common cosmetic errors:

Eyebrows: Don't overpluck into a thin, hard line. It's worse than shaggy brows.

Suggested Anniversary Gifts for Today

les in amateur psychology. "Confidence is based on serenity, not harshness." Pablo likes moderately weezed brows that are arched delicately. Pencil, he says, should be used to fill in — not define.

Make-up base: "Too many salespeople try the shades by hurriedly dabbing colors on the back of a hand," says Pablo who applies colors near the jawline only. "It's the area closest to the neck. Make-up base should blend with the skin color. How I hate to see a line of demarcation!"

Rouge: "Avoid getting rouge too close to the nose. 'It's what makes a woman look like a drunk! Rouge — cream, powder or liquid — should be applied only to the cheekbone area."

Eyes: Women who buy false lashes and apply them directly from the box "end up looking like chorus girls." Pablo insists lashes be trimmed professionally to fit the contour of the eye. If your eyes protrude, avoid lashes — they make the eyes protrude more. "Women with deep-set eyes should wear lashes because it creates the optical illusion of large eyes," says Pablo. "Some women should lie a little!"

"Vilgar!" he hisses dramatically about overstated eyeliner that is hooked up in pseudo-Oriental exaggeration. "Eyeliner should be a modest, thin frame for the eye." There's even a color trick to using eyeshadow. Women with protruding eyes should wear dark shadows that downplay the eye. Women with deep-set eyes can wear bright, light shadows that suggest largeness.

Many women are plagued by specific problems which they consider blatant negatives. Pablo says minor defects shouldn't be allowed to become burdens. Rather, they should be "offset" — then completely forgotten before they become inferiority complexes.

The ex-Mrs. Peter Beard, formerly Minnie Cushing of the illustrious Newport Cushings, was unhappy with her wide forehead. Pablo lightly roughed it and told her to wear bangs. Sophia Loren was deeply distressed about her thick, black brows. Pablo bleached them 12 years ago. "These are glamorous women," says Pablo about sophisticated followers. "Even they have had to overcome barriers to establish their loveliness."

The bridal season also celebrates the wedding that was: with anniversary gifts. Like their wedding gifts, a couple's anniversary gifts are chosen with a special care but also with a practicality that recognizes these two loving people share today's world. For your anniversary couple the following gift guide is suggested. It is known as the Modern Wedding Anniversary List. This list compiles ideas and suggestions for gifts that hint at the years passed, prepare for the years to come, and celebrate the love overall.

The first nine years of marriage concentrate on acquiring and furnishing a home, raising a young and growing family. The necessities are always first on this couple's working budget. Anniversary gifts that bring beauty and the luxuries into their home are most appreciated.

1st Year: Clocks — for every room, every need.
2nd Year: China — includes lamps, vases, art objects, figurines.

4th Year: Electrical Appliances.

5th Year: Silverware — both holloware and flatware.

9th Year: Leather.

The years 10 through 15 will find a couple's family more grown and self-sufficient so that the two of them will have more time to themselves for entertainment and travel. Gifts of personal adornment are wisely chosen as anniversary remembrances during these.

10th Year: Diamond Jewelry.

11th Year: Fashion Jewelry and Accessories.

12th Year: Pearls or Colored Stones.

15th Year: Watches.

From the 16th anniversary to the 19th the emphasis is once more in the home. Children, now grown up and mature, see their home with pride, the place they want to bring their friends, the place where they enjoy being. Anniversary gifts reflect and encourage this interest.

16th Year: Silver Holloware — sterling or plate.

17th Year: Furniture.

18th Year: Porcelain.

19th Year: Bronze — art objects suitable for the home.

Twenty years of marriage calls for a triumphant celebration. This prestigious anniversary is fittingly gifted with platinum jewelry for her and for him.

The 25th anniversary merits sterling for the couple who have successfully reached a quarter of a century of togetherness. It's the perfect time to fill in what's missing from a couple's silver service, so gift them extravagantly with either silver flatware or holloware. And it's the perfect time for that sterling husband to give his wife the silver service she's patiently waited for.

When the 30th anniversary is upon them, a couple usually find themselves alone again and able to do some of the things they have long talked about and wished to do. Diamond jewelry for their personal pleasure is the gift for this anniversary.

Jade spotlights 35 years of marriage as the gift for so honorable an achievement. Much prized in the Orient, this remarkable gem has been worked countless numbers of ways that make especially beautiful anniversary gifts to celebrate a 35 year young marriage.

Forty years of marriage is the magic number that wins the ruby on the day that was their wedding day. Jewelry gifts set with this fiery red gem say "Happy Anniversary" to him and to her.

The beautiful sapphire, in all its colors, is the gem that celebrates the 45th wedding anniversary in such high style. Jewelry gifts will be cherished once more.

The golden opportunity to celebrate the Golden Jubilee of 50 years of marriage is not accorded too many. This anniversary should be steeped in all the pomp and circumstance that is its due. Only gold, to match the golden age of the couple, is worthy of this grand occasion. Let family, relatives and friends make their day glint and gleam with all the glory of gold . . . a glory they deserve!

Fifty-five years of marriage is 55 years blessed and to prove it is the emerald, a truly prized and precious gem. Emerald gifts aptly demonstrate how much devotion and love the couple is blessed with, from children and friends alike.

The pinnacle of a 60th wedding anniversary is, indeed, a rare height to attain, if God and health be willing. The couple looking back on 60 years of married life and love shared will be suitably honored with a Diamond Jubilee. The King of Gems is worthy of their kingly married reign.

For 75 years of marriage — again, only the diamond is the gem deemed worthy to honor it all. A Victorian Jubilee anniversary celebration in diamonds, as gala as can be, is certainly called for on this grand anniversary.

See how every gift suggestion in the Modern Wedding Anniversary List is appropriate, sentimental and loving — perfect for the special people you want to gift.

Creative Ways with Preserves

Want Compliments? Serve Torte

During those hectic first months of marriage, young men and women just plain don't have time for fancy cooking. Yet patterns are being established that will last a lifetime. You vowed your household would be one in which family members sit down together for meals — even breakfast. And you promised yourself to fix meals that show you care, no matter how little time is left for cooking.

thought of heating and pouring them on waffles, pancakes, and French toast? Or you might even try a tablespoon of orange marmalade or apricot preserves with three scrambled eggs for a nice little breakfast-for-two.

Add a spoonful of any tart jelly to chicken or turkey gravy. And swirl strawberry preserves into mayonnaise, sour cream or yogurt for a delicious fruit salad dressing.

Roasts are an old standby, and preserves and jellies used straight-from-the-jar make superb glazes. Think of vegetables, too, made sweeter and more attractive with a mixture of melted butter and apple jelly drizzled over the top. Try this on cooked carrots, beets or onions.

Preserves and jellies will always be good on toast in the morning, but have you

Bake cake-mix according to package directions, using two 9-inch layer cake pans. Cool layers on rack. Meanwhile, prepare pudding mix, using 1/2 cup less milk than called for in package directions. Cool thoroughly.

Slice each cake layer horizontally into 2 layers of equal thickness. Sprinkle cake layers evenly with orange juice; set aside one top layer.

Spread each of the remaining 3 layers first with 1/2 of the strawberry preserves, then with 1/2 of the prepared pudding. Reassemble cake, putting the reserved cake layer on top. Cover cake with plastic wrap and chill several hours or overnight.

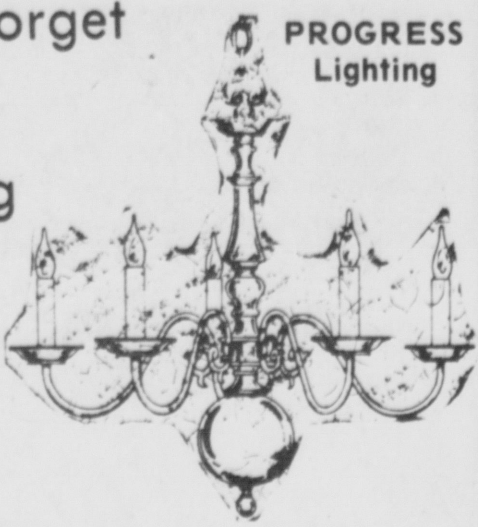

Before serving, whip cream with sugar and vanilla. Reserve 1 cup of the whipped cream for rosettes. Spread top and sides of cake with whipped cream; pipe rosettes around edge of cake. Garnish with almonds.

Makes 9-inch cake.

Bridal Punch

As the season for weddings reappears, so does the search for punches to serve at showers and receptions. Will it be alcoholic? How will it look with the flowers? Will it taste okay with the wedding cake? These are all questions that confront wedding planners. Well, look no further. Here's a wedding punch that succeeds on all counts. It can be prepared with wine or without. It has a pretty light orange color that highlights summer wedding flowers, and it has that fresh tingling taste that is spectacular with any wedding fare. The secret to the success of this punch is freshly squeezed orange and lemon juice.

Bridal Punch

(20 five-ounce servings)
Fresh grated lemon and orange peel

- 3 cups fresh squeezed orange juice
- 1 cup fresh squeezed lemon juice
- 3 tea bags
- 3 cups boiling water
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 can (18 ounce) pineapple juice (2 1/4 cups)
- 1 bottle (28 ounces) lemon-lime carbonated beverage, chilled

Grate peel from one lemon and one orange before squeezing juice. Place peel in heat-proof bowl or container with tea bags. Add boiling water.

Cover; steep for 5 minutes. Strain peel from liquid. Add sugar to hot liquid and stir to dissolve; cool. Add fruit juices to cooled mixture. Chill until ready to serve. Just before serving add ice and then the lemon-lime carbonated beverage. Garnish with orange cartwheel and mint.

FOR WINE PUNCH: Add to punch bowl 2 chilled bottles (4/5 quart each) Rhine wine and 1/2 pint chilled brandy. Stir gently. Makes 5 quarts.

14th Century Custom Continues Bride Chooses Flowers

It's no secret — Cupid's arrows, long a symbol of romance, have hit their mark and brides are planning their weddings throughout the land. Parties, shopping sprees, and all the excitement associated with the big event combine to make this special day one which the bride, bridegroom, family and friends will long remember.

Flowers traditionally play an important role in all the festivities, brightening tables, rooms, the church and costumes. The bride's bouquet, one of the most ancient of wedding customs, expresses the joy and happiness of the bridal occasion and receives special admiration from the guests at the ceremony, points out the Society of American Florists.

The practice of throwing the bouquet or, as in more recent times, all but the specially designed corsage portion, to assembled women guests after the ceremony, is a tradition linking many generations of happy brides. This custom originated in the 14th century and legend tells us the girl who catches the bouquet will be the next to marry.

The bride's veil, dating from earliest antiquity — it was yellow in Greece and red in Rome — served to conceal the bride from view since it was believed bad luck would follow if she was seen by the bridegroom before the marriage ceremony. The white veil and gown became popular in our culture when Queen Victoria set the pace by wearing a white silk dress for her wedding and hundreds of Victorian brides followed suit.

Although many brides choose the all-white gown and bouquet for formal weddings, colors are equally popular and appropriate for both the dress and the bouquet. Expressing the bride's choice of her favorite flowers, they may range from roses or orchids to daisies or freesia. The bouquet's form can differ, too, according to the style of the bride's dress. A "cascade" has a sense of grace and symmetry while a rounded "colonial" arrangement is often chosen as a charming complement to a slender, simple dress silhouette and is carried low so details of the gown will not be hidden. For the traditional touch of "something blue" the florist can tie a perky blue bow on the handle of the bouquet.

Regardless of the type wedding, whether formal or more casual in keeping with today's lifestyle, today's bride will be using flowers lavishly as perfect accompaniments to all the pre-wedding festivities.

Guide to Proper Attire for Today's Wedding Party

Since the bride is the star, it is not surprising that she decides how formal, or informal, a wedding she will have. The number of guests, the type of reception, if any, the time of day — all are her choices, and all this is reflected in the type of bridal gown she selects.

In turn, the type of gown determines what every other member of the wedding party will wear. While bridal fashion generally follows the latest trends, a bride can easily find a "traditional" gown — sweetheart neckline, long sleeves, nipped-in waist, and tiers and tiers of lace flowing into a sweep or cathedral train. Or she may follow the "nostalgic" trend, so in today.

The real change has come about in men's formal wear. The black and white or the gray and white "uniform" now also comes in a spectrum of muted and bright colors and a wide variety of shapes.

bridal gown with cathedral, chapel or no train. Long full veil. Long sleeves or long gloves. Shoes to match gown. Bouquet in keeping with gown or covered prayer book pinned with flowers and ribbons.

Bridesmaids — Floor-length dresses with complementary headpieces. Shoes dyed to match or harmonize.

Mothers — Floor-length gowns. Small hats and accessories to harmonize with the dresses.

*All the men in the wedding party.

Daytime — Formal

Bride — Long, less elaborate gown with a shorter train, either chapel or sweep length. The veil either finger tip, shorter, or to the floor. Same accessories as for very formal wedding.

Groom* — Oxford gray stroller or jacket with striped trousers. Gray waistcoat. White shirt with turned down collar and striped four-in-hand tie. Gray gloves. Black shoes and hose. Homburg is optional.

Bridesmaids — Dresses may be either floor-length or street length. Accessories match or harmonize.

United Way Benefit

Fall/Winter Theme for Fashion Show

Yes, the Daily Freeman will be presenting its 7th Annual Fashion Premiere for the benefit of United Way of Ulster County only, this year, it will be given on Monday, Oct. 13 and will have a Fall/Winter theme.

The show will be staged in the auditorium of Kingston High School on Columbus Day at 7:30 p.m.

The Freeman Fashion Show will be planned and coordinated by Dorothy A. Narel, LIFE Editor. Assisting her will be Joan L. Woinoski of the LIFE Department, and Carolyn Seitz, Freeman librarian, who will handle tickets. The price of admission remains the same — $3.50 per person.

In keeping with former years, proceeds from the sale of tickets are donated to the United Way of Ulster County and its 17-member agencies. These include Boy and Girl Scouts, Jewish Community Center, YMCA and YWCA, Kingston Boys' Club, Family Service Center, Children's Rehabilitation Center, Gateway Industries, Mental Health, Red Cross, Salvation Army, USO, Blood Bank, Association for Retarded Children, Homemakers Service and Family of Woodstock.

Also assisting with this year's show will be Joan Conway of the Freeman Advertising Department, and Elaine Russell, who will join the staff this summer and assume the responsibilities of stage director.

Several factors figured in the changes made regarding the Freeman Fashion Premiere. First, many have inquired about a Fall/Winter theme and we are bowing to that request. Secondly, relocation by this newspaper to Hurley Avenue and a very early Easter season precluded staging the production early in March, a time of the year when weather remains a questionable topic.

Details about the 7th Annual Freeman Fashion Premiere will be announced.

NEWS AND FEATURES FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Mother of Seven is Editor

State Post for Teacher

Mary E. Kent, head teacher at Emma Wygant School for the trainable mentally retarded, Kingston Consolidated Schools, has been named editor of Kaleidoscope, the newspaper of the NYS Association of Teachers of the Mentally Handicapped, Inc., State President E. John Parry Jr., Lyons Falls, has announced.

A charter member of NYSATMH, Ms. Kent has been Public Relations chairperson of the State organization and a member of the State convention committee for two years, and is also presently serving as chairperson of the legislative committee of the Ulster County charter.

She received the B.A. degree in Speech, with honors, from the University of Denver in 1958, and was awarded the Master of Science in Education of the Mentally Retarded at State University College, New Paltz, in 1974. She has been a public school teacher since 1961 when she organized the first class for the handicapped at Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

A member of the American Association for Mental Deficiency, the Education Press Association, and a former member of the Board of Directors, Ulster County Chapter, Association for Retarded Children, she was honored by the latter at its first annual awards dinner in 1971 for Outstanding Service to the retarded children of Ulster County.

The mother of seven children, she and the family have resided in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia, Colorado, and the Philippines, and in addition to the University of Denver and New Paltz, she has taken courses at Maryville College (Tenn.), Keystone College, the University of Colorado, the University of the Philippines, the University of Virginia, Mount St. Mary's College in Newburgh, Russell Sage, and Syracuse University.

Ms. Kent and her family reside at 65 Prospect Street, New Paltz.

UCBPW Announces 'Woman of the Year'

Collette Sonnenberg, president of the Ulster County Business and Professional Women's Club, has announced the local organization's second Woman of the Year award will be presented to Sister Mary Charles McCarthy, president of Benedictine Hospital. The first award was presented to Blanche Ennis, formerly with the Girls Scouts of America.

Serving on the nominating committee for the occasion were Stella Coppo, chairman; Maureen Graham, co-chairman; Mary Fisher and Nancy Hussey.

The hospital president will accept her citation at a dinner-meeting of the club on Tuesday, April 8 at 7 p.m. in the Governor Clinton Hotel. Those interested in attending should contact Mrs. Coppo at 330 Main Street, Kingston.

A graduate of Catholic University with a BS in Nursing Education, Sr. M. Charles also received a Master of Arts in Administration at Columbia University. She has served the hospital since 1941 in various capacities, was appointed co-administrator in 1962 and administrator in 1967. Prior duties included supervision of medical, surgical and obstetrical nursing, serving as associate director of the School of Nursing and teaching disaster nursing and pharmacology.

Sr. M. Charles attended the Institute on Hospital Administration in 1964 and maintains membership in the American College of Hospital Administrators. In 1965 she launched the campaign for $1,000,000 which culminated in the construction of Spellman Pavilion.

A frequent speaker for communion breakfasts, the hospital president also serves as secretary of the Benedictine's board of directors. She is past president of Zonta Club of Kingston and sits on the board, is vice president of the Ulster County Blood Bank; secretary of the Ulster County Medical Scholarship Board; member of the Ulster County BPW Club; Ulster and Greene County Heart Chapter; and is listed in the 1970 Who's Who in American Women.

Born in Staten Island in 1915, Sr. M. Charles is the only child of Mary and Charles McCarthy.

SLIM AARONS

Slim Aarons: He Clicks With the Super Rich . . .

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — "I've never slugged anyone — nor have I been slugged!" boasts rough-tumble Slim Aarons, the tall, overweight ex-war photographer whose Beautiful People Pictures have earned him fame, fortune and The Inside Track.

For 30 years, Aarons has clicked in homes of Hollywood celebrities, with Cabots sailing off Boston's snobby North Shore and as privy to goings-on at private "soirees" hosted by Rockefellers, Guinesses and Kennedys.

Aarons, a New Hampshire resident who'd rather not specify where he lives, is a good-natured Irishman who gleefully giggles at his "Jewish-sounding name." He says it's marvelous door-opener because The Rich are super-sensitive about saying "no" to members of minorities.

"But, of course, I never knock the people who invite me in." In the next breath Aarons is calling the world's most dazzling elegantes "dames." Apparently they're not disenchanted with his honesty: "Aw," he says, "some of them are ugly as sin!"

The unattractive wealthy have been edited out of the breathtakingly pages of Aarons' new book, "A Wonderful Time" (Harper & Row) which documents in glamorous detail the superchic people doing exciting things in splendid habitats.

Is this kind of photographic documentary decadent? Why do a book about the glamour world when there's a shortage of food and energy, when there's radical tension, when the economy is in trouble and unemployment is at an all-time high?

"When you're rich, there's not a damn thing you have to explain to anyone."

"Listen, honeybunch," barks Aaron, "when I was photographing the horror scenes of World War II, I finally said to hell with the bloody maimed and the dead sprawled on those beaches. I decided that the only beach people I'd ever photograph would be the gorgeous ones living the good life. Why do documentaries have to be so damn depressing? I mean, doesn't the world have enough misery?"

Aarons, who gets up to $2,000 per picture, makes it his business never to "knock" the rich who invite him in. And if they invite him to attend a party "unofficially," he never betrays a trust by "sneaking" pictures when people are under the influence and defenses are down.

"After all," insists Aaron, "the whole glamour scene is pure Americana! Why, isn't everyone's dream to live like a king and queen? Isn't the American ideal of going from rags to riches? Isn't the riches syndrome more entertaining than the raggy part? But I never take pictures against anybody's wishes."

Once Aarons was stalking status people at the socially restricted Everglades Club golf course in Florida's Palm Beach. He ran into Joseph Kennedy playing the game. Kennedy offered him an irresistible bribe. "He told me if I didn't take his picture, he'd invite me to his home for dinner," said Aarons, who happily respected Kennedy's privacy. "That evening, The Old Man and I broke bread together! We talked a lot about Jack and Bobby. It was a conversation out of Camelot."

Aarons has tried his hand at acting but it was a "bust" because he isn't "phony" enough for what he calls the make-believe world. In 1950 when doing a Town & Country magazine assignment in Rome, his friend, Clark Gable, got him a bit part in the flick, "It Happened In Naples." Aarons was to play an obnoxious American tourist who introduced himself by saying: "I'm in the laundry business."

Aarons got very nervous in front of the camera. He kept on making Freudian slips like: "I'm cleaning up the laundry! Many years later, at a Hollywood party, Aarons snapped a picture of Gable telling this story to Jimmy Stewart and Gary Cooper. They're all laughing merrily at Aaron's cinematic boo-boo and the memorable picture is in the book.

Aarons says: "When you're very, very rich you've got to do some outrageous things. Once I covered a party given by oilman Tex Feldman. He couldn't meet a $9 million note so he staged a $30,000 party at Romanoff's to prove he was still a rich man."

When Tyrone Power married Linda Christian in Rome in 1948, Aarons was at a pre-nuptial party at the now-defunct Whip Club which was at the top of Rome's Spanish steps. Aarons started taking pictures and Prince Alessandro Torlonia, a Harvard graduate, asked not to appear in any photos. "Even if you're in the background," Aarons told the insistently shy prince, "I'll blot you out. And, of course, I did. My word of honor is my work!"

Once Aarons was doing a photographic essay on top Roman aristocrats with a direct line to the Pope. One personality Aarons was to photograph is the very private Prince Massimo, a descendant of Fabius Maximus. When Aarons called the prince's villa, the secretary taking his request literally fainted at the prospect of the blatant invasion of privacy.

"But," says Aarons, "when the prince finally realized it was culture stuff I was shooting, not the Mafia junk — he came through. Gentlemen, you see, are always gentlemen."

Apparently there are still some ladies around too. Aarons was in a suburban Boston country club with a Brahmin from one of the established families. She ordered gin and vermouth on ice. "She never called her drink a martini!" says Aarons. "That would be too plebeian."

Aarons has photographed Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis but only when she has given her permission — which is practically never. "I photograph her from the crowds of photographers," he says. "I've never asked for privileges."

He says he knew Jackie when she was just another "struggling" photographer. Because he has never pressured her for pictures, they are friends. "Sometimes we get together and talk about filters, films and friends," he says.

There is a major difference between The Beautiful People whose money is inherited and the social segment Aarons refers to as The Nouveaux. "The Nouveaux," he says of the new rich, "are nervous wrecks. They always worry about doing the wrong thing — which is a bore. The Beautiful People are very, very secure. They never fret about how to make an impression. Their presence, their background, their names are the buffers."

"I mean, honey, once I went into a Newport mansion and there was a worn-out rope rug in the front hall. If it were mine, I would have put it in the garbage. When you're rich, there's not a damn thing you have to explain to anyone." (Pierre Scherman photo)

"Ask me any questions," she said in an interview. "If I don't want to answer, I won't."

Miss Rasmussen was working as a maid in the Nelson Rockefeller homes when she met Steven. They had three children, were divorced in 1970, and there was a brief second marriage to Robert W. Krogstad, an American businessman of Norwegian descent.

She said that had she met Rockefeller today instead of so many years ago "we would have had a better chance. He would have known women better. I'd have not been living in the romantic dream world I've been accused of all my life. We'd both be more mature, more realistic."

Is she saying that she still is in love with Steven? "You can't have three children with someone and not love them," she said. "It's impossible. But living with is another thing. Steven sees the children frequently. A broken home is a term not in our vocabulary."

"I have the highest respect for him. I see him in my children every day."

Their children are Steven, 14, Ingrid, 11, and Jennifer, 10. They live with her at a big, comfortable looking white house she purchased in Westchester County, N.Y., after the divorce.

It is five acres, nothing on the scale of Pocantico Hills, the Rockefeller family compound of thousands of acres at Tarrytown, N.Y. She calls her home Ras-Rock.

Currently, Miss Rasmussen is on tour to promote sales of her fairy tale story told in "There Was Once A Time" (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich). She doesn't seem to need the money, but she won't discuss the details of the divorce settlement.

"The children are taken care of, of course," she said. "Most fathers if they're good fathers will take care of the children."

"But I'm no Bobo," she said. The reference was to the

A Big Success for "People As Parents" . . . in a small way . . .

"The open meeting for People as Parents at the Woodstock Elementary School recently was a great success — in a small way. Great because the motivation of parents and leaders went sky-high, and small because the participants were relatively few."

This is how Dr. Susana Bouquet-Chester, registered clinical psychologist, and resident of Holland Drive, West Hurley, describes the meeting Dr. Bouquet-Chester gave the introduction and explained the need for such a program outlining, at the same, the

These crises come and go but sometimes they become too frequent and the situation is untenable, explains the psychologist. "Everybody hurts and nobody knows why. It is difficult to get out of the situation. Why wait until it becomes overwhelming? Just as in medicine, it is better to prevent than to cure, sons to cooperate with her in order to provide needed services. These persons are leaders in the "People as Parents" program. They are psychology students, social workers, members of a psychological committee, and parents who have had problems and have acquired insight and understanding.

The duration of the program is for a year with monthly meetings of the entire group on the first Thursday of each month.

Between the general monthly sessions the leaders mode of operation of the sessions.

She spoke of the fact that parents are often overwhelmed by the demands put upon them. She says:

"A mother is on the telephone, and a child cries while the pot is burning on the stove and the dog is barking his head off. A father comes tired from work, is worried about the heating bill, and his children run around leaving doors open and running the hot water. Or more seriously, an adolescent has dropped out of school or has Although it is difficult, it is not impossible, and the rewards are great," Dr. Bouquet-Chester says.

The "People as Parents" program designed by Dr. Bouquet-Chester has the purpose of avoiding serious damage to family relations and to provide immediate problem-solving solutions.

It is contended there is a scarcity of psychological services in the area. On the other hand, there are many people with psychological knowledge. Dr. Bouquet-Chester has arranged for these per-

Parents are asked to pay ten dollars per couple or $7.50 per single parents. Although the program has started, the LIFE Department has learned that applications are still available. The number of leaders is sufficient to accommodate more families.

Applications may be obtained at the meeting scheduled for Thursday, March 6 or by contacting Family of Woodstock, Rock City Road, Woodstock, N.Y. 12498.

Saugerties Resident Finds Seminar Topics 'Offensive'

WILLIAM IGOE of Saugerties, who describes himself as "a private citizen interested in the welfare of my community," has taken objection to a portion of the Seminar on Human Sexology held in New Paltz February 17 and 18 under the sponsorship of the Planned Parenthood Group of Ulster County and covered by the LIFE Department of this newspaper.

Specifically, Mr. Igoe told the LIFE Editor that while he agrees there is a need for sex education, he felt the Tuesday afternoon panel, as described in the article, destroyed the sanctity of marriage and "was very offensive."

"If the emphasis was supposed to be educational, then let it be educational" Mr. Igoe said. "I feel the scheduling of such topics at this type of seminar was in poor taste and unnecessary. It highlights perversions and deviations of sexuality. It is a definite falling away from God," Mr. Igoe stated.

Mr. Igoe further stated he respects the rights of others to do as they choose but he does not agree their message should be conveyed to the public as "something that is wholesome and proper."

In contrast, Mr. Igoe said a series of articles on masturbation published last year by the LIFE department were "very constructive and educational."

"I always read the LIFE section of The Freeman — I find it very interesting and I just had to call and voice my opinion about the Planned Parenthood Seminar," Mr. Igoe concluded.

They Called Her a Cinderella Bride

By GAY PAULEY

Anne-Marie Rasmussen says, "I don't believe in divorce."

Yet here she is, the Norwegian-born girl whom they called the Cinderella bride of a Rockefeller, divorced from him, remarried and again divorced.

"My sister says I've had enough husbands for both of us," said Miss Rasmussen. Her sister is Thorild, single and employed in a government office in Kristiansand S., Norway.

Miss Rasmussen talks candidly of her marriage to Steven Rockefeller, son of the former New York Governor and now U.S. vice-president.

"Ask me any questions," she said in an interview. "If I don't want to answer, I won't."

Miss Rasmussen was working as a maid in the Nelson Rockefeller homes when she met Steven. They had three children, were divorced in 1970, and there was a brief second marriage to Robert W. Krogstad, an American businessman of Norwegian descent.

She said that had she met Rockefeller today instead of so many years ago "we would have had a better chance. He would have known women better. I'd have not been living in the romantic dream world I've been accused of all my life. We'd both be more mature, more realistic."

Is she saying that she still is in love with Steven? "You can't have three children with someone and not love them," she said. "It's impossible. But living with is another thing. Steven sees the children frequently. A broken home is a term not in our vocabulary."

"I have the highest respect for him. I see him in my children every day."

Their children are Steven, 14, Ingrid, 11, and Jennifer, 10. They live with her at a big, comfortable looking white house she purchased in Westchester County, N.Y., after the divorce.

It is five acres, nothing on the scale of Pocantico Hills, the Rockefeller family compound of thousands of acres at Tarrytown, N.Y. She calls her home Ras-Rock.

Currently, Miss Rasmussen is on tour to promote sales of her fairy tale story told in "There Was Once A Time" (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich). She doesn't seem to need the money, but she won't discuss the details of the divorce settlement.

"The children are taken care of, of course," she said. "Most fathers if they're good fathers will take care of the children."

"But I'm no Bobo," she said. The reference was to the Cinderella bride of the late Winthrop Rockefeller, Steven's uncle. His settlement for divorce was reported to be close to $6 million.

Miss Rasmussen, 36, still fair-haired, seems closer to Mary Rockefeller, the children's grandmother and the first Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, than she does to the others.

Anything Mrs. Rockefeller says, I believe," she said. The ex-wife lives not far from Miss Rasmussen. "The relationship benefits the children and it's wonderful for me because my mother's not here." Miss Rasmussen's widowed mother lives in Lohne, Norway.

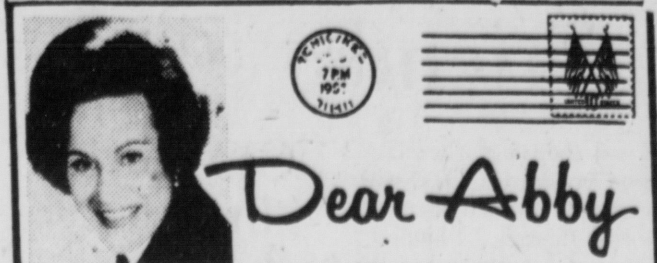

Steven, who took a doctorate in theology and philosophy at Union Theological seminary in New York, now is assistant professor of religion at Middlebury College in Vermont.

Miss Rasmussen doesn't think the difference in their worlds had anything to do with breakup.

He liked part of my world as I liked part of his," she said. "But we were two personalities, two different people."

In the book she says, "One of my strongest wishes is to know that he is content . . . that . . . he does not feel crushed and lonely as I often do"

It's Always Later Than You Think...

DEAR ABBY: My younger sister passed away last month and I found a yellowed clipping of your column in her Bible. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: Will you please remind your readers to look after their parents who are too old to look after themselves? Old parents need all their children. It's not always easy to cope with aging parents, but we weren't easy to cope with when they were raising US either. We OWE it to them. I just wish someone had reminded ME of these things when Mama was still alive. It's too late now, and I haven't had a decent night's sleep since she died three months ago.

I knew she had a good home with my sister, so that was that. Why didn't I take her for a few weeks, or even for Sunday dinner, or for a little drive? I never had time for her, yet I had time for others, and anything else I wanted to do. A change of scenery or even a meal at my home would have meant so much to her, but I was too busy. Oh, I had plenty of excuses.

I suppose the only one in our large family who is sleeping is my sister who took Mama to live with her. I've tried to ease my conscience by telling myself that I wasn't really ashamed of Mama like my brothers were. Or that I wasn't cheap, like another sister. I DID buy her things (which she never really needed or enjoyed much.) But it's too late now. I hope Mama forgives me.

CAN'T SLEEP

Abby, Can't Sleep was my sister. I'm the one Mama went to live with.

It's too late for me to tell my sister that Mama did forgive her. Mothers always do. But I hope you will print this again for those for whom it's not yet too late.

THE OLDEST

DEAR OLDEST: Consider it done. It's always later than we think.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm some kind of nut, but I can't find the answer in any book and don't want to show my ignorance by asking someone I know. I'm a grown woman and probably should know the answers, but here goes:

Is it true that horses sleep standing up? Someone said they did, but I didn't know whether he was serious or not.

STUPID QUESTION

DEAR QUESTION: First, no question is stupid if it's sincere. Second, all horses are able to "lock" their legs with very little muscle strain, which enables them to sleep standing up if they so desire. However not all horses sleep this way. Some prefer to lie down. (It's about fifty-fifty.) At least my animal expert has so informed me, and he got it straight from the horse's mouth.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister and her husband have done something to grievously hurt me.

They live a great distance from us, and I used to write to them faithfully every week. Now I have stopped writing because of what has happened, but my husband has now started to write to them regularly.

I think this is wrong of him. Don't you think that out of loyalty to me, my husband should take my part and be on my side?

HURT IN IOWA

DEAR HURT: Loyalty need not necessarily include taking on the enemies of one's spouse. You don't say what these people did to hurt you, but apparently your husband wasn't as grievously hurt by it as you were.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

NEW CHRISTY MINSTRELS were presented in concert by the Community Concert Association of Kingston and performed to a near capacity house. Meeting prior to concerttime were New Christy members and members of the Association.

The American family is shrinking, with a large number of couples considering the possibility of having only one child.

Is the only child necessarily a spoiled child? A superbrain? A maladjusted person who will find sharing and cooperation painfully difficult?

These are some of the notions that linger from books and films featuring obnoxious little kids who usually turned on their indulgent parents in later life, as did Mildred Pierce's child in the famous Joan Crawford film. These are some of the ideas that plague couples who feel they can't afford or cope with more than one child.

Noted child psychiatrist Dr. Peter Neubauer, director of the New York Child Development Center and president of the International Association for Child Psychiatry, believes a single child needn't be unhappy or unbearable.

Dr. Neubauer is quick to point out that when we discuss the only child as a problem child we suggest that children from larger families are relatively free of problems. We should not over-idealize the situation of a child amongst other children.

Having siblings does help to teach one to share the access to parents and to possessions. But siblings face other disadvantages, including favoritism. If Jane has a brother and a sister, is she the favorite who may face guilt feelings because her siblings are not loved as much? If she is not the favorite, will she nurture feelings of resentment, jealousy, inferiority?

Keeping in mind that child child care is, as Dr. Neubauer describes it, "a most difficult task, one which is never easy," what special precautions should the parents of an only child take?

First, one must not make that child the center of one's universe. The parents of an only child will have to make a conscious effort to have other outlets for their dreams, so that the pressure of parental expectations and disappointments does not impair their child's growth.

Family Lib

The challenge of an only child

Neubauer would have all parents remember, "A child is not just there to satisfy you."

If the child of a large family may suffer from too much exposure to kids, and not enough opportunity to partake in adult thoughts and culture, the only child has the opposite problem. Dr. Neubauer advises parents to provide the only child with early and frequent experience in interacting with other children. The tendency towards early schooling, the proliferation of mother-toddler groups and neighborhood play groups is making this task easier.

There are special challenges to raising an only child, but they are challenges which thoughtful parents can overcome.

ABOUT ANTIQUES

On Bandboxes

Back about 1830, it was fashionable in North America for genteel young ladies to carry with them when travelling a small, light, cylindrical box known as a Bandbox. Designed to hold articles of attire such as hats, gloves and other personal effects, these attractive and colorful little boxes also provided a handy container for storing such items at home.

Bandboxes were usually made from very thin sheets of wood. Thinly sliced spruce was bent around to form the oval sides, and was attached to a bottom and lid cut from a pine sheet. In less expensive models, pasteboard was sometimes substituted for wood. The outside surface was covered with block-printed paper and the inside lined with newspaper — which can provide an excellent method of establishing a Bandbox's date. Most examples found are approximately 15 inches in height.

The decorations on Bandboxes were often very colorful, and fine examples of primitive art. Scenes sometimes depicted historical events and well-known views, everyday life of the times, oriental themes, the events of famous people, and often just floral designs or patterns. Similar boxes were used in Europe but were seldom so delightfully colored and patterned as their American counterparts.

As you would imagine, antique Bandboxes are scarce, due to their age and fragile construction.

HOME ECONOMICS (Extension Service)

ALTERNATIVES TO SUGAR

White granulated sugar can be replaced by other sweeteners in cookies, cakes, and quick breads. The substitute sweeteners should replace from one-fourth to no more than one-half the granulated sugar called for in the recipe, says Louise K. Breitung, Extension Home Economist.

In place of one cup of white granulated sugar you may use:

- 1 cup well packed brown sugar OR
- 1 cup honey and reduce liquid by one-fourth cup OR
- one cup corn syrup and reduce liquid by one-third cup OR
- One and one-fourth cup maple syrup and reduce liquid by one-half cup OR — one cup molasses and reduce liquid by one-fourth cup (also add one-half teaspoon baking soda to breads, cakes and cookies).

Before making large batches of any baked product using substitutions, try a single batch to make sure you like the results.

Economics and health are two good reasons to reduce your family's intake of sugar. Here are some suggestions:

- Try other kinds of snacks — fresh fruit, crackers, pretzels, popcorn, fruit juices, raw vegetables, raisins.
- Keep a jug of water in the refrigerator in place of sugar-sweetened soda.
- Take the sugar bowl off the table or use a smaller spoon in the sugar bowl.

St. Patty's Brunch for Your Friends

Toast the top o' the morning on St. Patrick's Day with a convivial brunch for some favorite friends. Shamrock party invitations urging the gals and guys to observe the wearin' of the green will put everyone in a party mood. Set your table with shamrock paper party goods and your cleanup will be a breeze!

This Blarney Brunch Bake is easy on the budget and bursting with good things to eat... golden kernels of corn, hearty coin-cliced sausages, succulent sliced mushrooms, bright green pepper and Swiss cheese. A package of refrigerator crescent rolls form the easy-to-do crust.

Greet your guests with hot mulled cider and embellish your brunch menu with a platter of fresh fruit or a lime green shamrock salad. If your St. Pat's plans call for a cocktail party instead of brunch, the Blarney Brunch Bake is great served hot from the oven as bit-size appetizers.

Blarney Brunch Bake

One 10-oz. package whole kernel corn frozen in butter sauce

One-half of one 10-oz. package smoked sausages, coin sliced

One 2 1/2-oz. jar sliced mushrooms, drained

One-quarter cup finely chopped onion

One 8-oz. package refrigerator crescent rolls

Two cups shredded Swiss Cheese

Four eggs, beaten

One cup milk

Two tablespoons chopped green pepper

One teaspoon salt

One-half teaspoon oregano, crushed

Cook corn according to package directions. Open pouch and drain butter sauce into small skillet. Add sausage, mushrooms and onion; saute until sausage is lightly browned and onion is translucent. Lightly grease a 9 x 13-inch baking pan. Unroll refrigerator rolls and pat into pan to form a crust about 1/2 way up the sides of the pan. Spread shredded Swiss cheese over the crust; top with sauteed mixture. Combine eggs, milk, green pepper, salt and oregano; stir in corn. Spoon over cheese and sauteed mixture. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serves 8 or makes about 4-dozen appetizers.

Some Food Tips

Textured Pan Breads

Make these delicious textured breakfast, brunch or snack breads pancake-style. Mix up a standard pancake recipe, substituting whole wheat flour for the all-purpose kind. Add one-half cup chopped California walnuts, one-third cup raisins or chopped dates, and grated peel from one medium lemon. Bake in one-fourth cupfuls. Good eating "as is", or spread with butter or cream cheese and preserves or honey.

Toasty Cornbread

Next time you serve a simple meal featuring cheese, try this bread idea. Make cornbread from a favorite recipe or a quick mix, adding chopped California walnuts before baking. Cut cornbread into squares, split and toast. Serve hot with butter.

Walnut Scrambled Eggs
Give scrambled eggs extra heartiness and crunchy appeal by stirring in chopped toasted California walnuts while cooking. A tablespoon of walnuts to every 2 eggs is a good measure.

You Can Make Wine at Home and it's Legal!

Maybe you didn't know it but you can — completely legally! make your own wine at home. What's more, Uncle Sam says you can produce up to 200 gallons of the beverage, tax free, each and every year for your family's consumption. That's about 1,000 bottles and, unless you have a very large family or a VERY big thirst, it should be a sufficient quantity to hold you for a full 12 months.

There are now hundreds of thousands — probably millions — of home winemakers happily practicing their favorite hobby in all sections of the United States and Canada. And every one of them, it sometimes seems, has his or her own "special" secret recipe that's guaranteed (at least in the mind of its owner) to create a fermented drink which is obviously superior to anything anyone else might produce.

Pay no mind to such claims. A few experiments will show you that — after only a few tries — you can brew up absolutely horrible, passable, and surprisingly good wine right along with the rest of your fellow alchemists. And then it's only a matter of time until you discover that cleanliness (the elimination of random bacteria and the cultivation of the strains you want) is the REAL secret of transforming almost anything that will ferment into "better than average" wine.

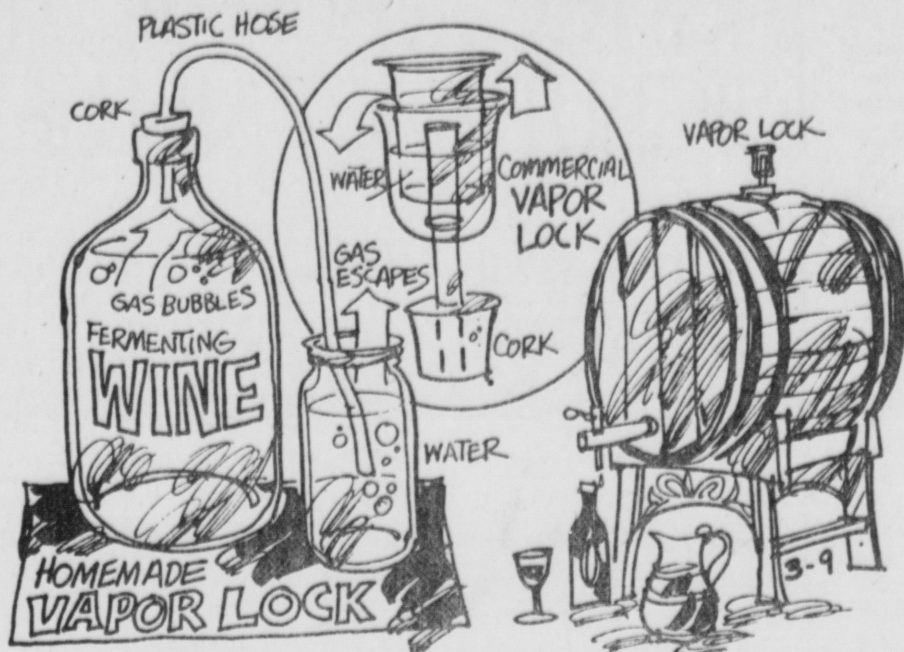

And I do mean "almost anything". Grapes, pears, peaches, plums, blackberries, cherries, strawberries, clover, potatoes, tomatoes, carrots . . . virtually any fruit, vegetable, or herb which contains simple sugars can be turned into wine. You can even make the beverage out of honey. Such a wine is called "mead" and is supposed to have been the drink of the Roman and Greek gods.

Gary Miller, one of Mother's readers, has developed his own simplified method of making mead and he says, "My recipe is guaranteed to drive dedicated winemakers up a wall, but it does produce results. Anyway, it's a beginning and beginnings are the most important part."

Gary says to get a gallon glass (plastic will do) jug, clean it out well, and wash the container with soap (not detergent). Then rinse the jug with a little baking soda dissolved in water and, finally, rinse it again — thoroughly — with clean water.

Then put a pint and a half to two pints of honey in the container (the more honey, the stronger the wine), fill it with warm water, and shake. Add a pack or cake of yeast — the same kind you use for bread — and leave the jug uncapped and sitting in a sink overnight. Expect the brew to foam up and get sticky.

After the workings quiet down a bit, put a top on 'em . . . but NOT a solid top. What you want is something that allows the gas to escape from the jug (so it won't explode) without letting air (which can turn the wine to vinegar) get in.

One way to do the job is to run plastic or rubber tubing from the otherwise sealed mouth of the container, and let the free end of the hose hang into a glass or bowl of water. Or, if you prefer, you can make a loop in the tubing, pour in a little water, and trap it in the loop to act as a seal.

With that accomplished, put the container of fermenting brew away for about two weeks until it's finished with the necessary transformation of sugar into alcohol. The wine will be ready to bottle when bubbles stop coming to its top. Old wine bottles sealed with corks are best and the mead will be ready to drink in about a month.

Once you've tasted your mead, you may well want to try this continent's most traditional of all wines: the one made from dandelions. And that should be easy, since the dandelion season is almost upon us.

Early in the morning — when the dew is still on the flowers — pick one gallon of perfect, open dandelion blossoms. Put the blossoms in a two-gallon or larger open crock and pour boiling water over them. Cover the container with cheesecloth and let it sit at room temperature for three days. Then squeeze all the juice out of the flowers, throw them away, and save the fluid.

Pour the liquid into a big enameled pot and add three pounds of brown sugar, three or four lemons (juice, skin, seeds, and all, chopped up together), and three or four oranges (chopped up just like the lemons).

Place a lid on the pot and boil the mixture for 30 minutes, cool it to lukewarm, pour the fluid into the crock, and add one and a half or two packages or tablespoons of yeast.

Cover the brew with cheesecloth and let it "work" for two or three weeks until the bubbling stops. Filter through fresh cheesecloth and bottle.

The wine will be ready to drink immediately, but this continent's pioneers traditionally kept their dandelion wine and drank it in the winter. They called the drink "bottled summer sunshine" and claimed it tasted better when the ground was covered with snow.

Hmm . . . Momma's Making Bread Today!

Dear Heloise:

During these days of trying to conserve energy and power, I have found a way to conserve both in the kitchen. I am one of those fortunate women possessed of four children (with healthy appetites), a mixer that will mix bread and a freezer in which to store things.

When I bake cookies, I always bake a double batch of each variety. I usually bake three varieties at the same time. I often bake bread, at least two different recipes on the same day that I do the cookies.

The bread rises rapidly when placed near the stove (which is hot) while the cookies are baking. My mixer handles the mixing of a double batch of cookies easily, as well as kneading the bread with no strain on my part.

When I am finished with the baking, I put the cookies in coffee cans — date, label, and freeze them. I seal the bread loaves in plastic bags (you can use saved bread bags and twisties) and freeze them too.

I clean up the kitchen and it is not necessary to make a big mess again for another month or two.

J. Leifke
And think how well your family is going to eat in the meantime! Great!

Dear Heloise:

pal. Of course it can also go nicely between hankies, undies, sheets, etc.

Mrs. F. Hines

Dear Heloise:

I know people have many ways of storing their sewing machine bobbins, but I think mine is very neat and practical. I use a piece of plastic foam and stick long pins or "slender" nails in at desired intervals and then drop the bobbin on over the pins.

The end threads can be wound around the top of the pin for easy access and to prevent tangling.

In this way, the bobbins are so easy to get to, and you can always tell what you have at a glance.

great container for ice cubes — actually holds three dozen.

On previous occasions I used plastic bags, but recently didn't have one in the house so substituted the sugar bag and found it keeps the cubes better and longer. They didn't stick together as easily.

Dear Heloise:

I use a Lazy Susan in my cabinet and bathroom, so I thought I would try one in my refrigerator.

I found I could get more things in a smaller space. And, besides, the Lazy Susan made it so much easier to get to what I wanted.

My son saw it, and suggested that I send the hint to you.

Letter of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

When I was a young girl in Germany and I would see a woman I admired for her poise, security and knowledge, someone would say, "She is thirty years old."

So I looked forward to being thirty all my life. Didn't get much out of those years because I knew all my clumsiness and insecurities would leave me at thirty.

Well, here I am, 31, and no magic thing has happened. On the outside I have changed a lot, but on the inside I still bite my nails . . .

Paris Is Big on Chemise

NEA (Paris)—One-thousand designers, showing some 30,000 garments, all geared to summer 1975 and spread over three levels at the 28th International Ready-to-Wear show, conjure up the silhouette of tomorrow.

While it may appear an anomaly now to think in terms of next summer, from the moment a manufacturer puts a line into production until the day it appears in the stores is necessarily a longish-term proposition. Thus, Paris' annual welcome to summer at the beginning of winter.

This "summer," it would seem that the era of "funny" clothes is finished. In these days of inflation women are not eager to spend money on nonessentials.

Summer 1975, therefore, will see a casual but feminine, soft and essentially flattering approach to fashion. It's goodbye to the messy look, replaced by a clean, tidy super-simplicity, with naive touches here and there. These are definitely fashions which will appeal to men.

Absolutely all the designers have produced their personal version of the chemise. It's not quite the sack of a few years ago, nor yet a smock, nor a shift. It is a definitely 1975 example of the waistless dress, with the fullness deftly handled by the big names in High Fashion, which makes all the difference.

Sometimes of almost tentlike proportions, the chemise obviously can only be carried off by the very young. But it also can be restrained with a belt. There are, however, more moderate styles which skim waistline and hips. And these can be worn by every type of figure and the not-so-thin without ridicule.

All this does not mean that waists are definitely out. There are new versions of the trim shirtwaist dress with deep, wide armholes and full elbow sleeves, or again, Kimono tops, long sleeves, short sleeves or no sleeves at

One favorite line is the skirt and long torso or jumper top, belted or not, which appeared in every possible version from cotton popline to printed crepe, in monotones, striped or printed.

Hems run the gamut from below the knees to maxi to ankle to shoetips — this last strictly for evening. Again a matter of the individual silhouette, but no woman can go wrong in opting for the below-the-knee length.

For summer evenings there are long printed or solid cotton skirts worn with very full, long-sleeved blouses in sheer striped, plain or printed cotton voile. For formal occasions there are bareback sinuous sheaths, long torso dresses and the beruffled romantic style.

Pockets are everywhere for every occasion. Large and small patch pockets, kangaroo pockets. On the wide chemises they contribute a sort of anchorage point to the fullness.

Coats follow the general dress silhouette — slim and straight or full and often belted, but always unlined.

Shorts and Bermudas are indicated for resort wear usually worn with a striped T-shirt and topped by a short-sleeved jacket. Swimsuits are barebacked and onpiece. Bikinis have dwindled to postage-stamp size.

all, belted at the normal waistline. Here skirts are either softly gathered or pleated, often topped by a cardigan or belted jacket which transforms them into two-piece affairs. These jackets have either long or short sleeves, are often striped when combined with a monotone dress.

There is also a return to the summer suit, softly tailored with slim, straight skirt and hip-length jacket, usually completed with a silk shirtwaist in a darkly contrasting color.

In the over-all picture for daytime, however, the dress is first favorite. And the general impression is the soft, limp look due to the fact that all linings have ruthlessly been discarded, also that the softest fabrics are favored.

Missouri Synod Controversy Forum

BISHOP RUDOLPH RESSMEYER

Area Church News

KINGSTON
An open forum on controversy in the Missouri Synod will be held today at Immanuel Lutheran Church, 22 Livingston Street.

Today's guest is the Rev. Rudolph P.F. Ressmeyer, bishop of the Eastern New York Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. He will preach at both the 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. services and conduct the the open forum from 9:15 a.m. to 10:15 a.m.

Immediately after the 10:30 a.m. service a pot luck dinner reception will be held.

Bishop Ressmeyer has been involved in many varied programs of the church. He is chairman of the Board of Control of Concordia College, Bronxville.

He has been a member of the Board of Public Relations of the Lutheran Church —

Missouri Synod and as chairman of the Divisional Committee of Public Relations of the Lutheran Council of the U.S.A.

In addition to numerous pastorates across the country, he is a member of the Board of Directors of the Atlantic District, and a member of the Board of Directors of the American Lutheran Publicity Bureau.

Lenten Chancel Drama

KINGSTON

The third in the series of Lenten Services under the auspices of the Kingston Area Council of Churches is scheduled for today 7:30 p.m. at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Wurts and Rogers Streets.

The Lenten devotions will center around a chancel play, entitled "In This Sign Conquer," produced by the members of the Luther League of Redeemer Church, according to the pastor, the Rev. Dr. David C. Gaise. In addition to the dramatic presentation, which will take place in the nave of the church, the Youth Choir, under the direction of Cecelia Keehn will sing related music.

The following young people are participating in the play: ynn Stoothoff, David Ryan, Richard Carlzon, James Stoothoff, Russell Bryant, Elaine Bach, Leslie Murray, Wayne Bryant, Julie Glass, Steven Mazzuca and Daniel Ramus.

The following couples have assisted and participated in the preparations: Mr. and Mrs. David Rylance, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Huber, Mr. and Mrs. John Hjelmeland and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mowry.

The Challenge of the Cross

Lenten program at a meeting of the Reformed Church Women of Old Dutch Church 7:30 P.m. Tuesday will be The Challenge of the Cross. Preparing for the presentation are Elaine Burnett (L) as the Evangel, with disciples Roseanne Browning, Gloria Simmons, Ann Kirkpatrick, Cindy Jones and Joan Bouton (kneeling). Musical selections will be presented by vocalist Margaret Roosa with piano accompaniment by Ruth Burke. A short business meeting will be held after the program which is open to women of the community. (Freeman photo)

New Priest Assigned to St. George Church

REV. DAMASKINOS GANAS

KINGSTON
The Rev. Father Damaskinos Ganas has been assigned to St. George Greek Orthodox Church, 294 Greenkill Avenue, Kingston.

Father Ganas was ordained to the priesthood on Nov. 24, 1974 by Archbishop Sakovas at Holy Cross Church in Brooklyn. Father Ganas came to America nine years ago from Larisa, Greece.

He is a graduate of the Holy Cross Theological School of the Hellenic College in Brookline, Mass. There he received his BA in History and Masters in Church History and Sacramental Theology.

Living Faith Singers Concert

KINGSTON
The Free Methodist Church of Kingston will present the Living Faith Singers in concert tonight 7 o'clock.

The concert will include youth oriented religious music, Ruth Vining, ventriloquist, with "Donny" will be featured during the concert also.

The Living Faith Singers are from Maplecreek and recently appeared on television for Muscular Dystrophy. The Rev. M. Dwight Sweezy extends an invitation to all ages to attend. The church is at Thomas and Sheryl Streets, Elmendorf Heights.

Organ Fund Planned

A group from the Clinton Avenue United Methodist Church meets around the organ to discuss plans for an Organ Fund. A church fair and ham dinner will be held March 15, with tickets available from Mrs. Thomas W. Miller and the public invited. Shown around the organ are (seated, L-R) Joan Langton and Carmela DeCamillis, and (standing, L-R) the Rev. Joseph Bailey, Don Weeks and Frank Sainsbury. (Freeman photo)

Lutheran Council Elects

KINGSTON

The Kingston Lutheran Council, which has been an informal cooperative venture of the four Lutheran Churches of Kingston, became more formally organized this week with the adoption of a constitution and election of officers, at a meeting held at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.

The Council, made up of the pastor and two laymen of each congregation, adopted a constitution which had been previously approved by each of the four church councils — Immanuel, St. Paul, Trinity and Redeemer.

Elected for two-year terms were president, Robert H. Delk Jr.; secretary, John F. Crews; and treasurer, Norman H. Luedtke. Deik appointed a special committee of lay people from the parishes to explore areas of cooperation in addition to those already covered by the council.

Tipping During Travels... No Fast-and-Hard Rules

By UPI

Who, what and when to tip is probably one of the most perplexing problems for Americans traveling in foreign lands.

For like death and taxes, tipping has become a fact of modern life that must be faced abroad as well as at home. And those gratuities can add up to a mighty nest sum — up to 20 per cent of the travel budget in some cases.

The word tips is said to be an acronym for the phrase: "To Insure Prompt Service" worked on bowls by waiters in 18th century London pubs.

But in today's world, tips are no longer a reward for quick, courteous or efficient services. Rather, tipping has become to be expected as part of his due by virtually everyone who performs an kind of service, from the dirty-faced shoeshine boy at the airport to the white-tie-and-tails concierge at the hotel.

The problem is that there are no fast-and-hard rules. Practices vary from continent to continent, from country to country and sometimes from county to county in the same country.

As a result, Americans unfamiliar with local currencies and customs often over-tip or under-tip, not only embarrassing themselves but any other Americans who should pass that way in the future.

So check out the situation with government tourist bureaus, travel agencies, airlines or shipping companies before leaving home.

Unlike the United States, where you generally tip individually as you go, most hotels and restaurants in Western Europe usually add on the bill the so-called service charges, ranging from 10 to 25 per cent, which they distribute to the help. But even then, guests are expected to dole out a little extra for porters, doormen, bellboys, elevator operators, chambermaids, bartenders, waiters, etc. The concierge, or hall porter, also expects to be rewarded for any special services he might have rendered, as does the maitre d' and wine steward.

If not sure that service charges have been included, ask the hotel clerk, waiter or bartender. Figure between 15 and 20 per cent if the charges are not on the bill.

Store especially created for Pioneer Days.

Also planned for March is the popular "Sap to Sugar Weekend" from March 7-9. Guests will see an illustrated talk on how sap is collected, visit Mohonk's sugarbush where the maple trees are tapped, watch the sap boiling in large outdoor kettles, and sample the sweetness of their labors at an afternoon tea or hot biscuits and maple butter.

For both events there is an all-inclusive package rate including activities, meals and lodging. Further information is available by contacting the Reservation Office, Mohonk Mountain House, New Paltz.

THE OLD MARKET

Bermuda's Old Market

A straw hat or bag to complement a Bermuda-made frock are but two of the more popular items visitors can find at the island's quaint and well-stocked shop. The Old Market in Somerset, a village at the western end of the island chain, is a shopper's potpourri which carries locally made goods alongside British and European clothing, antiques, china and crystal. See your local travel agent for details about flying to Bermuda aboard British Airways.

Balconied Chalet

Relaxed Living in This Home

By JACK McEENEY
PROVIDENCE, R.I.

The modern trend toward easy, relaxed living is evidenced by the mass exodus to the suburbs. To keep up with this trend, the designer decided on a low-cost chalet that would blend into any environment.

Today's presentation, called the 'Chalette' was created because of the many requests by readers for an economical dwelling that would be fresh in styling, yet offer good looks, comforts and conveniences required of today's homemakers. These demands were admirably fulfilled.

The expense factor is minimized because every precaution was taken to make use of inexpensive stock materials and applied in a manner that would save as much money as is possible during construction. And the working plans are so complete that the building could easily be handled as a do-it-yourself project which would further reduce the building costs. The 'Chalette' is a two-floor home. The first floor has a 14 by 24 living room that is open at the peak. The remainder of the first floor is covered by the balcony area over the kitchen, average size bedroom with double closets, full bath, stairs to the basement and a passageway to the exterior side door.

The livingroom fireplace is nothing less than a dream. A 36 by 26 inch firebox is finished with brick or fieldstone with a heavy wood mantel over. The chimney to the peak makes use of common fir plywood over the concrete chimney block. Included with the turned spindles on the kitchen bar and the paneled balcony panel-rail a remarkably pretty interior emerges.

The balcony area has been left open but if additional bedrooms are needed there is enough space for a large 14 by 17 foot bedroom or two smaller rooms that would measure 8 by 14 feet. The balcony of course would still show.

A wide choice of wood materials can be used for the 'cathedral' ceiling such as 3/4 inch plycord for a real rough finish (cost very little). Fir plywood, ship-lap boards, plaster or 1/2 inch plaster-board. Hollow gable beams, spaced at around six feet could also be easily installed if so desired.

The outside is finished with the traditional chalet board and batten inverted plywood instead of the protruding strips used with the boards. The gable ends have wood shakes on the upper part and a large false beam protrudes at each end (front and rear). Complete building plans (blueprints) of the 'Chalette' design are available at the moderate cost of $25, for the first set and $15 for each additional set, plus 50 cents to cover the cost of handling and postage, by writing to the Associated Blueprint Co., 595 Plainfield Street., Providence, R.I. — 02909 — Split-level, Cape, Colonial, two bedroom ranch, three bedroom ranch and raised ranch (Split-foyer) booklets are available for 50 cents, and a new popular home book for 75 cents.

'Ironside's' Wasn't

'Old Ironsides,' the American frigate that won fame in the War of 1812 because of its resistance to British shot, was not metal. It was fashioned of cedar, oak and pine.

Pleasant Divider

A screen of spaced western wood 2x2s makes an unobtrusive divider for hallway or between rooms.

Watch for Food Pests

Few experiences are as irritating as finding insects in cereal and other foodstuffs. And this is the time of year you may be noticing beetles in oatmeal or worms in the flour. Pests in stored food products can be eliminated systematically.

Many pantry pests are general feeders, feeding on nearly all types of dried vegetable and animal matter. These insects may be found in nut meats, crackers, macaroni, cheese, tobacco, flour, dry pet foods and baking products. Food packages that are slightly punctured should be immediately transferred into tight containers, lidded jars or coffee can-types will do.

Agricultural Report:

By William H. Palmer

Some of the insects found in milled grain and in flour products are saw-toothed grain beetle, and the confused flour beetle. Sometimes small moths appear in the home, and the homeowner usually suspects they're clothes moths. More often, though, they're either the Indian meal moth or the Mediterranean flour moth. Both are found in corn meal and flour.

All cereals and dried foods should be examined every few weeks for insects. Anything that has been on the shelf — opened or closed — for over three months should be checked closely. If an infestation or even signs of insect activity such as webbing or pellets are found, thorough and immediate action is necessary.

Dispose of infested foods. Then clean all storage areas. Food particles from occasional spills accumulate in cracks and crevices. Insects can feed and reproduce on such material and as newly-stored products are brought in, they also become infested. A vacuum cleaner does an excellent job of picking up dry particles from corners and crevices. Then wash the shelves with a strong detergent.

Foods in open containers that aren't obviously infested could be treated by heating or freezing to kill any eggs or insects that may be in them. Heating in the oven at a temperature of 130°F. for a half hour, or freezing at 0°F. for four days will kill any pests in the foods. Infested dried fruits can be placed in cheesecloth bags and dipped into boiling water for six seconds.

Currently-registered insecticides approved by the Environmental Protection Agency for pantry pests are sometimes used after all infested foods are disposed of and the storage area is thoroughly cleaned. Before using an insecticide, read the label for directions and precautions. Then remove all foods from cupboards or pantry.

Ready-to-use pressurized aerosol spray cans or sprays are available. Malathion, pyrethrins and piperonyl butoxide all are EPA approved insecticides.

To assist homeowners with insect problems around the home, Agricultural Division, Cooperative Extension, offers a free diagnostic service to properly identify insects before any chemicals are recommended. Leaflets on control for grain beetles and flour moths are available free of charge by writing to Cooperative Extension Office, 74 John Street, Kingston.

Most cereal pests are brought into homes in foods that were infested during storage. Before purchasing, check packages for breaks or signs of insect activity, and store your products in tight-fitting containers when you get them home.

Yard 'n Garden

By BILL MEACHEM

Former Editor of Home Garden Magazine
READING A CATALOG

When the seed and nursery catalogs start arriving in the mail, I guess I'm no different from anyone else — I'd like to have one of everything.

It's only after we've enjoyed the lovely color photos and start reading that we really find out something about the plants — or seeds of plants — they are selling. Now, I don't mean all the "flowery" words like marvelous, exciting, outstanding, beautiful, etc. I mean the "real" words that describe the plant.

Some catalogs have the different types of plants separated into sections; others will be just an alphabetical listing of plants regardless of what kinds of flower they are. This brings us to the first descriptive words about the plant. They will be described as annual or perennial. Annuals are those kinds of garden flowers that I like to call the "summer flowers." They are started from seed in the spring, they bear flowers through the entire season and then their life cycle is completed.

Perennials are those plants that can be either started from seed or purchased plants, that are planted out and will continue to grow year after year. When you start perennials from seed it sometimes takes a year or so for the plant to become large enough to bear a flower resembling those you see in the catalog. Plants will flower quicker, which is why many gardeners prefer them over starting seeds.

The word "hybrid" has been around for many years and quite often is used loosely for plants of merit. When you see "F1" before the hybrid, though, it has a special meaning. This means that the plant came from two parents that are quite dissimilar to the resulting flower you are going to get. It also means that if you save the seed from this hybrid the resulting plants may also be completely different from the one you want — more like the parents.

When you look at the vegetable section in the seed catalog you will see a notation of a number of days. This indicates the time it takes either from sowing the seed or setting plants out in the open ground until the crop matures. Look at this number carefully. It can vary within the group, according to variety — some are slow, others are fast. Bear in mind that 72 days is more than two months' time.

Initials are often given in a rose catalog to indicate the type of growth of the plant. "Ht" means hybrid tea. This has single flowers to each stem and the bloom is quite large. "Flor." is sometimes used to indicate floribunda; a rose with clusters of smaller flowers. Then, "CL" is often used to tell you that it is a climber. And "Gran." is used to indicate grandiflora, which has clusters of flowers larger than the floribundas.

Then you will sometimes see an indication of the number of petals on a rose flower. Naturally, the more petals the flower has the fuller it will be. Then look for whether the bud is pointed or not. A pointed bud means that the rose opens gradually with the outside petals opening around a solid bud underneath. A flat flower will open suddenly with no inside center. The flat flowers are sometimes called "cabbage" roses because of the resemblance to the vegetable.

VOTE NOW — Cast your ballot for a U.S. National Flower. Write me at the address below. It can be a flower, tree or even a vegetable.

Disease resistance is sometimes written out, but in other cases it is abbreviated. On tomatoes, for instance, the letters VF means that the variety is resistant to verticillium and fusarium diseases. You may also see the additional letter N. This means it is resistant to nematodes.

Catalogs can tell you much about the plants you plan to grow. But be sure to read them — after you have enjoyed the pretty pictures.

Questions should be sent to Bill Meacham, c/o Johnson Wax, PO Box 3788, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Tub Recess Kit Solves Problem

"It seems like every house could use another bath."

Judy Johnson, home improvement director for Marlite paneling, adds that "you eventually run out of room, so you have to build in as many features as possible.

"For instance, the tub area can be given an entirely new look and a shower head added if one wasn't already installed. A tub-recess kit has been developed to make it easy for homeowners to spruce up the walls."

This "bath-in-a-box" kit includes one 5'x6" panel for the back wall, two 30"x6" panels for the side walls, pre-cut harmonizing moldings, caulking, nails, adhesive, and installation instructions. The complete kit comes in three packages, adhesive included.

"The kit contains all the parts and accessories needed to rejuvenate a standard five-foot tub recess. And the do-it-yourselfer can choose from a marblelike Neapolitan pattern, a subtle cloud-like Sarona pattern, or two interesting mural designs," Ms. Johnson notes.

Gossip Beat

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: If France's President isn't involved with actress Catherine Deneuve, then who is he hung up on? The Jet Set claims it is the beautiful Princess Domietta Hercolani whom Valéry Giscard d'Estaing goes out to see at night. And then there's that other fixture of the French nobility, a lady whose family goes back to the 12th century. She lives very near France's leader Numero Uno.

Q: Is it true that Ernest Hemingway's father also committed suicide by shooting himself? — G.G., Memphis, Tenn.

A: Yes, when he was ill and in financial trouble. Probably the strangest aspect of that suicide was Ernest, telling his sister Sunny, at the time, "I'll probably go the same way."

Q: Like everyone else I'm fascinated with Ellen Burstyn, who was in "The Last Picture Show" and "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore." But I can't seem to find out any personal details about her. How come?

A: K.L., Manchester, N.H.
A: The actress is becoming known as the "toughest interview in town." Ms. Burstyn's press agents have a lengthy list of questions that she absolutely will not answer including anything about her former husbands (three of them), her age (42), her children (one son, 13).

PARIS PAPARAZZI: Princess Caroline of Monaco is the latest victim of long lens spying. The 18-year-old daughter of Princess Grace and Prince Rainier was photographed for the weekly "Minute" clad only in her bra while doing sitting-up exercises at the family's Avenue Foch apartment.

Q: Would you explain how the Rosen sextuplets are cared for? Does their mother handle it alone? Has she other kids? — H.W., Cleveland, Ohio.

A: The six little Rosens (three boys and three girls) were a year old Jan. 11. They are cared for by their British-born, 25-year-old mother and three nurses. Father Colin is a traveling salesman. The Rosens have two other children, Samantha, 8, and Anthony, 6. The family lives in Cape Town, South Africa.

WOMEN'S LIB: So who says women aren't forging ahead in films? The sister of the Shah of Iran, Princess Ashraf, has had the entire Iranian cinema industry turned over into her pretty little hands. Long a movie buff, now the Princess will produce and provide financing for movies to be made in Iran and out. Those petrodollars should make big box office!

Low Blood Good Diet

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have hypoglycemia and would greatly appreciate any information you could send me about it. My oldest brother is a diabetic. My endocrinologist has me on a 100-calorie high protein diet.

DEAR READER — The interesting thing about your diagnosis is your brother's diabetes. Sometimes hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) precedes the development of diabetes (high blood sugar.)

In these instances the defect is really in the islets of Langerhans of the pancreas, the place where insulin is produced. Normally when the amount of sugar (glucose) in your small intestine rises after eating sweets the islets release an increased amount of insulin. Your body literally releases whatever amount of insulin you need to control the level of your blood sugar.

When the islets are defective they may release insulin too late, long after the peak sugar load. The result is the extra insulin, released into the bloodstream after the blood glucose level has already started to fall. The extra insulin drives the level lower still and hypoglycemia develops.

As the islets become more defective, they fail to produce enough insulin. The defect literally progresses from producing too late to also producing too little. Then you have diabetes.

There are many factors re-

lated to low blood sugar, some are endocrine and others are related to diet. A lot of people get that diagnosis who have other conditions, including anxiety. For more detailed information write to me at P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019 and ask for the booklet on low blood sugar. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

It is common to put people with this condition on a high protein diet. I presume your doctor thinks you are also overweight and is restricting your calories for that purpose. In general, even for patients with low blood sugar, I prefer a well-balanced diet, with plenty of bulk and relatively low in fat. So you need to be careful where you get the protein, since some protein foods are loaded with fat.

The Ol' King or Jack Gambit

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Some old timers will remember Frank Stockton's story, "Lady, or the Tiger?" The reader is left with an impossible problem to solve.

Today's hand was presented as an example of an impossible bridge problem. South wins the first heart and cashes his ace and king of diamonds. His next play is the deuce of spades. West follows low. Which spade should he play from dummy? If either opponent holds both the ace and queen it makes no difference. If the honors are split, the correct guess allows South to make five notrump. The wrong guess finds South in the ashcan.

We have taken advantage of you readers by carefully showing question marks in place of the East-West spades, but we can assure you that there is a correct play here.

The correct play is to play the jack or 10. The reason for this is that some West players would put the ace if they held it, on the theory that South held just two diamonds and one spade. Not much percentage since most defenders would figure out South's exact distribution, by assuming that with 6-4-2-1 South would

Colony seals in gold

Seals of Colonies Being Struck

By MORT REED

The seals of the 13 original colonies are now being struck in 23-Karat gold, by the Island of Staffa, a freehold off the coast of Scotland. The series is issued to commemorate the United States Bicentennial in 1976.

All 13 seals are reproductions of the originals used by the colonies in 1776 to seal the compact that led to the founding of the United States of America.

Each was researched by a team of experts led by Gerhard P. Grahl, Director of the Flag Research Center of Winchester, Mass., and a leading authority on seals and flags of the world.

"In preparing to issue the gold Seal stamps, which are struck like coins, rather than printed, researchers discovered a lost page in American history," Grahl said. "The official Seal stamps are a particularly important issue. Many of the original seals represented in the collection were damaged. Some were no longer existent and had to be painstakingly reconstructed from the impressions they left on legal documents of the period."

When the colonies broke with Britain they required seals to authenticate their public business. In tracing down and issuing these seals now, Grahl saved one facet of our national history from extinction. The seals exist nowhere else in a single collection. The stamps are hand made from sheets of 23-Karat gold.

The issue marks the first time a gold stamp series has been minted to commemorate anything American or been produced in a single limited and numbered edition.

In the order of their entrance to the Union the Colonies were Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts Bay, Maryland, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginia, New York, North Carolina and Rhode Island. Each stamp measures two by one-and-a-half inches and sells for $20. Interested readers may write Mr. Stafford Calvin, Calhoun's Collector Society of St. Paul, Minn.

Astrographs for Today and Monday

Sunday, March 2, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will be difficult to help sort out another's problems if this person isn't completely frank about all ramifications.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This will be a tricky day for you in handling matters involving partners or close associates. Collective goals are vague.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't start projects unless you're sure they can be finished. Double-check to be sure you have all the materials required.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There will be some complications surrounding your social activities today. Don't be caught in the undercurrents. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, headaches are likely to emanate from domestic sources. Keep a watchful eye on the kids or others in your charge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The spirit will be willing but the flesh weak when transforming your plans into direct physical action today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There are opportunities about you presently, but it isn't likely you'll use the correct procedures to capitalize on them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll settle for second best regarding something you want to buy. You're too impatient to wait for your first choice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Yesterday your hunches could be depended upon, but not today. If making important moves, deal only in cold, hard facts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll get a little miffed with a friend over something material. It's trivial, but the way it's handled will annoy you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't achieve as much as you're capable of today. You'll have too many irons in the fire. Settle on priorities.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be tempted to talk about your plans to those who aren't in a position to help. Their suggestions could confuse you.

March 2, 1975

Advantages and opportunities will come to you this year through social contacts with reliable, influential individuals. Doors will be opened for you.

Monday, March 3, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An unexpected break will be coming your way. It will clear an obstacle and permit you to take positive measures to capitalize on your luck.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An influential friend will help you attain something you couldn't achieve without this person behind you. Don't think you did it alone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you have a better method of doing something where you work is concerned, now's the time to bring it to the attention of your superiors.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) One with whom you pal around socially will put you on the track of something profitable by sharing some inside information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You've been hesitant to act on something where you know the deck is stacked against you. You wrongly feel you'd be taking unfair advantage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you and your mate agree should be done about a family matter will be realized only if you assume charge yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't take things for granted today where finances are concerned. What is easy to get now may prove difficult later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A friend will offer you something. You must take advantage of it promptly, while she's in a giving mood.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) For the past few days you've been semidependent upon others. Today the control of important situations is back in your hands.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be getting some good news that will be of material benefit to you. It could be partial repayment of an old debt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't rely upon others to make things happen for you today. Be assertive, especially where you can improve your position materially.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be generally lucky early today, but an important achievement will be gained through personal effort rather than through chance.

March 3, 1975

Wisdom you've gained from your past experiences will be put to profitable use this year. Advancement and greater prestige in your field is likely.

Today: Breaks in Car

Tax Tips From CPAs

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of five articles prepared by Thomas P. Martin, president of the Mid-Hudson Chapter Society of Certified Public Accountants, on tax tips. Today's article deals with possible tax breaks hidden in the family car.

The family automobile, with its inflated fuel and repair bills and recurrent charges for tires, dent removal, insurance, etc., may be a drag on the budget sometimes but it can look pretty good at income tax time, if it qualifies you for tax savings.

For example, if the car was bought during 1974, the sales tax paid on it can generally be taken as a federal income tax deduction — over and above the standard sales tax deductions shown in the tables, which are based on average purchases.

If the car bought in 1974 is used at least partly for business purposes, it may also make you eligible for the investment tax credit, which lets you subtract a percentage of the purchase price from your tax bill.

There can also be a deduction for the miles driven on business, charity or medical transportation errands. The standard deduction for business driving has been raised to 15 cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles and 10 cents a mile after that. The deduction for driving while engaged in charity work or going to and from doctors' offices, treatment centers, etc. is up to 7 cents a mile.

If your employer compensates you for your business driving but pay less than the deductible amount, you can deduct the difference. If he pays 12 cents per mile, deduct 3 cents.

If your costs of business driving are higher than 15 cents a mile, you are permitted to deduct the actual itemized costs, in which case it will be necessary to keep detailed records of car expenses and miles driven for business and non-business purposes. A car diary is helpful not only in computing taxes but also in showing when maintenance expenses have climbed to a point where perhaps the car should be junked or sold.

Another car-related tax deduction is that for state and local gasoline taxes paid. Here again, you may refer to the diary for non-business mileage driven, then find in the tables the gasoline tax rate that applies.

Not related to the family automobile but applying to such off-the-road vehicles as snowmobiles, tractors and motorboats is the federal tax credit on certain fuels and lubricants. The credit is small, though — two cents a gallon on gasoline — so it's hardly worth taking unless your volume of consumption is very high.

If, as a recent car purchaser, you took one of these stretched out (up to four years) auto loans, you have one further consolation at tax time: The CPAs point out that your seemingly endless interest payments also are tax deductible, along with any other interest you may have paid.

(NEXT: CPAs reassure taxpayers fretting about IRS audits.)

Johnny Winter in Live Concert Comes Back

By DAVID RENSIN

SAN FRANCISCO (KFS) — Armed with a repertoire of hot locks and a legendary, charismatic personality, a relaxed-bucareful Johnny Winter faced a record Winterland crowd and managed to satisfy both his older, more faithful fans and the newer followers attracted by the success of his younger brother Edgar.

Ever since his auspicious debut in the mid-'60s, Winter has remained in name — if not in fact — a prince among mere pretenders. Yet, like Eric Clapton, drugs toppled him from guitar-dom's Mount Olympus, and he has been forced to renegotiate the comeback trail.

"His initial return tour was a major disappointment," conceded Winter's manager

Steve Paul. "Everything was sloppy, and Johnny was trapped into playing everyone's favorite numbers instead of doing what he wanted to do." This time around, however, Winter seemed able to follow his musical mind wherever it led, discarding once-automatic renditions of older songs to dwell more on new material.

ROLLING STONE

Backed by Radny Jo Hobbs on bass, Floyd Radford on rhythm lead guitar and Richard Hughes on drums. Wisely, Winter immediately allowed Radford the freedom to play extended leads, which in turn forced the albino axeman to maintain a similarly excellent level throughout song and set and provided an ecstatic crowd with more than enough calisthenics to satisfy their hunger.

Continuing with songs from the new John Dawson Winter III album (Blue Sky Pz 33292), the band followed Rick Derringer's "Rock With Me" with "Stranger," a slower, original number that changed the performance's pace while permitting Winter and Radford to stretch out through the song's fluidity. After a blazing "Bonnie Maronie," the band launched into three extended blues-rock jams which dragged a bit even as they showcased Winter's slide work and the group members' individual talents. However, they recovered with "Johnnie B. Goode," a rouser that inspired some agitated fans to urge Winter on by repeatedly echoing the refrain — "Go, go, go Johnnie go!"

Winter came back for two much-demanded encores (lighted matches, thunderous applause and the usual howling), one of which was the Stones' "Jumpin' Jack Flash." "Rock & Roll Hootchie Coo" was conspicuously absent, but there were few calls for the time.

Backstage after the show, Winter half-complained that despite the crowd's favorable reaction, he wasn't totally satisfied with the evening's performance. "I'd say the show rated about seven on a scale of 10," he judged. "Yesterday when we opened the tour in Sacramento, it was a 12. Something was missing, but you can bet I'll find out what and play my fingers off tomorrow."

It's Winter Carnival Time

Plans for the ever-popular Kingston High School Winter Carnival are finalized by Robert Newkirk (L), chairman; Ellen Lane, Student Association vice president; Linda Turco, treasurer and Ron Segal, president. The annual event will be held March 8 at the Kate Walton Fieldhouse. Booths and games will be in operation 1 to 5 p.m. Evening entertainment 8 to 12 will include music by the popular Patroon Hill. ## NYHEAC Study Grants Best Ever

ALBANY — The New York Higher Education Assistance Corporation (NYHEAC) anticipates the best year in its history with more than $171.6 million dollars in student loans expected to be written in conjunction with New York financial institutions before the fiscal year ends on March 31, 1975.

NYHEAC President J. Wilmer Mirandon stated that the surprising rate of student borrowings provided by banks in a tight money market indicates that dollar value will exceed the prior peak of $167,419,745 set in the 1972 fiscal year.

Third quarter summaries at NYHEAC report 35,055 student loans worth $47,771,561 were written, bringing the nine-month total to 110,517 student loans valued at $152,354,355.

"It would appear that the Corporation will not receive requests for as many individual loans as it did in the 1972 high when 153,283 were processed. In view of new State grants, including the Tuition Assistance Program, we believe this year's total will be close to 127,000, including 64,000 first-time loans. However, the average anticipated loan amount for this fiscal year will be $1,315 compared to $1,252 in 1974," Mirandon stated.

The NYHEAC Chief Executive pointed out that by counseling students directly and working out reasonable arrangements the Corporation has been able to avert 55 per cent of default claims received and to return the loans to the lenders for completion of repayments. The purchase of defaulted loans by NYHEAC is down 7 per cent or lower by one million dollars, in comparison with a similar period in the peak default fiscal year of 1974, and default dollars are running 6.5 per cent of all matured loan dollars.

He said, "Defaults are not losses but delinquencies subject to reasonable workout over a period of time. The vast majority of student borrowers are taking care of their obligations. Even those in default are paying the Corporation more than $300,000 a month, which is twice as much as previously."

"Although we advocate that students seek loans only after all other scholarship and tuition awards are exhausted, it would appear that increased loan activity may be caused primarily by inflated costs and a reduction in the family contribution a student can expect. There is also an increasing realization by students as to the long-term advantages of low-interest loans that permit the average borrower to take monthly repayments of about $45 and repayments can be extended for as long as 10 years," Mirandon said.

Under Federal regulations, students coming from homes where the income is $15,000 or less after making certain standard adjustments may obtain the loans which are interest-free until they complete college. Then the loan repayment is based on a 7 per cent interest.

For students coming from families whose adjusted income is between $15,000 and $30,000, the State now pays four-sevenths interest on the standard 7 per cent loan with the student paying 3 per cent from the time the loan is authorized. After the student graduates, the loan plus the 7 per cent interest is paid by the student.

NYHEAC was organized in 1958, and it has guaranteed to 704,389 New York students — one out of every five nationally in program — loans valued at $1.42 billion. Approximately $489 million dollars has been repaid by students with a similar amount now in the process of repayment. Students still in college hold the remaining $442 million dollars in loans. To date each loan has cost the State about $67 including all administrative expenses. All default losses and interest subsidies without considering the fact that the program attracts more than $40 million in annual Federal interest subsidies into New York which create additional State revenue.

Foreign Travel for Area Students

KINGSTON — Foreign travel seems much in vogue with area high school students these days.

Kathleen N. Colden, daughter of Mrs. Elsie N. Colden of 42 Sycamore Street, Kingston, has just returned from a 10-day tour of Spain with the European Language Association.

Kathleen, a sophomore at Kingston High School, visited Madrid, Granada, Cordova and Seville while on the tour.

Last year she won an award in Spanish. This is her third year of Spanish and she found the tour helped perfect her language skills.

Anticipating foreign travel is Jacques Hryshko, a Red Hook High School student. He will spend 11 months as an American Field Service visitor to a foreign country.

AFS International Scholarships in New York City has announced that Jacques, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hryshko, Academy Hill Road, Red Hook, has been selected as a guaranteed finalist for the 1975-76 Americans Abroad School Year Program.

He is a senior at Red Hook and is captain of the wrestling team, stage manager of the forthcoming musical, Charlie Brown, a member of the yearbook staff, high school band and drama club.

Youth in the News — Honors

Dean's list honors continue to dominate Youth in the News as reports pour in from area colleges.

Two Ulster County students and one from Northern Dutchess were included in the fall semester dean's list at Clarkson College, Potsdam.

They are:

Shelley K. Deyo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Deyo of Box 267, Kerhonkson, a sophomore in civil and environmental engineering.

Hyatt Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Wilson of 7 Pleasant Ridge Drive, West

Hurley, a senior in industrial distribution.

Denis W. Larkin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Larkin, RD 1, Red Hook, a freshman in mechanical engineering.

Ulster County students named to the first semester dean's list at Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford, West Hartford, Conn., are Sylvia Kathleen Yhlen of Box 205A, Hurley and Sharon Louis Kuhns of Mary Avenue, Lake Katrine.

Debra Ann Koehn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Koehn of Esopus Creek Road, Saugerties has been named to the dean's list at State University College at Farmingdale, where she is enrolled in the dental hygienist program. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Trans of High Woods and Mr. and Mrs. John Stoy of Oakledge, Saugerties.

Linda DeRose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. DeRose of RD 7, Box 111, Kingston, achieved dean's list rating at Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo, Mich., for the fall semester.

Lisa Warnecke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Warnecke of Kingston, has been named to the Dean's List at Virginia Polytechnic Institute for the fall semester. Miss Warnecke is a 1973 graduate of Kingston High School.

Kingstonian Alan F. DeForest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlow F. DeForest of 126 Arnold Drive was named to the dean's list at Norwich University, Northfield, Vt., for the first semester. He is a senior at Norwich.

Kimberly Thayer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thayer of Ashokan, has been named for the third consecutive year to the dean's list at Drew University with a 3.8 cumulative average. She is majoring in pre-med and psychology.

RVC Students in All-Eastern Chorus

Leslie Brooks and Louis Padilla of Rondout Valley Central High School have been named to the All-Eastern Music Educators National Conference Chorus. The biennial meeting of the educators' conference sponsors band, chorus and choir, made up of high school students from 14 states. This year's event will be held in Philadelphia April 18-21. Both Miss Brooks and Padilla were members of All-State music groups, and thus eligible for the All-Eastern honors.

Music Exchange

KYSERIKE

Phase One of a musical exchange is underway for Rondout Valley High School Choir I members this weekend.

They are at Bethlehem Central High School as guests of the Bethlehem Choralists. Combined concerts with the two choirs and the Bethlehem Wind Ensemble are highlights of the weekend.

The Bethlehem group will visit Rondout Saturday, May 17 for a concert in the RVHS auditorium at 8 p.m.

Nostalgia Revisited

"NOSTALGIA . . . a longing for something far away or long ago." (Webster's New World Dictionary definition.) There is something almost nostalgic about that definition. Like "chauvinist" or "gay" or "grass," the word "nostalgia" has been imbued with new significance in the past few years. As more and more people begin exploring nostalgia, "far away" seems to keep getting closer, and "long ago" is becoming more recent.

Great-grand-aunt grows misty about Strauss waltzes, Grandpa about Nelson Eddy and Jeanette McDonald, and Grandma about Frank Sinatra. Mother remembers Elvis fondly, but to little brother, one suddenly discovers that Herman's Hermits and The Lovin' Spoonful constitute nostalgia, and the radio station plays "Kung Fu Fighting" as a goodie from the graveyard. Suddenly, nostalgia has caught up with today.

The nostalgia trend in clothes started (this time around, anyway) with those campy, funky ugly, 1930's dress and high heels (as in the Pointer Sisters) and the dressed-up look for men (as in The Great Gatsby). As the trend gained popularity, however, the number of marabou-trimmed dresses printed with big red roses began to run out, so we got into the 1950's, with full-circle skirts, saddle shoes, beanies with propellers on top, and tutti-frutti lipstick. (Sometimes, all at the same time, unfortunately.) Mother was surprised, as she headed for the trash with those hopelessly out-of-fashion needle-toe shoes, to find her daughter begging for them, since they were just the nostalgic touch she wanted for her latest outfit. But now we are informed by our six-year-old fashion expert that the nostalgia trend has brought bell-bottom pants and army shirts back in. We must have dozed off in the second act — we didn't realize that they had gone out yet.

There is even nostalgia for the bad times, such as wars. A sure sign of this is when the war re-emerges as entertainment comedy. The silent pictures contained humorous treatments of The Civil War and even World War I. A few years ago, TV audiences were able to laugh about the concentration camps of World War II. M-A-S-H has humorized Korea, and now we are waiting for a rib-tickling look at all the funny things that went on in Vietnam. Complete with a Viet Cong general called Park Ing Lot . . .

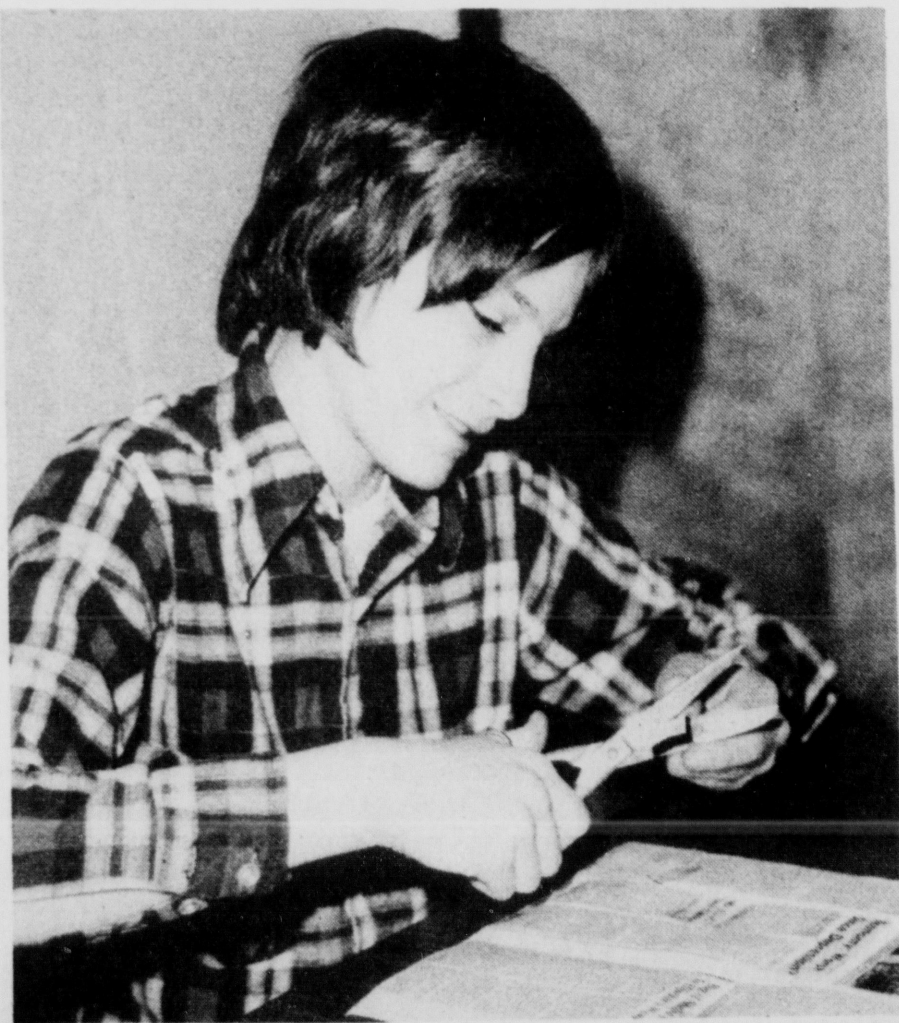

If your idea of a nostalgic car is a pink and black 1958 Chevy with a swept-wing trunk, don't be too surprised if your little brother is nostalgic for the "old-fashioned Volkswagen with the flat windshield." If you have fogged up 17 times over "Casablanca," try not to be shocked that the grade-school set considers "The French Connection" a movie that they don't make 'em like anymore.

Our past is getting closer to us all the time, with a resultant cheapening of our sense of heritage. There are African natives who can chant their family tree by memory, since before the day of Christ. Many American teens have trouble remembering even the names of all of their mother's and father's brothers and sisters. (In fact, some of them have trouble remembering the names of all of their mothers and fathers, but that's another story.) If all the microfilm in the world were to dissolve tomorrow, most of us would have a very hard time putting together any sort of family tree beyond our grandparents.

For some of us, old bi-planes may be a nostalgic sight, but to one toddler, nostalgia was, "They used to have men that walked on the moon when I was a little boy." Yes — and once upon a time, there was a moon that nobody had walked on, either.

Once upon a time, they had nickel candy bars. There's even a rumor that once, there were nickel candy bars that you could take five big bites out of. But nostalgia for one schoolgirl was "old-fashioned penny gum." She was too young to remember when the "old-fashioned enny gum" came scored down the middle, so you could chew half at a time.

Our world is growing closer, and our time is going faster. There are nations whose beginnings are lost in prehistoric times, yet our nation's bicentennial seems far from the present concerns. Our history and our present have merged; they sell Elvis Presley albums in antique shops and sometimes 1975 seems like a nostalgic movie of itself. They don't make them like this anymore.

Flamingo to Foolish Pleasure

HIALEAH, Fla. (UPI) — Unbeaten Foolish Pleasure made it nine in a row Saturday, capturing the $131,600 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah Park much as he chose.

Riding the light mahogany-colored champion as if he had nothing to worry about, jockey Jacinto Vasquez didn't make a move on Foolish Pleasure until the turn for the stretch. There he dropped in along the rail, gave his colt a hand push gossin and moved up to fourth.

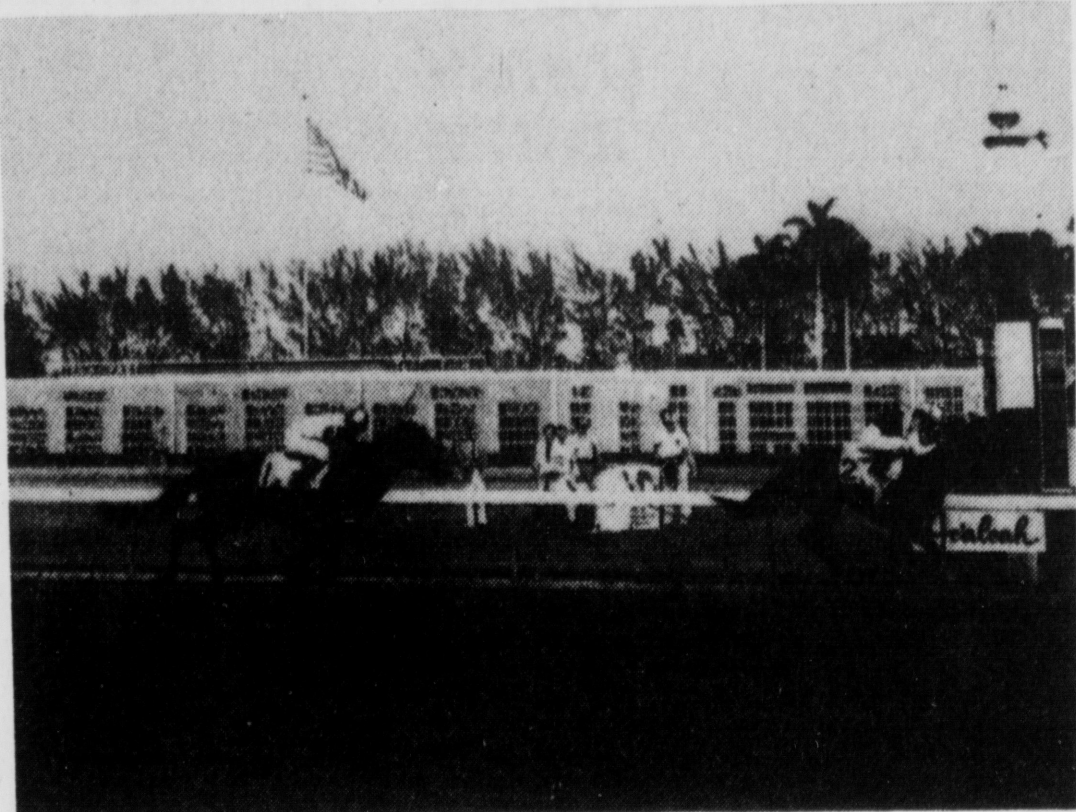

At the top of the long Hialeah stretch, with the crowd of some 26,000 cheering, Foolish Pleasure pulled out around the leaders. Vasquez rapped him on the shoulder left-handed to make him steer a straight course, and Foolish Pleasure quickly took the lead just outside the eighth pole.

He won going away by 1 1/4 lengths.

Darby Dan Farm's Prince Thou Art roared out on the outside by jockey Braulio Baeza to grab second money, three lengths in front of Somethingfabulous, ridden by Ernie Cardone, but neither menaced Foolish Pleasure.

The victorious Florida-bred son of What a Pleasure—FoolMe-Not, owned by John L. Greer of Knoxville, Tenn., thus cemented his favorite role for the upcoming Triple Crown classics. He was acclaimed the two-year-old champion last year and demonstrated he has graduated to the sophomore class without losing any of his speed.

An odds-on favorite of the crowd, Foolish Pleasure paid $2.80, $2.80 and $2.40 across the board. Prince Thou Art, an entry with stablemate Sylvan Place who finished fourth, returned $7 and $4.20.

FOOLISH PLEASURE OUTRUNS PRINCE THOU ART

Somethingfabulous was worth $4.40 for show.

Foolish Pleasure ran the 1 1/4 miles in the good time of 1:48.25 on a fast track. This was two seconds off the track record established by the older His Majesty in 1973. All 10 colts in the Flamingo field carried 122 pounds.

Winning $85,540 for his Flamingo victory, Foolish Pleasure, a $20,000 purchase at the 1973 Saratoga sale, swelled his bankroll to $375,335.

After the race, Vasquez reported "I wasn't worried" in the early running of the race as first Ascetic, with jockey Mike Hole, then Somethingfabulous set a brisk pace.

"He was moving on his own down the backside," Vasquez said. "I never really asked him to run (then)."

"Near the wire he started relaxing. He wasn't all out." It was Foolish Pleasure's first race beyond a mile and first time around two turns. He passed the tests with Greer's black and white colors flying.

The 76-year-old Tennessee banker, all smiles afterward, said "I'll never see another one like him."

Trainer Leroy Jolley said Foolish Pleasure's next assignment will be the $125,000 Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park on March 29.

Singh Takes Swift
NEW YORK (UPI) — Cynthia Phipps' Singh, with super-hot jockey Angel Cordero Jr. in the saddle, assumed command at the top of the stretch and went on to post a 3 1/2 length victory Saturday in the 74th running of the $58,100 Swift Stakes at Aqueduct.

Gallant Bob, the leading 3-year-old moneywinner thus far this year, led the Swift for the first half mile of the six-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds, the first in a series of four NYRA races which serve as preps for the Triple Crown.

Singh, a Bold Ruler colt out of Sari's Song, moved into third at that point, one length back. Then, with Cordero urging him on, the even-money favorite of the crowd of 33,770 flashed to the front and remained there easily to the wire. He was ridden out in a fast 1:09.45—just over a second slower than the track record—for mutuels of $4.00.

$3.00 and $2.40 and a winner's purse of $34,860.

Laramie Trail, half of a Jose Martin-trained entry, finished second in the field of 10, a nose ahead of Gallant Bob. Laramie Trail, coupled with Ricks Jet, who finished eighth, paid $5.60 and $3.20 and Gallant Bob returned $3.00.

The victory was the fourth in his last five starts for the winning colt, who now has surpassed the $100,000 mark in career earnings with $103,880.

Cordero shared the headlines with Singh, bringing home four other winners and scoring three seconds in his nine mounts. After a fifth in the first race, his slate read as follows:

Second on T's Lucky Mint in the second, Joanne's Fling ($3.60) in the third, Dicey ($3.80) in the fourth, Our Hero ($4.60) in the fifth, second on Monetary Principle in the sixth, second on Pluma in the seventh, the win aboard Singh in the eighth and Oakland's Prince ($7.20) in the ninth.

Chris Evert Upset
ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Defending champion Tizna came flying on the inside Saturday to score an upset in the 38th running of the $100,000 Santa Margarita Handicap for the filly-mare championship of the winter at Santa Anita.

Despite having won the race last year, Tizna was sent off at odds of 11-1 as the crowd of nearly 40,000 installed Chris Evert the 7-5 favorite.

But Chris Evert, carrying top weight of 127 pounds and racing against older mares for the first time, wilted in the stretch and faded out of the money.

Peek-a-Boo

Arnold Palmer checks for an opening in the woods on fifth hole to get his ball out to the fairway. Palmer is three shots back of Jack Nicklaus going into today's round of the Inverrary Classic. (UPI)

Nicklaus Leads

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — It'll be like old times today when superstars Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer hook up in the same threesome.

Nicklaus, who shot a 66 Saturday, leads young Eddie Pearce by one stroke in the $260,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic, and Palmer is tied for third, three shots back.

When Nicklaus heard he would be playing with Palmer, he cast his eyes skyward and joked: "Here we go. I thought we were done with that 10 years ago."

"I just gotta stay out of the way of his gallery, I guess," he said.

Palmer said, "I enjoy playing with Jack. I'll look forward to it."

Nicklaus said he thought, despite the recent stardom of Johnny Miller, who is not here, a pairing of himself and Palmer would be about the most popular among golf fans.

"More people would probably rather come out and watch Arnie play than anybody," he said. "I probably have the next to the most established following."

Nicklaus' six-under-par round gave him a 202 for the three rounds, one better than Pearce, who fired a 72 after going into the round leading the field.

Pearce had a chance to get back in a tie on the last two holes but he missed a six-foot putt on the 17th and a nine-footer on the 18th.

In third place was Arnold Palmer, who shot a 71 on the 7,128-yard Inverrary course for an 11-under-par 205, three shots behind Nicklaus.

He was tied with Tom Kite who shot a 70 Saturday, and Bob Murphy, who had a 66. Nicklaus and Palmer will be paired with Murphy on today. It will be the first time the two superstars have been paired while they were still in contention since the 1973 Bob Hope Desert Classic, the last tour event Palmer has won.

"Maybe that's a good indication," Palmer said. "I just hope I play better than I did today."

Nicklaus played steady golf with no bogeys, while Palmer was scrambling out of the trees every other hole.

Nicklaus went into the last two holes four under par. He had birdied the first hole with a 20-foot putt, the fifth with a 12-footer and sank an 18-foot putt on the 12th and a three-footer on the 13th.

Pearce lost a stroke with a bogey on the first hole, when he hit his second shot in a bunker. A sand trap cost him another bogey on the sixth hole. His two birdies came on putts of 12 and 6 feet.

A huge gallery followed the threesome containing Pearce and Palmer, and Pearce noted, "It's tough to play with someone with that much charisma. But I think he controlled it as well as expected."

Palmer described his round as "awful."

"I think that's one of the worst rounds of golf I've played in a long time. I hit some of the worst tee shots I've hit in 20 years," he said. "It was just an unbelievable round."

After landing in a bunker on both his second and third shots on the 15th hole, it looked like Palmer would drop out of contention. But he sank a 10-footer on the 17th to climb back among the leaders.

Cindy Nelson 1st In World Cup Race

WHISTLER MOUNTAIN, B.C. (UPI) — Starting from 21st position, Cindy Nelson of the United States copped a surprise win Saturday in the World Cup women's giant slalom here in driving rain, outclassing favorites from Austria and France.

Miss Nelson, 20, from Lutsen, Minn., skied the 57-gate 4,720-foot course with a vertical drop of 1,440 feet in 92.34 seconds, overcoming French giant slalom ace Fabienne Sarrat and Austrian superstar Anne Marie Moser-Proell.

Miss Sarrat took second with 92.72 from a third starting position.

Canada's Kathy Kreiner, who started in 11th position, won third place with 92.85. The 17-year-old from Timmins, Ont., came in far ahead of Austria's Monika Kaserer, one of the top-rated women in the event. Miss Kaserer skied the course in 94.01.

The win advanced Miss Nelson to fourth place in overall World Cup points with 132, displacing Bernadette Zurbruggen of Switzerland, who dropped to fifth place.

World Cup title holder Mrs. Moser-Proell, who is safely in control of her fifth consecutive crown, failed to finish the course, as did her closest competitor in overall standings, Hanny Wenzel of Lichtenstein.

Other first-seed skiers who did not finish were MarieTherese Nadig of Switzerland and countrywoman Lise-Marie Morerod.

"Today I was able to concentrate enough to look three gates ahead on the course," Miss Nelson said. "I was able to pick a straighter line between gates. I only lost concentration one time and almost went through a gate the wrong direction."

Miss Sarrat said she was "pleased with the run" and did not let the disqualification of Anne Marie Mosher-Proell "affect my attitude. I let my skis run and put in my best giant slalom run of the year."

Miss Kreiner said "I found myself sitting back and was caught by surprise on several of the runs toward the bottom of the course and lost time by having to jam my skis to get back on line. This might have been caused by poor visibility."

At the end of the race Mrs. Moser-Proell was still the leader in overall World Cup points with 268, followed by Hanny Wenzel with 168 and Rosi Mittermaier of West Germany with 162, who was not at the Canadian event because of a broken arm suffered earlier.

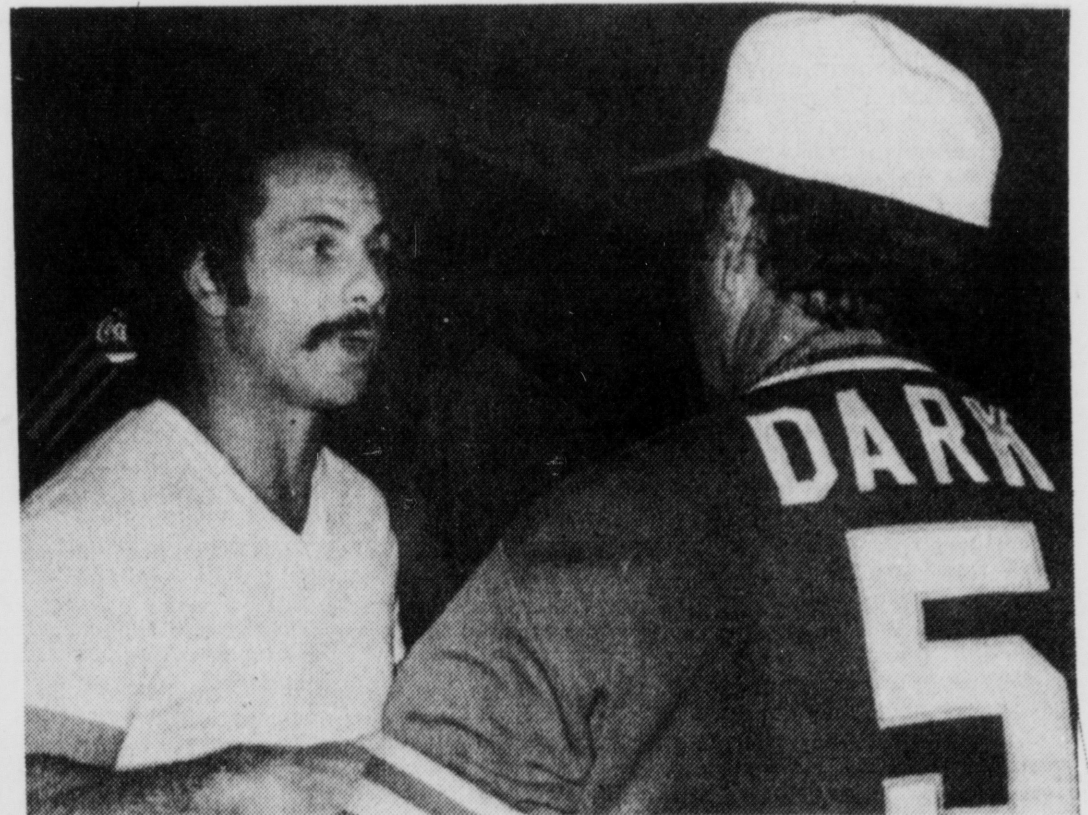

Mrs. Moser-Proell said "I sat back on my skis following the deep pitch and caught an inside edge as I stepped from one ski to another and was thrown off the course."

The three-day ski meet was plagued from the start by rain and dense fog that caused repeated postponement of downhill events.

A decision by coaches was expected late Saturday on whether to hold the downhill Sunday or make a final cancellation—possibly remanding them to Jackson Hole, Wyo., March 2-9. The Jackson Hole events do not count for World Cup points at present.

The men's world cup title was still very much disputed among four top contenders. Foremost among the was Italy's triple crown winner, Gustavo Thoeni, whom the downhill cancellation would favor.

Thoeni, with 206 points, is a giant slalom ace, while his closest rival, Franz Klammer of Austria with 190, is considered strong in the downhill. Third and fourth in men's overall standings were Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden with 175 and Piero Gros of Italy with 145.

'Village Idiot' Reappointed

For State Meet

Four KHS Mermen Qualify

NEW ROCHELLE
After a second place finish in the Section One Open Swimming Championships here, Kingston High will send four members of its DCSL champion team to the New York State meet next weekend at SUNY Cortland.

"I don't think we've ever had more than two swimmers on a Section One team," said KHS coach Floyd McCormick. "And this year, even though we were second again in the section, we scored more points than we did last year."

Bob Winrow, Jay Rifenburg, Paul Hansen and Kevin Balcastro, who all finished at least second in an event to qualify for the state meet, helped the Maroons total 139 1/2 points to trail only Iona Prep in the 24 team field. Iona finished with 170, and Yorktown placed third with 113.

The closest area school to the Maroons was Poughkeepsie which had 89 points for a tenth place finish.

Rifenburg had the top individual performance for Kingston, clocking 22.3 to tie for first with New Rochelle's Dick Davison in the 50 freestyle and placing second to Kevin Connell of Lourdes in the 100 freestyle. Connell had a winning 48.8, and earlier in the qualifying round posted a new state record 47.9.

Winrow was second in both the 100 butterfly and the 200 individual medley, trailing Chris Powers of Iona in the butterfly and Connell in the IM.

Hansen went under five minutes for the first time in the 500 freestyle to place behind the 4:50.1 of double winner Frank May of Stepinac. Balcastro set a school record 1:05.8 in the breaststroke as Jim Davis of Byram Hills won with a 1:03.

The Section One team is the defending New York State champion.

Section One Swimming
200 medley relay: Byram Hills (Watson, Wright, Davis, Dinkel), Mamaroneck, Ardsley, Time — 1:44.2.

Scheckter Wins Grand Prix

JOHANNESBURG (UPI)

— Jody Scheckter, driving a spare Tyrrell with an untested engine fitted 30 minutes before the flag dropped, drove what probably was the best race of his life to win the South African Formula One Grand Prix before a roaring home crowd Saturday.

The 25-year-old Scheckter became the first South African to win his nation's Grand Prix.

Carlos Reutemann of Argentina, last year's winner, slipstreamed in Scheckter's wake and pushed him throughout the race but said later "there was no way I could have overtaken him."

"He seemed unnerved by my pressuring him and I waited for him to make a mistake, but he didn't."

While looking for a gap to overtake, the Brazilian clocked the day's fastest time on the straight, 177.68 miles per hour.

Around the Camps

Roy White at 1st?

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Bobby Bonds made his first appearance as a Yankee Saturday, but the big news came when Roy White appeared wearing a first baseman's glove as New York Manager Bill Virdon began another one of his experiments.

"I would like to have Roy as my leadoff hitter every day," Virdon said. "So the more positions he can play the more often he figures to be in the lineup. I don't know what will happen, but it's worth a chance."

"I knew it would be an interesting spring," White said, "but I didn't know it was going to be this interesting. I haven't played the infield in eight or nine years but I'll try anything to stay in the lineup every day."

The Yankee drill was delayed more than two hours when Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, started his annual tour of the camps. After he and the players met for 90 minutes, the players had another meeting before taking the field.

The only players missing from camp were Walt Williams and Otto Velez as Alex Johnson signed Saturday morning in time for the workout.

Sterling Eyes Spot

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — "There are opportunities here this year," says New York Mets' rookie Randy Sterling, "that weren't here before. This is the first time I ever came to spring training where I felt there was a chance to make the club."

Sterling, the Mets' No. 1 draft choice in 1969, is one of three rookies Manager Yogi Berra names as candidates for the two open starting jobs on the New York staff.

"We got Tom Seaver, Jon Matlack and Jerry Koosman," Berra claims, "but after that we need two starters. At least one for the first month. After that we'll need two."

Hank Webb and Craig Swan are listed along with Sterling as the prime prospects.

Sterling was signed for a $75,000 bonus in June 1969 and responded with an 8-3 record at Pompano Beach his first year. But he injured his arm that season and later put on much more weight than the club felt was desirable.

Now a much slimmer athlete of 24, Sterling is coming off a 12-11 season with a last place minor league club. He also had a 4-2 record against almost all major league lineups in Puerto Rico and is looking forward to the challenge the 28-game spring schedule offers.

"We only got 14 pitchers on our roster this spring so they're all going to get a lot of work," says Berra. "I plan on using my three regular starters to open the games but the kids like Sterling, Webb and Swan are going to get a lot of work. We got to find out about them."

Sal Bando Reappointed

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — Charlie Finley had a change of heart and recanted Saturday, reappointing Sal Bando captain of the world champion Oakland A's despite having called his third baseman-sluggo "a village idiot" only two weeks ago.

Bando, one of the American League's top run-producers, has captained the A's the past six seasons but was in danger of losing that $500 post this year.

Angered by some of his remarks before going to arbitration with him in San Francisco on Feb. 19, Finley said he might take the captaincy away from his husky third baseman.

"Who do you think made him team captain?" Finley railed at the time. "It wasn't his teammates. It was me. I don't think he's going to be the team captain anymore."

But the Oakland owner obviously had a change of heart and personally reappointed Bando in a long distance phone conversation from Chicago shortly before the A's engaged in their opening spring drill.

Bando was one of four Oakland players who lost their arbitration cases with Finley. Two other A's players won. As for any hard feelings that may have been left, Bando insisted there were none and said, "It's over with."

He also said he was pleased that the A's owner had seen fit to reappoint him captain.

"It's an honor without a doubt," said Bando. "As far as some of the things that were said before my arbitration case, hopefully it's all forgotten."

Alvin Dark, the A's manager, wasn't aware of the telephone conversation between Finley and Bando until Bando provided him with all the details.

"I'm certainly happy he was named captain again," said Dark, a team captain himself for six years when he was with the New York Giants. "How important is a captain to a team? Very important in certain circumstances. Every ballclub needs a leader and Sal Bando is a leader. I think he's going to make a good manager some day."

Bando showed his pleasure at being reappointed by drilling several long drives up against the leftfield fence in the A's inaugural training session. Touching briefly on the loss of former teammate Catfish Hunter, he said:

"I think the Yanks helped themselves. You don't just make up a 25-game winner. You get someone to take his spot, but you don't replace him unless you get a Tom Seaver or a Ferguson Jenkins. I don't know them as well as I know Cat. I know what he could do under pressure."

Expos Sign Coggins

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Outfielder Rich Coggins agreed to terms Saturday and the Expos now have only one player not in the fold—Dave McNally.

Coggins' agent, Jerry Kapstein, accepted the original offer made by General Manager Jim Fanning some weeks ago during a telephone conversation with Fanning at the ballpark Saturday. Coggins is expected to report Sunday night and be in uniform Monday.

Fanning says that the 24-year-old Coggins was given a "decent" raise by the Expos despite the fact that his batting average dipped to .243 last year following his .319 production as a rookie the year before.

McNally, like Coggins acquired from the Baltimore Orioles during the winter and expected to be the leader of the Expos' pitching staff, is still talking with Fanning. Apparently, money and length of contract matters have been settled but there is still a minor problem.

Workout for Ellis

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The Cleveland Indians engaged in another three-hour workout for pitchers and catchers Saturday including a third day of special tutoring for catcher John Ellis by coach Jeff Torborg.

Ellis has become the Indians' No. 1 catcher since the trade of Dave Duncan to Baltimore.

Lefthander Dave LaRoche, obtained in a trade with the Chicago Cubs Friday, reported Saturday. First baseman Boog Powell, acquired from Baltimore along with pitcher Don Hood this week, will report when the full Indian squad of 44 is due here.

Westcoast Cop Region XV

FARMINGDALE

Westchester Community College earned a trip to the National Junior College Athletic Association basketball tournament Saturday night by edging New York City CC, 67-66 in the finals of the Region XV tournament here.

The Vikings, rated fourth in the final NJCAA poll, will make their first trip to Hutchinson, Kansas, with a record of 33-1. The Mid Hudson Conference champions defeated Staten Island in the first round of the tournament and easily slipped past Farmingdale, 90-75 in Friday's semifinal.

New York City, which advanced with an opening victory over Rockland, downed Post JC in its semifinal encounter, 60-53.

James Burns, with 22 points, was the shooting star of the Westcoast first regional title. Lew Michaux and Don Ingram each added 14 points to the attack.

New York City was led by Mike Johnson with 18 and Otis Fenn with 14.

Ulster and Suffolk, the fourth and third seeded teams, were the tournament's other first round victims. UCCC bowed to host Farmingdale, 74-70, and Suffolk lost an 89-84 overtime battle with Post.

Burton Outrolls Ressler

WINDSOR LOCKS, Conn.

Nelson Burton, Jr., St. Louis, Mo., eked out a 208-194 decision Saturday afternoon to take first place as the $100,000 Midas Open Bowling Tournament came to a close at Bradley Bowl.

In nailing down the $14,000 winner's purse—the largest prize of his career—the 32-year-old pro whipped Ed Ressler, Allentown, Pa., whose only crown had come one year ago in Winston-Salem, N.C. First place there was worth $14,000, the same amount Burton carted off in the Midas event. The victory was Burton's 12th in a nine-year career.

The first match of the fourgame windup to the three-day affair saw Carmen Salvino of Chicago take a 256-203 drabbing from Gary Mage, Bellevue, Wash. Then, it was Ressler's turn and the youngster responded with a tremendous 268 game to oust Mage, who was coming off his first win in six tries on national television.

Ressler, who shot nine strikes in that contest, came right back with eight more to win over Dave Davis, Atlanta, Ga., who qualified second behind Burton after 42 preliminary games. The score was 257 to 178.

Burton, who averaged over 224 to lead a five-man advance into the title round, raced to an early 21-pin lead when he struck in the first and second frames, while Ressler struck for openers, then left the 4-6-7 split in the second frame.

Ressler then posted four straight spares to fall behind by 32 after six boxes and Burton, who was to "double" in the fifth and six, only had to coast the rest of the way.

Ressler's prize was $8,000, while third-placer Davis was awarded $6,000. Mage and Salvino took away a respective $5,000 and $4,000 from this ninth stop on the Winter Tour of the Professional Bowlers Assn.

Coleman Dumps Oteora, 64-56

KINGSTON

Coleman High wrapped up its basketball season on a winning note here Saturday night with a 64-56 non-league victory over Oteora.

The Statesmen put three shooters in double figures and stayed ahead of the Indians all the way to run their overall record to 10-8. Center Pete Gallagher led the attack with 19 points, Kevin Coughlin added 15, and A.J. Maneen dumped in 12.

OCS got off to a slow start and fell behind by 11 points at halftime. Tony Herron, who finished with 20 points, and Jerome Smith, who had 18 during the game, helped the visitors get back on target in the final two quarters, but it was not enough to overhaul the Statesmen.

Chris Bentley sparked the Statesmen getaway with a few quick baskets, then the home team relied on its superior shooting ability to maintain its advantage. Both teams ended up with the same number of field goals, but Coleman's percentage was higher, and it held an 18-10 edge from the foul line.

Oteora ended the season with an overall record of 2-16. The box:

Philly Downs Fading Knicks, 100-94

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Cunningham and Fred Carter

combined for 34 second-half points and reserve Don Smith scored his only four points of the game in the last 10 seconds to give the Philadelphia 76ers a 100-94 victory over New York Saturday night and hand the fading Knicks their 11th in the last 12 games against NBA Atlantic Division opponents.

Smith hit a jump shot with 10 seconds left and hit a pair of free throws five seconds later to clinch the victory. Cunningham scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half, while Carter was scoring 16 of his 26-point total to help Philadelphia maintain command down the stretch.

New York held a 91-90 lead with two minutes left. Cunningham hit a jump shot to give the 76ers back the lead 92-91. Phil Jackson tied it at 92 on a free throw and Carter hit a shot that put the 76ers ahead to stay.

Bill Bradley paced New York with 22 points as the last-place 76ers cut the third-place Knicks' lead over them to 2 1/2 games.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Cunningham 18-10-24, Lee 10-0-2, Ellis 7-1-15, Carter 11-4-26, Collins 9-5-23, Durrett 1-2-4, Bristow 0-2-2, Smith 1-2-4. Totals 38-24-100.

Colonels Stop Dr. J, Nets In ABA Game

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The Kentucky Colonels

put their best defense of the season on Julius Erving Saturday night and scored a 95-84 victory over the New York Nets behind the combined 56-point production of Dan Issel and Artis Gilmore.

The victory moved the Colonels into a tie with the Nets for first place in the ABA's Eastern Division, each with 4519 records.

Wilbert Jones was chiefly responsible for throttling Erving as the New York superstar was held to 15 points, more than 12 under his season average.

The Colonels got 29 points from Issel and 27 from Gilmore.

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) —

Despite the absence of top-level foreign competition, some of the nation's top track and field stars have agreed to compete in Monday's U.S.-U.S.S.R. indoor meet.

Russian Coach Igor TerOvanyan admits the Soviet team is young and relatively inexperienced, with many of the more seasoned competitors heading instead for the European championships.

Among the Russians missing from the meet here will be Valery Borzov, billed as "the world's fastest human" because of his Olympic performances.

Fogle Ineligible

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Canisius College, plagued by problems on and off the basketball court this season, Saturday announced that Larry Fogle, the nation's leading scorer last season, and center Charley Jordan have been declared ineligible by the NCAA.

Canisius Athletic Director Dr. Daniel P. Starr made the announcement at a news conference, saying the school was advised of the decision Friday. He said the two were declared ineligible "for future basketball competition" at the college.

Starr said the reasons for the ruling were "due to their being recipients of improper financial aid according to NCAA regulations."

"I would stress," Starr continued, "that the question of their admission to Canisius College, or the question of their academic status is not involved in this NCAA matter."

Fogle, who transferred to Canisius before the 1973-74 season after Southwestern Louisiana University was forced to drop basketball by the NCAA for alleged recruiting violations, reportedly had the college pay for a motel bill and had his car fixed at the expense of the school.

Jordan, a highly-sought recruit from Indianapolis, has reportedly received improper financial assistance from the college. Both players were recruited by then-coach John Morrison, currently assistant coach of the St. Louis Spirits of the American Basketball Association.

Starr, who said he has appealed the decision to the NCAA's Committee on Eligibility, said he did not know if the decision would affect the school's chances of participating in next week's Upstate New York Eastern College Athletic Conference tournament in Buffalo.

Starr, however, did not rule out the possibility that Canisius, if invited to the tourney, would not accept the invitation.

"I would think that declining would be a possibility," Starr said "but I don't really know."

Fogle and Jordan, both juniors, were not at the news conference and could not be reached for comment.

Terry Connors, Fogle's advisor, said that he had not talked with Larry about the possibility of now turning professional but added "I guess we'll be talking very soon."

Fogle averaged 33.4 points a game last season when he led the nation. He was drafted by the Denver Nuggets of the ABA but said he would not turn pro unless offered $1 million.

Earlier this season Fogle, a 6-5 junior from Brooklyn, was dropped from the team by Coach John McCarthy for "the good of the team." McCarthy reinstated the 1973-74 UPI second team All-American two weeks later and Fogle continued to lead the Griffins in scoring with a 24.9 average.

Indiana Rips OSU

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Steve Green scored 29 points Saturday to lead the No. 1-ranked Indiana Hoosiers an 86-78 Big Ten victory over Ohio State, bringing the Hoosiers to within one game of wrapping up their regular season with a perfect record.

It was Indiana's 31st straight victory, including a 28-0 mark this season and a 17-0 Big Ten record. The Hoosiers can tie the record for most consecutive wins by a Big Ten team, set by Ohio State in 1960-61, if they beat Michigan State next Saturday.

Indiana had trouble shaking the Buckeyes in the first half. Ohio State rebounded repeatedly from four and five-point deficits to grab one-point leads. Then Indiana reeled off 10 straight points to move from a 19-18 deficit to a 28-19 lead with 11:25 left in the half. By halftime, the Hoosiers were on top 44-29.

Penn Clinches Ivy

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Henry Johnson scored 14 of his game high 20 points in the second half Saturday as Penn captured its seventh straight Ivy League championship by defeating Brown 89-57 in an opener of a double header at the Palestra.

Drexel and Temple met in the nightcap. Leading by 32-26 at halftime, Penn outscored Brown 14-2 at the start of the second half to take a 46-28 lead. The Quakers had little trouble in gaining their 14th straight victory and 23rd of the season against four losses. Penn finished 13-1 in the Ivy League.

No. 5 Kentucky Romps

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — The fifth-ranked Kentucky Wildcats easily outran Vanderbilt 109-84 and clinched second place in the Southeastern Conference Saturday after getting 28-point performances from senior Kevin Grevey and freshman Rick Robey.

Robey with 18 points carried the Wildcats to a 17-point halftime lead at 50-33 and Grevey paced the Kentucky offense in the last half with 14 of his points.

St. John's Stops Friars

NEW YORK (UPI) — St. John's, led by four-double figure scorers, defeated Providence 88-70 Saturday afternoon before a crowd of 4,400 and a regional television audience.

Senior co-captains Mel Utley and Kevin Cluess, each playing his last home game, led the Redmen with 18 points apiece. Freshman George Johnson added 15 and Beaver Smith had 15 points, 14 rebounds and six blocked shots.

Notre Dame Breezes

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Adrian Dantley scored 33 points Saturday to help Notre Dame close out its regular season with a 102-69 victory over Dayton and keep the Irish hopes alive for an NCAA tournament bid.

Dantley, a sophomore averaging 30.3 points per game, powered the once-ranked Irish to their 11th win in their last 13 games. Notre Dame is 18-8 for the season.

Charles J. Tiano, Sports Editor

The 1975 Red Book, that fountain of current statistics, historical facts and memorabilia of the American League, has arrived at the sports desk.

It's a beauty, bigger, fatter and more fascinating than any of its predecessors. It makes you feel proud to be an American League rooster.

The American League launches its diamond jubilee with the start of the current baseball campaign. In those colorful and exciting 75 years, the "junior loop" has won 43 World Championships and lost 28 to the rival and older National League.

In 1973, the American League attendance record of 13,433,684 was set and the 13-million mark was again exceeded in 1974. So what if the National League keeps on winning the All-Star games.

In case your forgot, Charlie O. Finley's Oakland A's won their third consecutive World Championship last fall. They are the first team to win three in a row since the Yankees strung five World Series wins together in 1949-1953.

Hank Aaron brings baseball's most prestigious statistic — 733 career home runs — into the American League when he opens the season with Milwaukee. He also happens to be the oldest active player (41) in the majors.

Trailering Aaron in the all-time Home Run Derby are: Babe Ruth 714, Willie Mays 660, Frank Robinson 574, Harmon Killebrew 559, Mickey Mantle 536, Jimmy Foxx 534, Ted Williams 521, Ernie Banks 512, Ed Mathews 512, Mel Ott 511.

Gene Tenace the Oakland A's orphan, led the American League in grand slams with 3 during the 1974 season but newcomer Hank Aaron will have to rate as the career grand slam leader with 16.

Killebrew is second among active ALers with 11. Rico Petrocelli has 9, Jim Northrup, Vada Pinson, Bill Williams (ex-NL), 8 each; Dick Allen, Boog Powell and Frank Robinson have 7 each.

Minnesota second baseman Rod Carew, who has won the league batting title each of the last three years (.364, .350, .318) is the first American League to do since the immortal Ty Cobb pulled it off in 1917-1919. Oh, yes, Cobb also did it from 1907 to 1915, before Tris Speaker of Cleveland broke his string in 1916.

Twelve uniform numbers have been permanently retired by American League teams: Babe Ruth (3), Lou Gehrig (4), Joe DiMaggio (5), Lou Boudreau (5), Mickey Mantle (7), Bill Dickey (8), Yogi Berra (8), Ted Williams (9), Whitey Ford (16), Bob Feller (19), Frank Robinson (20) and Casey Stengel (37). . . . Mel Stottlemyre of the Yankees leads active American League pitchers in career shutouts with 40. Mickey Lolich is runnerup with 38, followed by Gaylord Perry (21-NL) 37; Luis Tiant 35, Ferguson Jenkins (27-NL) 33; Catfish Hunter 33, Jim Perry 31, Mike Cuellar (NL-6). Dave McNally of the Baltimore Orioles took 33 career shutouts with him when he moved up to Montreal in the National League.

Only 11 players in major league history have won baseball's coveted Triple Crown, symbolic of league leadership in batting, home runs and runs batted in. Ty Cobb of Detroit was the first wearer of the Triple Crown in 1909 when he hit 9 homers, batted .377 and knocked in 115 runs.

Boston's Carl Yastzemeski was the latest (1967) with 44 home runs, 121 RBI and .326 BA. Ted Williams (1942 and 1947) and Rogers Hornsby (1922 and 1925) are the only other players ever to produce two Triple Crown seasons.

The American League's Golden Glove fielding team of 1974 included: 1b—George Scott, Milwaukee; 2b—Bobby Grich, Baltimore; 3b—Brooks Robinson, Baltimore; ss—Mark Belanger, Baltimore; c—Thurman Munson, New York; OF—Joe Rudi, Oakland; OF—Paul Blair, Baltimore; OF—Amos Otis, Kansas City; P—Jim Kaat, Chicago. Did you notice? Four Orioles on the team.

Jim Kaat of the Chicago White Sox is the winningest pitcher in the American League with 215 career wins. Jim Perry has 211, Gaylord Perry 198, Mickey Lolich 195, Ferguson Jenkins 174, Mel Stottlemyre 164. Jim (Catfish) Hunter starts his Yankee career with 161 wins. . . . Sparky Lyle's 2.44 ERA (436 games) is the lowest among active league pitchers. Frank Hillier (303) is runnerup at 2.29, followed by Jim Palmer (268) 2.72 and Bert Blyleven (181) 2.74.

Nolan Ryan pitched a no-hitter, 1-hitter and 2-hitter and led the league in strikeouts with 367. . . . Terry Forster of the White Sox had most saves with 24. Frank Hillier of Detroit scored 17 wins in relief. . . . Ferguson Jenkins tied Catfish Hunter for most wins with 25 and led in complete games with 29. Rolfe Fingers of the A's made the most relief appearances (76).

The first Game of the Week by NBC in 1975 will emanate from Texas, where the Rangers host the World Champion Oakland A's on Saturday, April 12. The game marks the first national telecast from the city of Arlington. Billy Martin has a good chance to take the early lead in the getting-thrown-out before a national television audience contest.

Slate Soccer Meeting

CATSKILL

The newly-organized Hudson Valley Soccer Association has set June 1 as the target date for its first round of games. Representatives from six communities — Saugerties, Poughkeepsie, Catskill, Rhinebeck, Hudson and Kingston were present at an organization meeting this week at the Bull Head Tavern.

The temporary board of directors voted to open the league to teams from Ulster, Dutchess, Columbia, Greene, Putnam and Orange counties. Teams will be admitted into the league upon submission of playing rosters and guarantee of a satisfactory playing field.

Next meeting of the league is scheduled March 11, at 7:30 p.m. at Beekman Arms in Rhinebeck. The meeting is open to all persons interested in the new soccer organization. Interested teams may also write: Hudson Valley Soccer Association, care Sunshine Castle, Market Street, Rhinebeck, N.Y.

Red Hook Had Inspiration

HIGHLAND

Red Hook High knew before it started its UCAL basketball game here Friday night that Onerora had forfeited its game to Marlboro, making a win a must to stay tied in Division II.

"I think it inspired the team," said Raider coach Rod Chando after his boys blew Highland off the court with an 86-61 victory, forcing a division playoff with Marlboro Tuesday at Pine Bush.

Red Hook played its own style of running game and was hot shooting for the first three periods before coasting in the last eight minutes, and Chando cited his club's defense as the strongest single factor in the win.

The Raiders chased Highland ragged with a man-to-man defense in the first half, and then boxed them out with a second half zone, stealing passes and pressing full court the entire game.

It was evident from the outset that Red Hook was charged up for the game, as the team leaped to a 25-12 first period lead and never slackened until there was a 30 point cushion separating the clubs.

Chando pointed to the team "attitude," a word he has used repeatedly this season to explain the almost feverish zeal with which the boys attack the game. He said he felt that the first shellacking his team took from Marlboro was responsible for jolting the players into their present "attitude."

Four Red Hook players scored in double figures, each taking a turn at the hoop.

Mike Gilfeather showed his agility around the baseline and the backboard, topping all scorers with 27 points including 17 in the first half. Jim Simmons came on strong with 11 of his 23 points in the second half and 12 in the first.

"I wouldn't single out any player in this game," commented Chando afterwards. Beside the four players who hit for double figures, Jim Merriken was outstanding in defensive hustle and setting up the set plays that Red Hook showed off with sharp inside passing.

Highland played its second game without former starters Jim Donaruma and Dave Mackey, and the depth on the bench couldn't seem to handle the relentless Red Hook attack. J.C. Gersch had a cold shooting game, although he finished high scorer with 15 points, 11 in the second half. Big Mike Serini popped in eight first period points, but finished the night with only ten.

After taking a 48-28 half-time lead, Red Hook ran the score to 72-46 after three periods despite two technical fouls on Highland coach Dick Becker that appeared to be an effort to install some more life into the team.

What's the game plan against Marlboro Tuesday? Chando was asked. "We're going to run and press," he said.

Spoilers Spoiled

Coleman High School wasn't able to play spoiler and Onerora didn't even get the chance Friday night as the Ulster County Athletic League's regular season basketball race ended.

The Statesmen, who earlier this season handed Liberty its only defeat, tried to do it again and force a playoff between the Redskins and Fallsburgh for the Division I title. But Liberty wanted no part of that, and handed Coleman a convincing 97-52 defeat.

Onerora, meanwhile, was rated a decided underdog in its scheduled battle with Marlboro. But when two teams play anything can happen and an Onerora upset, combined with a Red Hook win at Highland, would have made the Raiders the Division II kings. Red Hook won, but Onerora and Marlboro never played as the gym divider at the Boiceville school failed to open and the Indians were forced to forfeit.

In other games, Fallsburgh clobbered Pine Bush, 92-50; New Paltz whipped Wallkill, 63-57; and Rondout Valley upended Ellenville, 74-71.

Liberty clinched the Division I crown and a berth in Thursday's championship against either Marlboro or Red Hook by scoring early and never letting Coleman stay in the ball game, a mistake it made the first time the clubs met.

Rae Bridges poured in 12 of his 25 points as Liberty broke to a 26-11 first quarter lead. When Reggie Biddings flipped in 11 of his 18 in the second quarter, the Redskins had all but put it away with a 56-29 advantage.

Fallsburgh, which now must wait for the outcome of the UCAL championship game before it learns if it will get a Section Nine bid, got 43 points from Sam Copeland as it disposed of Pine Bush. Copeland has a four-year total of 1,289 points.

The problem at Onerora was discovered several hours before tip-off by workmen at the Boiceville gym. When it was determined the facility would not be ready, a series of phone calls between OCS and Marlboro officials resulted in the forfeit decision.

Before the outcome was reached, both sides reportedly rejected an auxiliary gym at Onerora, the use of the Marlboro gym, and the rescheduling of the game until Saturday night.

"I felt bad for Red Hook that we had to forfeit because you never know what's going to happen in a game," said Onerora coach Ron Pape. "We might have beaten them."

Pete Sciascia made the first end of a one-and-one and John Geis put in an offensive rebound after the second attempt missed to ice New Paltz' win over Wallkill. The Hugies scored 13 of their 23 fourth quarter points from the free throw line, Sciascia putting in five of the charity shots.

Junior Lorenzo Simmons had 22 points to lead the winners. George Thomas scored 16 for Wallkill.

New Paltz ended its first UCAL season under coach John Wirth with a 7-9 record after going 1-15 last year.

"I guess you could say I'm reasonably happy," Wirth commented. "We won some big games like the ones over Red Hook and Coleman, but we lost to Ellenville by 30 and to Rondout. But it was an improvement over last year."

A bucket by Kevin Van Wagenen with 30 seconds to go broke a 71-71 tie and a free throw by John Million 12 seconds from the end clinched Rondout's victory.

Million had 21 points and Van Wagenen 17 as the Ganders finished in fourth place in Division I. Mike Crawley and Ken Steele had 25 apiece for Ellenville.

10 Straight for Kingston

WAPPINGERS FALLS

If there was any chance of Kingston High School's basketball team taking Ketcham lightly in its Section One Class AA tournament opener this week it was wiped out Friday night as the Indians gave the Dutchess County Scholastic League champion Maroons a rough time before KHS pulled away to win, 79-59, its 10th straight victory.

Kingston faces Ketcham Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Kate Walton Field House in that Section One contest.

In Friday night's game, Kingston held a slim one point lead, 30-29, at halftime. But in the second half the play of sparkling junior guard Larry Carpenter provided the Maroons with the spark they needed to dispose of the home team. Carpenter scored 16 of his 18 points after intermission.

"We just couldn't get going in the first half," said Kingston coach Mike Rienzo. "I guess the kids were still caught up in the excitement of winning the league."

"But Ketcham is a rugged club," he continued. "They've got some big kids. I think this game will do us a lot of good."

Kingston outscored Ketcham, 49-30, in the second half, despite suffering the loss of Corey Chambers and Bill Chaffin through foul difficulties. Another starter, Bill Cadden, sat out the game with an injured foot.

Chambers scored 14 points and grabbed 16 rebounds before he left the game. Greg Glass has 12 points and eight rebounds and Chaffin scored 10 points.

Bob Blake topped the losers with 21 points. Mark Esser had 19.

Kingston finished its best regular season in seven years with a 16-2 record and a two game advantage over second place Beacon in the league standings.

A Day at Chuck Wepner's Training Camp

KERHONKSON

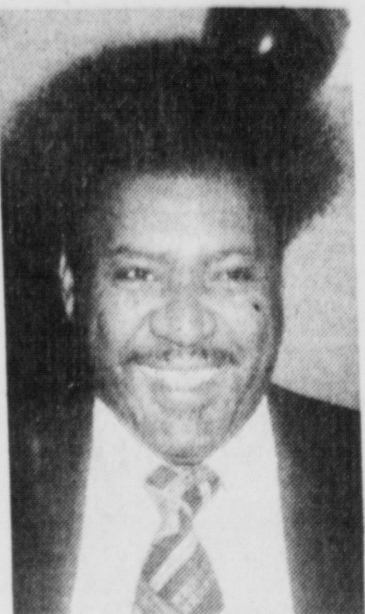

Notes on a day at Chuck Wepner's Granit Hotel training camp.

Don King is the man who built the Ali-Foreman extravaganza in Zaire. His own press releases describe him as "a self-made man, who has successfully combined the dynamics of a fire and brimstone preacher, the willingness to take the risks of a riverboat gambler and the knowledge of the streets, where he grew up."

King is responsible for the March 24 Ali-Wepner heavyweight title fight in Cleveland. He wants it made clear that he's not the premier black promoter in boxing, but the premier promoter period.

He is nothing if not eloquent.

At the Wepner press conference here the other day, King took the microphone to let one and all know of the virtues of Cleveland, site of the upcoming fight and his hometown. His spiel was beautiful. When he sat down, those in the gathering used to less than brilliant P's and Q's gasped with envy.

"Don," Wepner mumbled to King, "I couldn't have said that better myself. . . In fact, I couldn't have said it at all."

Wepner has put the Granit on the sports map and as such the local establishment is due to get its share of ample free publicity.

Dave Anderson's column in the Times Wednesday was a Class A start. All photos of Wepner workouts that hit the wire services will show the challenger wearing the official Granit tee-shirt. A publicity shot had Chuck sparring with a tee-shirt clad beauty whose tale of the tape read 38-24-28 (the tee-shirt never looked better). Writers from Wepner's area in New Jersey will spread the word in that state, and Chuck gives the hotel a plug on his T'V with Mike Douglas, which airs here Thursday on Ch. 2.

The Douglas show, incidentally, gives viewers a chance to catch Muhammad Ali's act first-hand. The champ, ever mindful of his position as a ticket-hawker, actually tries to get the audience to believe Wepner is the man he's been after his entire career.

It's really great fun and Chuck actually gets in a couple of good verbal shots at the master before they "square off" with the ever genial Douglas trying to act as peacemaker.

Wepner stands six feet five inches tall and you think he'd be a good basketball player you're right. Chuck played pro ball with the Trenton Colonials of the Eastern League.

He says he's so starved for competition he's been running around the Granit looking for someone to beat in ping-pong or miniature golf, anything.

Are you listening Rich Rumble?

The impression left on members of the press to whom he spoke after Wepner had sparred six rounds was his lack of speed. Be that as it may, Chuck has never been knocked down and he's met some powerful punchers, Sonny Liston and George Foreman to name a couple.

He didn't beat them, of course. The infamous bleeding problem is what did him in. Since his operation to reduce the blood flow, he's won nine straight fights.

During that sparring session, Wepner's manager Al

Braverman was constantly imploring his boxer to "stay nice and loose . . . relax and steady." At one point he directed him to "inch your way in" and not to step back more than one step at a time. After he hit on one sparring mate with a couple of good shots, Braverman yelled to Wepner "that's not Ali yet."

The fight press kit contains a classic in promotion. It's "an original ode by Chuck Wepner" entitled "Goodbye Ali . . . Hello Chuck."

Wepner is supposed to have written what follows. He's too big to doubt, so we'll merely present it here for your literary enjoyment:

GOODBYE ALI . . . HELLO CHUCK

An original ode by Chuck Wepner, 8th Ranking Contender for World Heavyweight Title

We're all going to Cleveland for the Championship Fight.

They're expecting a sellout for this special night.

All my people will be there, and they're the best.

They've been with me since the beginning.

To this I can attest.

The coliseum will ring with excitement.

Awaiting the opening bell.

And sitting there at ringside.

Will be Howard Cosell.

Now, I know they say that Ali's the best.

And that he can't be beat.

But you see for me the word is Yes!

I do not know the word "defeat."

I also know that he can sting like a bee.

And float like a butterfly.

For in there it's do or die.

Ali's going to talk and chatter a lot.

And try and store me down.

But he'll have to do much more than that.

If he expects to keep his crown.

He'll try to stick and move a lot.

And keep right on the run.

But if he intends to win the fight that night.

He'll have to have a gun.

For on that very special night.

Happiness will reign supreme.

And the Heavyweight Championship of the World.

Will finally be mine!

For you see, it's time for things to finally change.

And you can bet it won't be long.

Because on March 24th, there'll be a new king.

And his name will be Big Chuck!

Rhinebeck Remains Unbeaten

POUGHKEEPSIE

DCSL Bi-Valley champion Rhinebeck High completed an unbeaten season Friday night by trimming Oakwood, 86-55.

Coach Chuck Sherman started all seniors in his contest and that enabled the Quakers to stay with the Indians for one period. But when the regulars came in, Rhinebeck took care of the losers with ease.

Saugerties Coach Hopeful

POUGHKEEPSIE

The way Saugerties High School basketball coach Larry Marcus sees it, despite his team's regular season ending 66-63 loss at Poughkeepsie Friday, the Sawyers might just turn in a surprise or two when they open play in the Section One Class A tournament this week.

Saugerties completed its DCSL card with a 5-13 mark, but the Sawyers, who are at Beacon Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the sectional opener, won three of their last five games and nearly pulled out the finale at Poughkeepsie, only to falter in the final period.

"We really played excellently," Marcus said after the Pioneers' Ron Kearsse had tossed in two free throws with 50 seconds left to give the winners' their decisive points. "It was a good tuneup for the Beacon game. They've beaten us twice, so maybe they'll take us lightly."

After Kearsse's foul shot, on a play in which Sawyer Chris Luley committed his fifth personal, Saugerties came back to play for one shot. The visitors worked the clock down to 10 seconds at which time John Speirs' 15 footer went in and out of the hoop. Poughkeepsie then scored a bonus bucket at the buzzer.

Earlier, Saugerties put together a strong second and third quarter to take the lead. A tenacious man-to-man press and the offensive work of Spiers and Scott Hunter were the keys. But Luley was in foul trouble and Brian Holley was off from the outside and Poughkeepsie worked its way back in the game.

Hunter led all scorers with 23 points. Spiers had 17. Clifford Grimes and Zene Patara scored 12 apiece for Poughkeepsie.

Of Saugerties' 13 losses this season, two were by one point, one by three, two by five, two by seven, and two by nine. Not exactly overwhelming differentials.

SAA Volleyball Opens

SAUGERTIES

Only one team completed a three-game sweep, as 13 of the teams saw action in the opening round of the SAA men's volleyball league. Three teams could not start play due largely to basketball games, so three other teams played double headers.

Defending "B" Division

champion Mark IV Printing achieved the only sweep routing Bud's Boys 15-9, 15-8, 15-8. Gallagher's Goons edged the Moles, 15-9, 15-8, 10-12. The Bangers also topped the Moles, 8-13, 15-9, 16-14.

Chargers won over Gunjah Warriors 2-1 by scores of 15-6, 15-8 and 10-12. Albany Public edged Knights of Columbus, 9-7, 15-4, 9-11.

Norwich's Bob Adsit Excels In Parachuting

NORTHFIELD, Vt. — Although cross-country skiing has more than regained its popularity at Norwich University, another sport is also in the running for comeback-of-the-year honors — sport parachuting.

One of 25 students who have revived the almost defunct N.U. Sports Parachute Club is Bob Adsit of Shokan, a sophomore at the Vermont Military College.

Sport parachuting had been a very popular extra-curricular activity at Norwich until 1971, when for some reason it began to lose its appeal to students.

But this year it is flourishing once again, and those who have a flair for derring-do are making regular weekend trips to the drop zone in Orange, Mass. The club has its own equipment, the cadets pay for their own instruction and jumps, and the university picks up the tab for repairs to equipment, reserve parachute repacks and transportation.

BOB ADSIT

Adsit has three jumps to his credit, tow static line and one staticline with dummy ripcord. The next stage of development that he is shooting for is the 60-second free fall. In the meantime he is competing with the N.U. Parachute team against other colleges in the east.

Adsit graduated from Onteora High in Boiceville and is now majoring in business administration at Norwich. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Adsit of Longyear Road in Shokan.

Quite An Opening!

SAUGERTIES The format for the SAA Girls Basketball League provides for the teams to play themselves into A and B Divisions. Judging from the opening game results that can't happen too soon.

For example, Maximus Super crushed Happy Hookers 60-1 and Greenbacks routed

Gunjah Warriettes 52-10. The other results made some kind of sense, as Oldies breezed past Shake, Rattle and Roll 30-13 and Alpha Cement, winless in 1974, nipped the Buckwheats 16-14.

Shelly Pfeil of the Greenbacks led all scorers with 24 points. Holly Heppner paced Maximus with 21. Other scoring leaders included Bonnie Baker 18, Lynn Scott 15, Casey Musto 14, Pat Sommers 14, Aileen Bernier 10, Marge Allen 12, Alice Kirlauski 10.

Oh, yes, Julie Harder scored that one point for the Happy Hookers.

Red Hook Girls Forgot How to Lose

RED HOOK
The Red Hook girls varsity basketball team lost its seasonal opener to Onteora High 33-28, then roared back with 16 straight victories in an unbroken sweep that carried it to the 1975 Ulster County Athletic League and Section Nine championships.

The Raiderettes routed Onteora 50-31 in the play-off for the Northern Division honors in the UCAL, trounced Pine Bush 48-34 and Pearl River 46-38 for sectional honors. After that first loss, they simply forgot how to lose.

Coach John Kuhn said the Red Hook success this year was accomplished through excellent team play. "Each girl provided a special skill to the overall team effort," he said.

"The girls practiced six days a week and during Christmas vacation," said Kuhn. "They displayed enthusiasm and a desire for excellence. Combining individual skill and outstanding team play, they scored 16 victories in a row after our opening loss."

Coach Kuhn used 11 players during the campaign and several players made outstanding contributions to the championship season. Senior co-captain Maryanne Cookingham called 'Flash' by her teammates because of her tremendous speed, was a fine defensive player and ball handler. "Maryanne consistently covered the opposing team's best scorer and limited them to only a few points a game," Coach Kuhn points out. "Her fine play, both on offense and defense, was a deciding factor in our victory in the Section Nine final."

Elenie Opffer, a senior, was the team's leading scorer, rolling up 225 points in 16 games, with 40 per cent accuracy from the field and a 14-point game average.

"She produced several 20-point performances during the regular season and playoff," said Coach Kuhn. "An outstanding all-round player, Elenie was also the team's second highest rebounder and third in assists. Her ball handling was also a valuable asset for the team."

Senior co-captain Becky Roberts was the leading Red Hook rebounder. She averaged 12.5 rebounds per game and set a season record when she pulled down 23 rebounds in the game against Wallkill.

Junior Cathy Amrod led the team in assists with 54 and second in rebounds with 157 behind the leader, Elenie Opffer, who pulled down 161. Kelly Mosher had 49 assists, Opffer 47, Maryanne Cookingham 37, Jo Greene 35 and Becky Roberts 25.

Other top rebounders include Maryann Crotty with 80, Jo Greene 79, Kelly

Mosher 72 and Robin King 66.

Senior Mary Ann Crotty provided Red Hook with top utility play, gave the team depth on the bench and strengthened the forward line. She was the team's second best foul shooter and was fourth in rebounding.

Other players who contributed to the championship effort included senior Pat Read, the team's backup center with a fine knack for blocking shots; Junior Paula Poleschner, a fine ball handler and playmaker, who excelled in breaking up opponents' full-court press, and junior Roseann Picard, the only player on the squad and without previous Jayvee experience. An excellent outside shot, she is expected to be one of the mainstays of the 1975-76 team.

Sandy Stash, who joined the varsity after leading the Jayvees to a 9-2 record and second place in the UCAL Jayvee standings, led the Jayvees with 58 points and 112 rebounds. Denise Sevin was runnerup in scoring with 48 points and 81 rebounds.

Heartworm Warning Issued

KINGSTON
Alarmed by the increasing incidence of heartworm disease in the local dog population, the Ulster County Veterinary Organization, after a recent meeting, has recommended that all dogs in the county be tested for heartworms during March or April and that all dogs be protected with preventative medicine all through the summer and fall months.

In some areas of Ulster County, according to the veterinarians, as many as 50 percent of the unprotected dogs are carriers of the disease, considered to be the deadliest parasite of dogs in the area.

The veterinarians pointed out that their general recommendation concerning testing and medication could be modified depending on the incidence of heartworms in certain areas of the county and the exposure of a dog to mosquitoes. They recommended that all dog owners contact their veterinarians for specific advice early this spring.

About 30 varieties of mosquito spread heartworm disease. The mosquitoes take in the immature heartworms with the blood they extract from an infected canine and pass them on to the next canine that provides them with a meal. Mature females grow to 10 to 14 inches in the dog's heart, clogging the circulatory system and sometimes passing into the lungs, causing further difficulty for the animal.

According to the veterinarians, the disease can be treated with minimal risk and excellent success if caught in the early stages. As the disease progresses, they warn, treatment becomes more difficult and the prognosis becomes increasingly grave.

The veterinarians also warn that dog owners should not wait until their pets showing signs of illness before bringing them for treatment. They say the dogs are much harder to treat in this advanced stage of illness. Early signs of the illness may go unnoticed, and it may be from one to three years after initial exposure before the pet shows signs of the disease.

If a dog shows no signs of heartworm according to the reliable tests available to veterinarians, preventative medicine can be prescribed.

The medicine must be taken daily; it is needed from April 1 to Dec. 31, a month before mosquito season until two months afterward because of the way the disease develops.

Dog Owners Get Reminder

HURLEY
Town of Hurley dog owners must obtain licenses or summonses will be issued for them to appear in court, where fines of $10 plus court fees and mileage can be imposed, reminds Hurley Town Clerk Mrs. Patricia Glass.

The cost for each male or spayed female is $2.35 and for each unspayed female, $5.35. Licenses can be obtained by mail by sending a check, a self-addressed, stamped envelope and an application of the name, address and phone number of the applicant along with a description of the dog to: Town Clerk, P.O.

Box 25, West Hurley. Licenses will be returned by mail.

Dutchess Fatal

RHINEBECK
Gordon E. Bailey, 57, of Parsonage Street, Rhinebeck, died Friday night as the result of a one-car accident on Route 308.

State police in Rhinebeck said that Bailey was traveling alone in his pickup truck, heading west on 308 about 3/10 mile east of the Route 9G overpass, when the truck left the right shoulder of the road, hit a utility pole, swerved back onto the pavement and flipped over on the roof.

Bailey was pronounced dead on arrival at Northern Dutchess Hospital. State police in Hurley, meanwhile, investigated a Saturday morning accident on Binnewater Road, Town of Rosendale, in which a car driven by Barbara Colonna, 18, of Kingston, reportedly hit an icy patch, spun completely around and shot off an eight-foot embankment, and struck three guard rails and a tree.

Ms. Colonna was taken to Benedictine Hospital by Don's Ambulance where she was treated for several fractured ribs and released. And in Saugerties, village police are "not quite sure what happened" Saturday morning, but a Saugerties Central School District van rolled down Hill Street, a steep incline, crossed Ann Street and plowed into a garage owned by Bucky Squires, causing "extensive damage" to the structure.

TV Loot Got Lost in Shuffle

KINGSTON
There was $2,800 worth of color television sets lying smashed on the streets of Kingston early Saturday morning, and an alleged burglar was confined to Ulster County Jail on no bail.

Kingston police charged John R. Schiskie, Box 655, Poughkeepsie, a Marist College student, with two counts of burglary third degree, possession of stolen property second degree and 12 vehicle and traffic charges.

As told by a detective, Schiskie was pulling away from Scholar's Appliance, Inc. at 661 Broadway, at about 5 a.m. when a foot patrolman spotted a television set falling from the back of the truck into the middle of the street.

Thinking that perhaps the truck was delivering for Scholar's, he attempted to wave it down. When the truck kept going, he notified headquarters and a high speed chase ensued along city streets (leading to the traffic charges) that culminated when the truck was trapped on dead-end Staples Street.

During the chase, four more TV sets fell off the back of the truck at various locations, police said. They were valued at a total of $2,800.

Upon searching Schiskie and the vehicle, police reportedly found evidence linking him to a 2:30 a.m. burglary at Remus Wholesale, 55 Furnace Street, resulting in the second charge of burglary. They noted that a burglar alarm had been sounded at Remus, apparently scaring off the intruder with nothing more than some cigarettes.

Police said that no bail was set by City Court Judge Hubert Richter because Schiskie was reportedly a parolee.

Expo Ticket Sales Kickoff

Marking the beginning of ticket sales for the 28th annual Kingston Lions Exposition which will start April 29, Lions officers met recently to discuss the event. Shown are Paul Johnson (L), ticket chairman; Charles Schaller, Expo chairman and Ben Magalino, booth sales chairman. The Expo will again be held at the State Armory in Kingston. Tickets are available from any member. (Freeman photo)

Third Murder Trail Monday

KINGSTON
With jury selection set to begin Monday morning in Ulster County Court in the third murder trial of accused cop-killers Gerald McGivern and Charles Culhane, defense attorney Henry B. Rothblatt will apparently continue to seek a delay in the opening of the trial.

"I have to be consistent in my position; I'm not going to retreat from my position, so we'll leave it up to the court," the well-known New York City attorney told the Freeman.

Rothblatt, who represents Culhane, has been attempting since January to have the trial delayed on the grounds of his (Rothblatt's) alleged ill health. However, attempts to have the trial adjourned have been rebuffed by presiding Judge Robert Ecker, the Appellate Division and the U.S. District Court in Manhattan, which on Feb. 21 ordered the trial back to Ulster County jurisdiction.

Nearly 150 potential jurors are expected at the courthouse Monday, as jury selection will apparently be a protracted process.

Defense attorney Karen Peters of New Paltz, who represents McGivern, said she expects jury selection to begin Monday.

Prosecuting the case will be First Assistant DA Michael Kavanagh and Assistant DA Paul Gruner.

McGivern and Culhane are accused of the 1968 shooting death of a Westchester County sheriff's deputy on the Thruway near Plattekill during an alleged escape attempt.

They have been tried twice previously. Their first trial in 1970 ended in a hung jury.

The second trial in 1971 ended in conviction, and McGivern and Culhane were sentenced to death. But the death penalty was later overturned, and in 1973 the Appellate Court ordered a new trial due to technical irregularities in jury selection.

Two 'Pot' Arrests

KINGSTON
Charges for criminal possession of marijuana were filed against two Franklin Street residents Friday night by city police.

Police arrested Juan Colon, 30, of 45 Franklin Street, on sixth degree possession, a felony and unlawfully dealing with a child, 16-year-old Angel Velez. Velez was also arrested on seventh degree possession, a misdemeanor, and loitering. He resides at 37 Franklin Street. A charge of grand larceny, third degree, was also filed against Velez for altering a draft card.

The two were confined to Ulster County Jail in city court and are scheduled to reappear March 3.

State police in Leeds Friday arrested Gregory Brandon, 22, of Cairo for criminal possession, fifth degree, of marijuana. He was placed in Greene County Jail on $1,000 bail by Town of Catskill Justice Charles Crommie.

Arrest Suspect

ELLENVILLE
State police in Ellenville arrested a New York City homicide suspect Friday on a tip from an informant.

Police said Herbert Lee Mayberry was wanted in New York on a two-year-old warrant. He has been employed at the Brookside Hotel in Kerhonkson for about two years, they said.

Mayberry was transported to the city by New York City police.

Arrest Area Man

SAUGERTIES

A West Camp man was arrested Saturday night for allegedly trying to stab another Saugerties man with a meat knife.

Victor S. Clearwater, 36, was charged by Saugerties Town Police with reckless endangerment first degree, a felony. Complainant and alleged target of the knife, was Peter Andersen of Old Kings Highway.

'An Uncommon Hatching'

Two baby Black Swans swim under the protective watch of their parents at the National Zoo in Washington. Zoo officials say that although baby swans have hatched at the zoo previously, the hatching of these two-week-old youngsters is "not terribly" common in captivity. (UPI)

Carey Formally Names Dyson

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Book publisher John Dyson of Millbrook has been named commissioner of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets, Gov. Hugh L. Carey announced.

Dyson, 31, succeeds Frank Walkley of Castile, a holdover from the Republican administration of Malcolm Wilson and Nelson Rockefeller. Walkley resigned from the $47,800-a-year post last week.

Dyson, active in Democratic party affairs for several years and the party's congressional candidate in 1968 for the 25th District, had been considered the top candidate for the post since Carey took over as governor Jan. 1. He headed up Carey's task force on agricultural problems.

A graduate in agricultural economics from Cornell University, Dyson is president and publisher of Dymor Communications Inc., which publishes weekly newspapers in Ulster, Nassau, Suffolk and Westchester counties. He also has helped manage the family farm near Millbrook.

In addition to his degree from Cornell, Dyson holds a master's degree in public affairs from Princeton University and serves on the advisory council at the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

In announcing the appointment, Carey said farm problems have been ignored and that Dyson would probe the situation and organize a state conference on food.

"Farmers must be assured of a reasonable return on their labor and products, while consumers must be guaranteed quality food at a reasonable price," Carey said.

Dyson is an official of the Holy Land Conservation Fund, treasurer of the Foxfire Fund and director of Greer Children's Community, which runs child care programs in Binghamton, Middletown and Millbrook.

He is married to the former Kathie Maria Bova of Toledo, Ohio. They have a daughter.

The appointment requires Senate confirmation, which is expected.

Fair Board Directors

NEW PALTZ
Six new directors have been named to the Ulster County Fair Board.

Serving new three-year terms are: Robert H.

Kuhlmann, a member of the Ulster County Legislature from Ellenville; Earl Harp of New Paltz, who has served for many years as electrician for the fair; Arthur Smith of Cragmoor, a director of the Federated Sportsmen's Show; Ted Kiburn, a director of the Federation; John Florsch of Saugerties, a director and vice-president of the Federation and Louis Resnick, an Ulster County Legislator and a member of the New York State Horse Breeders Association.

Walter Elmore of High Falls was elected president of the Fair board; Edward Wiltse of Kingston was named vice-president.

Climatic Change Viewed

NEW PALTZ
The ways in which man's activities may be affecting the earth's climate will be discussed at SUNY at New Paltz March 4 by a representative of the Department of Environmental Conservation.

Alfred Hulstrunk, executive secretary of the New York State Environmental Board, will speak on "Climatic Change — A Natural and Technological Interface."

The talk is open to the general public with no admission charge, and will begin at 8 p.m. in the Coykendall Science Building Auditorium.

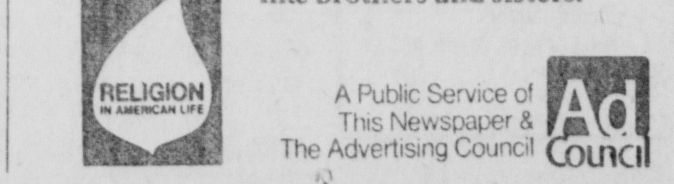

"There's nothing I can do. I'm just one person."

Do you really think God is going to let you get away with that?

If you feel one person is too insignificant to help make the world a better place, then work together with others at your local church or synagogue. Example: in Montana, one congregation was disturbed by the lack of adequate housing for senior citizens in the area. Through its perseverance, a non-profit building with 111 homes is now a reality. There are lots of things you can do, too. The God we worship expects more from us than sympathy and good intentions.

Start treating your brothers and sisters like brothers and sisters.

Rocky Steps Down

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller announces his resignation as chairman of the Commission on Critical Choices for Americans during meeting in New York. The group was set up by Rockefeller in 1972 to help long-range problems facing the nation. (UPI)

Lon Nol Willing to Resign Post

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian President Lon Nol told six visiting U.S. Congressional fact-finders Saturday he is willing to step down in order to help bring peace to his nation. He pleaded for more U.S. aid and asked the Americans "not to abandon us."

The six members of Congress flew to Phnom Penh from Saigon Saturday, braving rebel rockets that have been hitting the capital's airport and the city itself daily. Rebel forces slammed 20 rockets into Pochentong airport and a nearby village before and after the Congressional group's arrival, and another pair of rockets hit Phnom Penh itself, about half a mile from where the lawmakers were having lunch with senior government officials.

"I would do whatever is possible and necessary so that peace and the welfare of my people can be achieved," Lon Nol told the six legislators. Lon Nol appealed for another $222 million in military aid for Cambodia. "I would like to urge you not to abandon us," he said.

During their flying eight-hour visit to Phnom Penh, the Congress members were told by U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean they must vote on the aid bill within two weeks or Cambodia will run out of ammunition.

It marked the first time any senior U.S. official had put a time limit on Congressional action.

"We were told by the ambassador that if we do not vote more aid within two weeks, Phnom Penh will run out of ammunition and fall," said Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Kla., after a private meeting with Dean.

Multi-Million Aid for Penn Central, Others

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has signed two multi-million-dollar bills designed to keep the giant Penn Central and other bankrupt Northeast railroads from going out of business, the White House announced Saturday.

One provides an immediate $125 million to the Department of Transportation for emergency assistance to the Penn Central, the nation's largest railroad.

The other amends the Railway Reorganization Act and increases by $347 million the authorization for government grants and loan guarantees to the Penn Central, Erie Lackawanna and other rail lines.

The bills were rushed through Congress during the past week on the urging of officials of the railroads. Penn Central executives warned they could not meet employee payrolls without the help.

The railroads are currently undergoing reorganization under government control.

White House officials said the $347 million was intended, which has been authorized but not yet actually funded, was for use by the railroads until their operations are assumed by Conrail in 1976.

The Senate and House also tacked on two amendments to the bills which do not affect the railroads.

One provides $18 million to the legislative branch for renovation of a building to be taken over for use by the House. It also provides $1 million for construction of a parking lot for use by the Senate.

The legislation signed by the President also repealed a 10 per cent reduction in congressional travel expenses which had been imposed earlier.

President Ford spent Saturday working and relaxing at his mountain retreat, with a decision pending on whether to suspend two $1 oil tariff increases to encourage compromise with Democrats on Capitol Hill.

Ford's top aide, Donald Rumsfeld, joined the President at noon Saturday to study possible compromises on an energy policy with the Congressional Democrats.

The President's original plan put a new $1 per barrel tariff on foreign oil Feb. 1. A second $1 tariff was imposed to start at midnight Friday, and another is set for April 1.

Congress passed legislation blocking the Friday and April 1 tariffs for 90 to the bill. Democrats have vowed to override any veto. The House appeared certain to override, but a Senate vote was expected to be close.

Friday, the White House announced Ford was pondering whether to suspend the tariff increases but still veto the legislation. The plan was viewed as an administration effort to extend an olive branch to Congress and show Ford is serious about wanting to avoid extended battle over reaching a coherent, bipartisan national energy policy.

Saturday, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said the tariff suspension would not eliminate a Senate vote on the veto, but would make prospects for an override unlikely.

Ford has promised to advise the Congressional leadership by Monday of possible areas of compromise on energy policy. He specifically mentioned suspending the tariff increases Friday.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the President was thinking in terms of a 60 day suspension, a month less than would be required under the bill passed by Congress. Nessen said the suspension would not be a "concession" but a signal of "success in his efforts to get congress to get busy."

OPEC Talks About World Glut

ALGIERS (UPI) — Government ministers of the 13 top oil exporting nations, facing a world oil glut, opened a weekend of talks Saturday to prepare next week's meeting of their leaders, the first summit in the cartel's history.

In formal meetings and in quiet bilateral chats, the foreign, oil and finance ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries discussed the need to keep oil prices up, damage caused by inflation and the falling dollar and their first major conference this spring with the newly united oil-using nations.

But OPEC sources said the ministerial meeting and the summit opening here Tuesday would produce no public statement beyond a "declaration of principles" stressing the "solidarity" of the oil-producing nations.

OPEC finance ministers met in Vienna earlier last week and delegated some of these problems to a committee which will report back next month. The summit meeting will avoid discussing them formally, the sources said, because this might expose rifts within the cartel at a time when its 18-month record of success may be about to be broken.

At the Vienna meeting,

Abu Dhabi, the chief nation of the United Arab Emirates, won permission to cut its prices by 15 cents below the official $10.12 per barrel because it needs to sell more of its oil.

Hijacker, Two Slain

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A hijacker and two passengers were shot to death Saturday in a gun battle between three men who commandeered an Iraqi Airlines Boeing 737 and Iraqi security officers aboard the plane.

The two hijackers surrendered to Iranian authorities after their partner and the two passengers were killed during the shootout aboard the plane on a runway of Tehran's Mehrabad airport, where the air pirates had forced the craft to land after seizing it on a domestic flight.

Iranian authorities said seven of the more than 90 persons aboard the plane were injured.

The hijackers had demanded $5 million and the release of anti-Iraqi government Kurdish political leaders imprisoned in Iraq or they would blow up the plane and all aboard, airport officials said.

Icicles have hushed the music of its calliope — but the Driftwood Floating Theatre is a beehive of activity within. For more on how the Showboat weathers winter and plans for spring, see page 2.

Snug and warm inside the Showboat, one of the Captain's dogs is roused from sleep beside the blazing, old-fashioned stove; perks up those canine ears as a too tall pile of books and scripts topple into the stage wings, felled by the unseen current and a rising wind of winter.

ECHOES OF THE CALLIOPE

Swift, strong currents deep beneath the calm surface of Rondout Creek pull, ooke a giant invisible hand, the SHOWBOAT at her mooring. Heavy ropes, "lines" in sailors' parlance, feel the silent strain and grow taut. Waiting and ready, the Driftwood Floating Theatre fights a life and death struggle against the most formidable and the most feared of the water's hazards — ice. The crew watches as a thin skim spreads rapidly across the creek, snapping and crackling like rifle shot in the cold, still night air. At the ready are heavy blocks of concrete, attached to hand ropes. The crew will try to smash the ice before it freezes hard against the wooden hull. A perimeter of tires, hung by steel cables, form a thin defense line surrounding the Showboat at the waterline. They are to keep the sharp and jagged edges from cutting deep gashes into the hull's 4 inch thick wooden planks, as the ice moves past. This unusual struggle between Theatre and the River began with the first Showboat nearly 150 years ago.

William Chapman's "FLOATING THEATRE" was launched in Pittsburgh in 1831. On this plain, powerless covered barge, his family drifted with the current down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. They played one night stands at any promising town or landing that looked like it could supply an audience. A peck of potatoes or yams, two gallons of fruit, a side of bacon, or 50¢ (preferably the last) was the usual price of admission. Then began one of the oldest Showboat traditions — children half-price. The watery western frontier supplied the Chapmans with many great adventures, for the river then was wild and uncharted.

Not only did they survive the experience, but in the 16 years they rode the restless rivers they established the pattern that most American Showboats would follow — family operated, semi-commercial in interest, and emphasizing the restful and perhaps the oversentimental atmosphere, that is still remembered today. A parade of Floating Theatres followed, now also called Floating Palaces by their ever modest promoters, in such variety and numbers, large and small, grand and rag, good and bad, that they were of every description. Towering over all of these was the greatest colossus of boat and show ever seen on the river, Spaulding and Rodgers' FLOATING CIRCUS PAL-dows! Launched in 1851 at Cincinnati, the Confederate Government took over in 1862 to convert her into a hospital ship, stationed in New Orleans. Then the boats of the river, from proud steamers belching out clouds of soot and cinders, to humble keelboats that sweated out strong backs and curses, were crushed beneath the horror of from St. Paul to New Orleans with a floating circus. His colorful and courageous career spanned 40 years on the rivers, including the difficult Reconstruction period, and through him were preserved and kept intact the traditions — and even the very possibility of showboating.

The Driftwood of today, now caught by the unseen current and a rising wind, bumps heavily into its Kingston landing. Inside the dark theatre crystal prisms chandeliers tinkle like wind chimes. Magnolia and Gaylord, the Captain's two dogs, perk up their ears as a too tall pile of books and scripts topple into the stage wings. Deep within the boat a great rumbled gurgling is heard as large bubbles of air trapped beneath the hull shift restlessly. The movement stops, but the wind has picked up, and pushes against the shore side of the Showboat. Again the heavy lines take up the strain, and shift, as 400 tons of boat and theatre pull toward the deep water of the Hudson, into which the Rondout flows.

Reliving the War For Hudson's River

The War for Hudson's River, 1775-1783, is the title of a credit-free course being offered this spring by Ulster County Community College.

The course will be taught by Harry Rigby Jr., Kingston city historian, and member of both the Kingston and Ulster County Bicentennial Committees.

Rigby will show that the Hudson Valley played a major part — in men, money, supplies, morale and political maturity — during the great Revolutionary War struggle.

Through the course the stirring battles that changed a nation will be relived — and participants will be able to reflect on the daily life of the region's ancestors in their economy, commerce, agriculture, and transportation. In addition, there will be an explanation of how the governmental apparatus grew and social classes changed.

The course, which will meet four Tuesday nights starting March 18 (there is no class April 1), should prove helpful for individuals wanting to prepare for involvement in the nation's birthday next year and members of committees planning Bicentennial celebrations.

Rigby has spent 40 years in study and research on the Revolutionary War, with emphasis on the Hudson Valley. He has been a member of the Ulster County Historical Society and served as a vice president for any years. He also has edited the society's quarterly.

The first chairman of the City of Kingston Historic Landmarks Preservation Commission, Rigby drew the ordinance creating the commission and establishing its legal guidelines. He has also served as a member of the Stockade Committee.

The registration deadline for the course is March 11.

If you have BankAmericard or Master Charge, you may register by phone, 687-7621, ext. 11 or 12. In-person registration is possible by going to the Office for Continuing Education, Clinton Administration Building, Stone Ridge campus. The office is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Monday through Thursday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m.

Final Performances

Lynn Beattie, as Alison Porter, is berated by John Haag, as her husband, Jimmy, in scene from the Hamlet Theatre production of "Look Back in Anger." The John Osborne drama will take to the stage of the recently opened theatre on Route 28A, West Hurley, for two more performances on the nights of March 7 and 8. With the closing of "Anger," Hamlet's cast and crew will go to rehearsals for its next production, Harold Pinter's "The Caretaker," slated to open April 4.

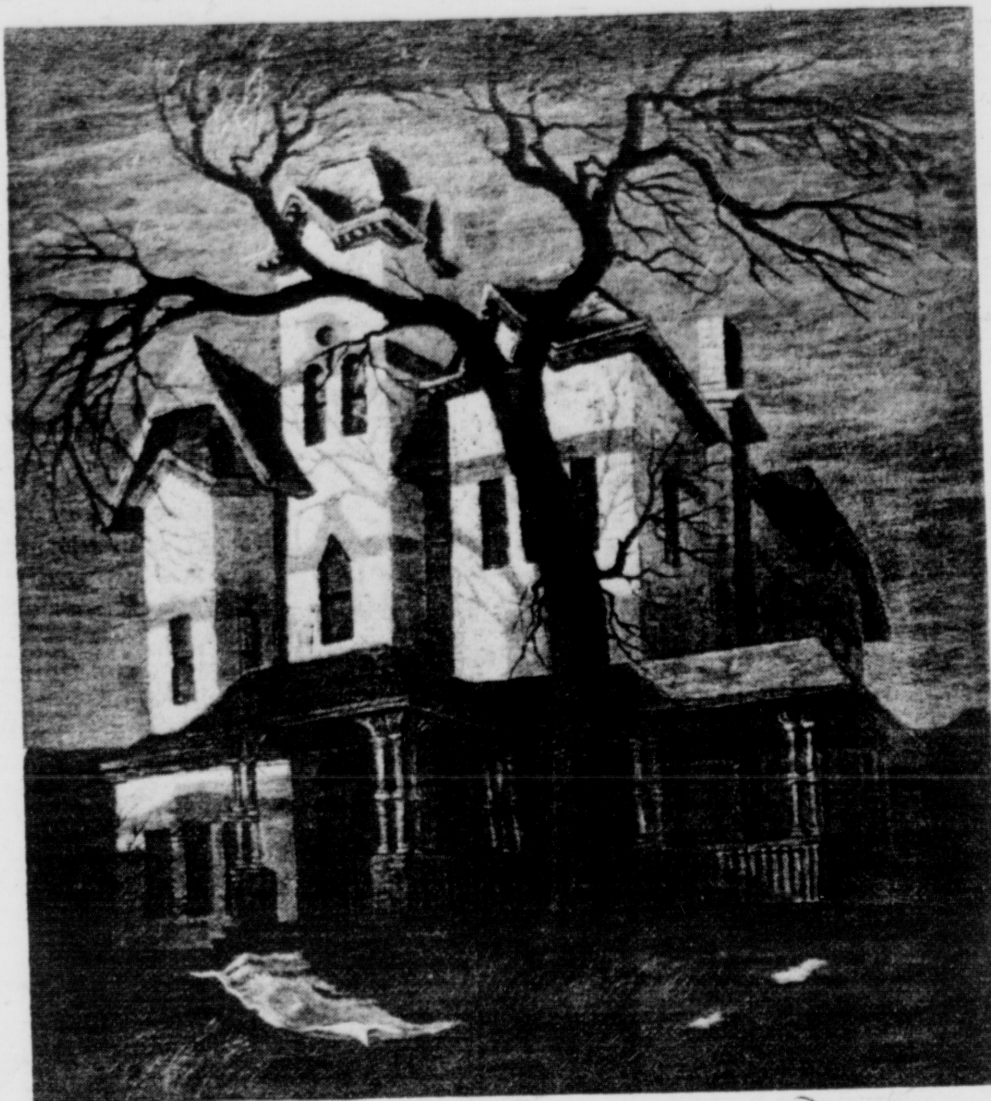

UCCC exhibit remembers a Woodstock artist who became nationally famous for the beauty she evoked in the simple, human things of life.

"Evening Shadows" is the title of this oil painting by the late Jenne Magafan.

A Strong Personal Force Stamps the Warm Work Of the Late Jenne Magafan

"At a time when Americans are re-examining their roots and reassessing their values, the paintings of Jenne Magafan confront us with renewed significance. Hers is a special heritage marked with particular point for earth-minded men on a planet growing smaller by the hour."

Those are the words of Nat Resnick, chairman of the Art Department of Long Island University, where an exhibit of the luminous paintings of Jenne Magafan has been on display for the past month.

Soon now, Tempo readers will be seeing the same show Long Islanders have been acclaiming these past four weeks. Just closed at LIU, the Magafan exhibit will open shortly (on March 9) at Ulster County Community College in Stone Ridge—to run through April 25.

At the time of her death in 1952, Jenne Magafan was considered one of America's finest women painters and muralists. Raised in Colorado, she and her equally talented artist sister Ethel came to Woodstock in 1945 for a summer's stay. Impressed by both the Catskills art colony and its artists, she and her painter-sculptor husband, Edward Chavez, bought a Woodstock home; established their studios there several years later.

Since her untimely death in 1952, several memorial exhibitions of her work have been held at the Woodstock Artists Association, The Albany Institute of History and Art, and the Ganso Gallery in New York City.

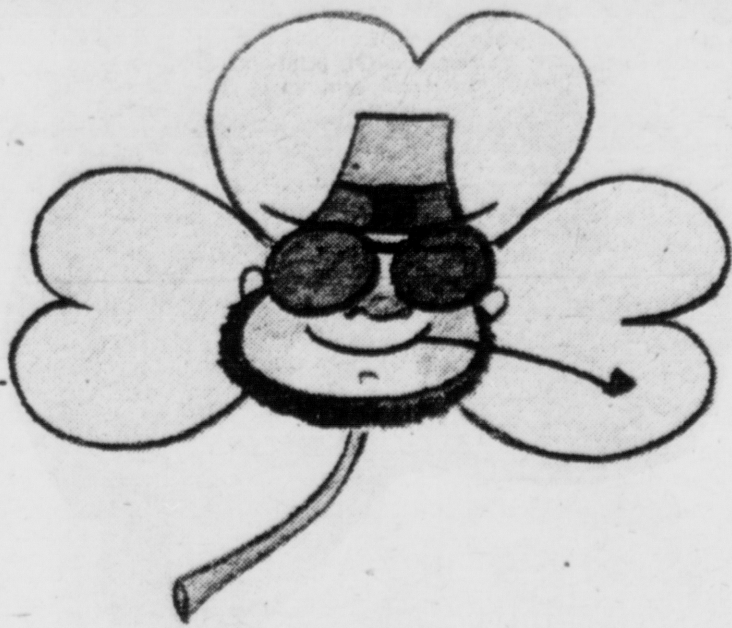

The show at Long Island University was the first such show, however, in many years. And it attracted a whole new generation of students to her work—work which earned her a reputation in her lifetime as a powerful, lasting image-maker.

Ulsterites who visit the show while it is on view at the UCCC campus will find that to see her paintings is to learn that, to Jenne Magafan, beauty lay in the simple, human things of life. With her own individuality she painted a room, a staircase, a chair, but invested them with such extraordinary warmth, richness of texture and subtlety of tone that, curiously, they take on symbolic meaning.

She was an artist of great warmth and integrity who, in a brief career that ended all too soon in death at a youthful age, established an enviable record of accomplishments that earned national recognition. Her work has been included in all the most important exhibitions throughout the United States, and seven of her murals are installed in public buildings.

An opening reception to preview the show at UCCC will be held, Sunday, March 9 2-4 p.m. in the Visual Arts Gallery on campus. Following the opening, the show will be on view in the Vanderlyn Hall gallery through April 25 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. There is never an admission charge at the gallery.

That's what band leader Papa Bear is saying between puffs on his clay pipe in this cartoon caricature of himself. And it'll be another St. Paddies at the Centerville parish hall for Papa Bear and his musicians when they help diners and dancers celebrate St. John's Saint Patrick's Nite Dinner Dance on Saturday evening, March 15.

A corned beef and cabbage dinner complete with draft beer and set-ups will be served from 8 to 9:30 p.m. in the parish hall on Route 212 between Saugerties and Woodstock. After-dinner music for dancing and listening will be provided by Papa Bear and his Boomsadaisy Band.

Reservations will be limited to 350 so all can dine in comfort. Tickets are $7 per person and you can assure yourself of a tasty ethnic meal and musical fun by reserving in advance by calling 246-5147.

On Hudson Valley Tour, They Picked Apples . . . Tasted Wine & Danced

While it received little before-the-fact publicity, the recent visit of New York City Ballet dancers to the Hudson Valley was, in retrospect, a rewarding experience for dancers and area youngsters alike.

Two groups of three dancers from New York City Ballet set out to bring ballet to elementary school children in the Hudson Valley. Coleen Neary, soloist, and Jim Hazel from from City Center's Education Department worked out programming and schedules. Suki Schorer from the School of American Ballet prepared the lectures.

Miss Neary, Maria Calegari, Gerard Ebitz and their stage manager Vaughan Lowther, traveled throughout the valley and as far north as Poughkeepsie. Judy Fugate, Elizabeth Pawluck and Charles Maple, with assistance from Rex Thompson, also traversed the valley, going as far west as Liberty.

The tour lasted eight school days and each group performed for assemblies at two schools a day in different towns in the area. They stayed at local hotels and traveled by car to the schools visited.

Ballet soloist Colleen Neary described the lecture-demonstration to Tempo:

"First, we danced the Tchaikovsky Pas de Deux to taped music. As spokesman for our group, I told the children how we make a ballet . . . then how we learn a ballet. I also told them about the men's classes, the women's classes and 'toe' dancing, adagio and partnering. Then, we danced the Pas de Deux from Nutcracker.

"At each school we visited in the Hudson Valley, I'd show a boy from the audience how we do a 'promenade' and Gerry would demonstrate 'lifts' to a girl student. Gerry had choreographed a contemporary Pas de Trois for us especially for these presentations: Classical Gas by Mason Williams. I'd also describe the duties of the stage manager which are so important to the success of the performance.

"We danced solos from Stars and Stripes and finished with a question and answer period. One little girl at a Poughkeepsie school asked, 'Why don't you talk when you dance?'

"The hours were grim. One morning we got up at 6 a.m., drove to the school, had a warm-up session and gave our first program at 8:30. In some cases another program would follow at 9:30."

Grim hours notwithstanding, ballerina Neary said it was a wonderful and rewarding experience.

And that included the diversions, said Colleen. For, when the dancers could find the time, they picked Hudson Valley apples and tasted Hudson Valley wine!"

THE SCATTERNOTES — This fine quartet has represented Colonial City Chapter in New York City at the Region 1 Annual Quartet Competition. Singing foursome includes (L-R) Pat Brecke, lead; Anne Rick, bass; Nancy Bishopp, baritone; Austy DuFresne, tenor. Singing together since the fall of '73, they continually add new material to their repertoire. They regularly perform with the Sweet Adelines Chorus; will be featured in Colonial City's annual show this weekend; are always available to entertain for area group affairs.

Behind the Seams With Sweet Adelines

A whale of a production is in the making as the Colonial City Chapter of Sweet Adelines prepare for their annual show. From the talented women involved, there'll be musical magic galore. And for masucline enhancement, there'll be Tony Bell and Jim Thompson of radio fame; the Hay Stack Four, of Barbershop fame; and Edwin Fitchett, famous for his tricks of prestidigitation and other magical feats.

Theme for this year's Adelines' show is COUNTDOWN TO HARMONY—and harmony will reign supreme when it's staged next Saturday night, March 8 at 8 p.m. at Kingston's George Washington School.

Guest star Tony Bell, general manager of radio station WGHQ and noted for his capers with the local Kiwanis Club, has been MC for numerous area pageants; returns to kick up his heels with the Adelines after captaining their Showboat in 1972 and ring-mastering their Ringling Sisters Charm-em Daily Circus in 1974.

Ed Fitchett's career as a magician spans 30 years, and he excels at comedy routines for children and young people. A member of the Society of American Magicians and International Brotherhood of Magicians, he has lent his talents as advisor to such theatrical productions as the Nutcracker Ballet. Few are as skilled as Fitchett in the centuries old, ancient Chinese art of handling the Chinese Linking Rings.

Famous in both the United States and Canada, the Hay Stack Four of Worcester, Mass., appeared only once before with the Adelines in this area. They've added new and zanier antics to their all new barbershop songs; promise singing capers to delight Saturday night's audience.

Jim Thompson, also a fixture at radio station WGHQ as an account executive, has been MC for many broadcasts, lent his popular personality to a variety of entertainment events, including scripting and performing in the annual Kiwanis Club Kapers. His considerable comedic talents will add to the fun of the Adelines, "Countdown to Harmony" romp.

Also spotlighted in the show will be The Scatternotes, a quartet gleaned from the ranks of the local Colonial City Chapter. Highly entertaining, they represented the chapter in last year's annual quartet competition; continue to add to their repertoire with new barbershop harmonies.

After Saturday's show, the Adelines Chorus will head for the Regional Competition in Saratoga in April to compete with some 20 choruses of the Northeast area. Last year they brought home the Small Chorus Award; will be hoping to keep the trophy for another year.

The international organization of Sweet Adelines has reorganized its 25,000 women and 1,600 chapters; has changed region boundaries in the doing. Next May, Colonial City will begin competing in Region 15 instead of Region 1. And, since this includes Southern New York, New Jersey and Long Island, local Adelines can anticipate meeting new friends; going new places for pleasurable get-togethers.

All ready for "Countdown to Harmony" curtain to rise is this trio of Adelines: Austy DuFresne (kneeling) and behind her (L-R) Ruth Martin and Sherry Horn.

It Merited Raves; Returns to Stage

That popularly acclaimed production of Sean O'Casey's "Bedtime Story," as performed by the Woodstock Players, scored so successfully as dinner-theatre fare in the art colony recently that it's been booked for another engagement. The rousing comedy will be presented again at the Boiceville Inn, Route 28, Boiceville, on Saturday night, March 8.

For $6.50 per person (which includes the price of dinner and the show), Boiceville Inn will serve a complete roast beef dinner.

The one-act comedy, set in a Dublin boarding house, is directed by Gladys B. Russell; stars Steve Weinberg, Joan Schulich, Rochelle Parker Haas and Nick Ferrari. Of its two sell-out performances presented recently at a Woodstock restaurant, reviewers said "the audience grinned with pleasure and delight" . . . "a rousing event."

Dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. with the play to follow. Reservations for the dinner-theatre event can be made by phoning Boiceville Inn at 657-8500 or 657-8911.

Rochelle Haas, who will be transformed into a grey-haired, bespectacled landlady for her starring role in "Bedtime Story" when it's performed at the Boiceville Inn in a dinner-theater presentation.

The ice that has encrusted the landscape surrounding the Showboat has also enveloped the Driftwood Floating Theatre. But the venerable barge's seeming hibernation is only a pseudo-camouflage for the beehive of activity inside.

Big sweeps steered the boat with Captain French and his wife, Callie, depending solely on the current for motive power. The little company of eight managed to make the broad Mississippi during January, with sand bars, sawyers, fog, and cold. When the head winds were stronger than the current, or when the fog settled over the water too thick, they tied up at the bank sometimes for days, and considered themselves lucky if there was wood enough to burn for warmth. More than once, if the river fell rapidly when they were tied to the bank, the Sensation was left half stranded, the bow on land, the stern afloat. But the river always rose again and carried them on their way. As often as they could work into a landing, they would put on a show. During the next 29 years the Frenchs would operate five successive boats — each one bigger and better than the last, and each named "NEW SENSATION."

They set a standard for clean, wholesome entertainment on the river, and developed the basic design that all later Showboats would use. From plain boats with benches for seats, at the mercy of wind and current, they evolved into elegant twin deck theatres with opera seats and boxes, and most important, a steamboat at the stern to push the Showboat on the rivers. A genuine Showboat never had a paddle wheel — they remained powerless barges, pushed by the stern wheeler; the two boats traveling together as one unit.

Of all the Floating Theatres the grandest and most palatial was the GOLDENROD Showboat. Built in 1909, she was 200 feet long, 45 feet wide, with 21 boxes on two levels clustered about the stage — and all around the front of the balcony, the ceilings and walls were studded with 2,500 light clusters in intricate designs — and she could seat 1,700. "I can't think of anything more pleasant," reminisces Ed Furbush, Captain of the Driftwood, "than to stand on the river bank in a crowd and watch a Showboat sliding in, with the calliope going full blast." He was more often on the Showboat waving than on the river bank watching. Captain Ed spent most of the period from 1930 through 1940 with the boats plying the Southwestern waters. "We played the Missouri, the Monongahela, the Ohio and of course the Mississippi Rivers. There were some landings, I remember, where people were afraid to come on board the GOLDENROD, as they had never seen anything man-made on land that large, much less afloat! The Hollywood, that was the first Showboat I worked on, was a smaller boat just about the size of the Driftwood. River folk weren't accustomed to anything much larger."

The HOLLYWOOD was crushed in 1941 by the ice on the Clark River.

In 1943, 100 years and over 200 Showboats after the Chapmans, only the GOLDENROD remained operating, in St. Louis. The great boat burned in 1964. Rebuilt, her spacious auditorium was divided up into a night club-restaurant operation. Elegant and grand, yet it is only the shell that remains of the Floating Theatre that once proudly served the growing frontier.

A decade before the fire on the Goldenrod, work had begun on the DRIFTWOOD. Progress was slow, yet this theatrical family, helped by friends, held together the threads of their great vanishing American heritage. Like earlier boats, she was powerless, and would be converted from a plain covered barge into a trimmed twin deck Floating Theatre, with eight boxes clustered around the stage, an orchestra pit, and a two tiered horseshow balcony! Truly, as described in a recent Smithsonian publication, "Last of a Breed."

Ice has formed around the Driftwood's hull this winter leaving a scant few inches of free water. It has remained too thin for real concern. But large heavy ice flows drift past Kingston Point from the northern reaches of the Hudson. Some, swept in by the incoming tide, silently enter the Rondout; must be carefully watched by those aboard the Showboat.

The austere, calm appearance of the Showboat during the winter months does not tell the daily drama played with the river, nor does it reveal the great activity within. New shows for '75 are being prepared, casting plans made and schedules readied for the May opening. An unending flow of correspondence is answered from all across the country.

Elsewhere throughout the Hudson Valley, schools and organizations are beginning to make timely plans for spring bookings when the calliope will again go full blast. And, if you listen closely now, in the quiet of the night, you may even hear summer's echoes of the calliope still dancing on a distant hill — recalling the charm, color and vibrancy the Showboat brought to Rondout before icicles hushed its music.

Luis Garcia-Renart, newly appointed Acting Music Director of the Hudson Valley
Philharmonic, will guide the orchestra through transitional period resulting from Claude Monteux's resignation.

Guiding Philharmonic Through Transition

The Hudson Valley Philharmonic has named Luis Garcia-Renart as Acting Music Director for the 1975-76 season. He will take over the role July 1—the date longtime Maestro Claude Monteux's resignation takes effect. Currently principal cellist and Assistant Conductor of the Philharmonic, Garcia-Renart also directs the Orchestra in Progress which serves as a training orchestra. During the upcoming season he will conduct at least three of the series concerts, and will work to guide the orchestra through this transitional period.

David Aldeborgh, President of the Philharmonic, says he's "extremely happy" with this appointment and adds: "Mr. Garcia-Renart has the respect and confidence of all the musicians and has shown himself to be eminently qualified to fulfill the responsibilities with which he is now entrusted."

Luis Garcia-Renart has had a fascinating musical career. He was born in Barcelona and began studying cello when he was 11 years old; later, he attended the Conservatories of Mexico, Bern and Basel in Switzerland, Trossingen in Germany, and Moscow. He has appeared in recitals and as a soloist in Mexico, Europe, the Soviet Union and the United States. For many years he was a personal student of the late master, Pablo Casals, and in 1961 received a special scholarship to work with Mstislav Rostropovich in Moscow. He has won numerous international awards and prizes and has received wide praise and critical acclaim. Currently, he devotes some of his time to teaching and is on the staff of Bard and Vassar Colleges.

He is personally excited about this new appointment and says: "My main interest is to further the quality of the orchestra, following the high standards which Claude Monteux set, and I am certainly looking forward to this opportunity."

POTPOURRI

By JOAN L. WOINOSKI

Even with the Lincoln Day dinner at Governor Clinton, Beta Sigma Phi's Valentine Queen crowning by Hizzoner, the Mayor, at Holiday Inn, along with the forecast of snow, freezin' rain, sleet, and the usual February virus bugs, St. Peter's Couple's Club George Washington gala more than held its own. Cars were parked as far as several city blocks away; the whole area looked like a used car lot. Dottie Decker figured it'd have been quicker if they walked — and she lives in the Town of Ulster!

Hank Boice was bein' complimented on his weight loss. Wife Flo took all the joy out of it though; claims the weight's till there, pounds just shifted.

Frank and Grace Bartroff were tellin' friends that come May, they'll be wed 60 years. The secret of their happy union? Gracie claims she always made it a point to check with Frank before buyin' anything. Frank would say: "Gracie, if you can see your way clear, go ahead." Somehow, she always managed to see her way clear.

Clair and Louise Sheaffer had just returned home the night before from a month's vacation in Florida. But then, everytime one runs into the Sheaffers, it seems either he, she (or both) are comin' or goin'. Back only 24 hours and already Clair was hungerin' for one of those special hot fudge sundaes he splurged on every day down south. As for Louise, it was obvious she'd gotten in many hours on the beach and on the golf green. Once you came within talkin' distance you could feel the heat from her suntan. And, if you happened to accidentally bump into her, she not only glowed, she positively sizzled!

It was great to see Bud Clearwater there. For years, Bud helped make the battle-of-the-budget easier to win as one of Grand Union's most popular managers. Retiring a few months back, Bud discovered a well of energy that hadn't been even tapped yet. So-o-o, it's back to the grind, part time anyhow, at a local food market. As Bud puts it: "Sure beats walkin' a hole in the livin' room rug."

Weavin' their way 'round the hatchets and chopped-down cherry trees were such George Washington birthday celebrators as the Bob Delanoys, Holly and Bob Speers, Bill Markle, Joe and Dottie Mikesh, Ed and Louise Norton, Frank and Irene Lavery, the Smiths, the Gorslines.

Ted Musialkiewicz' table had its own private Paul Jones session; they changed partners so often, it was hard to tell who "belonged" to whom. By the time the buffet was served, it was so warm in the hall Vic Izzo had to remove his colorful ascot. Of course, the heat could've been caused by the tempo of the Howard Rust Band. Then again, one must not underestimate the power of solar energy and, gettin' back to Louise Sheaffer... that sure was a sizzlin' suntan!

Fridays Now Special Days

Fridays at the Ancram Restoration will be special Senior Citizen days. There will be special attractions and programs at the Johann Strauss Athenaeum (operetta museum) at a reduced rate for senior citizens who show their Medicare Card during the month of March.

Any senior citizen interested in taking advantage of the opportunity may mail a self-addressed, stamped envelope for information and schedule of events to Senior Citizens Events, Ancram Restoration, Ancram, N.Y., 12502, or call Miss Janssen at (518) 329-1166. These special Fridays are offered to provide entertainment for senior citizens at a reduced cost during these times of inflation. Senior citizens driving to take advantage of these activities bring along a friend or two and fill up the car. The gas spent to drive one or two will bring four to six at no extra charge.

If the senior citizen days are well attended, they will be extended for additional months. So if you like the idea, support it and visit the Ancram Restoration on Friday.

TV Notes

Ebony Wright, Harold Sylvestor and Darryl Young will play the starring roles in the television version of "Sounder" which were played in the film by Cicely Tyson, Paul Winfield and Kevin Hooks.

Ross Hunter, long a successful motion picture producer, will make his producing debut in television with "Woman in Jeopardy" starring Shirley Jones in a two-hour NBC movie.

Eddie Egan, the former New York City cop involved in the real "French Connection" case, will play a cop in an episode of "Police Story" starring Lloyd Bridges.

Dwayne Hickman, who grew up in the role of "Dobbie Gillis" on television, returned to 20th Century-Fox where the series was filmed for a guest star in the new "Karen" series starring Karen Valentine.

Lucie Arnaz signed with NBC-TV to star in a one-hour special to be filmed at Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

Beverly Garland and Ed Nelson will guest-star on an episode of MGM-TV's "Medical Center."

Food Is Fuel For Every Body

Saturday: Dear Diary, Today I ate: (and drank)

Morning: 2 tarts • 1 glass of milk • 2 apples
• 1 peanut butter sandwich • 8 cookies
• 1 carbonated drink • 1 banana

Afternoon: 1 hamburger • 1 order french fries
• 1 carbonated drink • 10 lolly pops • 7 cookies • 1 small package potato chips

Evening: 1 stalk of celery • 3 pieces of pizza • 2 carbonated drinks • 3 ice cream sandwiches • 4 cookies.

Research has shown that many U.S. children are under-nourished because they get in the habit of eating the wrong foods. The above diary was kept by a 12 year old girl. Why don't you try keeping one?

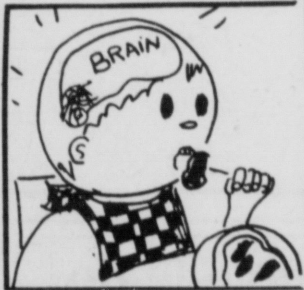

Gas and oil are fuels that keep cars running. Food is fuel that keeps everybody going.

What we eat is very important now. Food prices are going up. We have less food to eat and none to waste.

A grocery store is like a family fuel store. Shoppers must know how to buy the best fuel.

Food is made up of different nutrients. Each nutrient has a special use in the body. No one food has all the nutrients we need. We have to eat the right amount of many different kinds.

The only way we can get fuel is through our mouths. What goes in decides the kind of body we'll be running.

Lean Meat

gives you iron that builds red blood that carries oxygen to your lungs, brain, muscles and other parts of your body. Meat furnishes protein that supplies energy and builds body tissue.

Oranges

give you vitamin C that helps in healing your cuts and wounds. It also helps to hold the body cells together and makes the walls of the blood vessels stronger!

furnish carbohydrates that supply energy and help the body make better use of fat.

supplies calcium that builds bones and teeth, helps the blood to clot and helps nerves, muscles and your heart to work properly.

Carrots

give you vitamin A that helps your eyes adjust to dim lights, keeps your skin smooth and keeps the lining of your mouth, nose, throat and digestive tract healthy.

Vegetable Puzzle-le-do

Breakfast at School

Some schools are serving breakfast because it's so important that children "fuel up" each morning.

Food Quiz-a-roo

What are calories?

Cars need enough gas to keep them going, but if you put too much in, the tank overflows, and the gas is spilt.

We need enough fuel to work and play, but extra fuel is not used. This extra fuel, or excess food energy, is stored in our bodies as fat.

Food energy is measured in calories. Some foods have more calories than others. Foods with high calorie counts include sugars, starches, cakes, cookies, candies and many of our favorite foods.

There are many children as well as adults who are fat. When they go on a diet, they will cut down on their calories. (Never go on a diet without a doctor's help.)

How much have food prices jumped?

This is a question The Mini Page asked a school food service manager. Below are some prices at the beginning of the 1973 and 1974 school years. These prices are even higher now. Can you figure the jump?

Item	1973	1974	Jump
Box of cocoa	2.40	3.96	_____
Pound of sugar	.16	.70	_____
Canned corn	1.07	1.98	_____
Bottle of catsup	1.37	2.70	_____
Box of pudding	.63	1.23	_____

Calorie Counts

Apple, 1 large...100

Cake, chocolate...400

Hotdog...125
(without roll)

Ice cream...190

Milk 1...160

Celery, 10 or...30
12 stalks

Egg, 1...75
hard boiled

Super Sport: Mack Herron

Mack Herron looks like a figure from fantasy land. The New England Patriot halfback is five-feet, five-inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He can almost hide behind a football.

Last season it seemed those big pro football line-men could never find him. Mini Mack gained 2,444 yards total offense. This is a single-season record.

Before joining the Patriots in 1973, Mack was selling clothes. He grew up in a Chicago ghetto and later played two years of college ball at Kansas State. In 1971 and 1973, he was a star in the Canadian Football League.

A Code on Groceries

The lines and numbers that you have noticed on some packages and cans are part of a code. This code was set up by supermarket people to make shopping and record keeping easier.

When the code system is set up, the check-out lines will be shorter, the check-out lists more detailed and there will be fewer errors in the price ringups.

Clerks will no longer ring up each item. Each purchase will pass in front of a "scanner." The scanner will "read" each code and send the number to a computer. It will look up the price and send it back to the cash register where it will show up on a view screen.

Nutritional labeling

Some cans and packages have nutritional labels. These labels tell the size and number of servings, the calorie count and other nutritional information. Look on the kitchen shelf and see if you can find a can with such a label.

The Super Soybean

Some scientists feel that more soybeans will be used to help solve the food shortage problem.

This plant is a close relative to the pea and bean. It has a very high protein value. Food scientists have found a way to make a product that looks and tastes very much like meat. They have made such things as sausage, ham, frankfurters, bacon and chicken chunks.

A soybean mixture has been added to regular meat to "extend" it or make it go further.

Tuna-Apple Salad

You'll need:

- Two cans tuna (size 6½ or 7 oz. each)
- 2 cups chopped apples
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup raisins
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- Lettuce

No cooking necessary

What to do:

1. Drain the tuna. Break it into large pieces.
2. Mix all the ingredients except the lettuce.
3. Chill thoroughly. Serve on lettuce.

Grocery Try N' Find

Groceries are hidden in the block below. They run across and down. Try to see how many you can find.

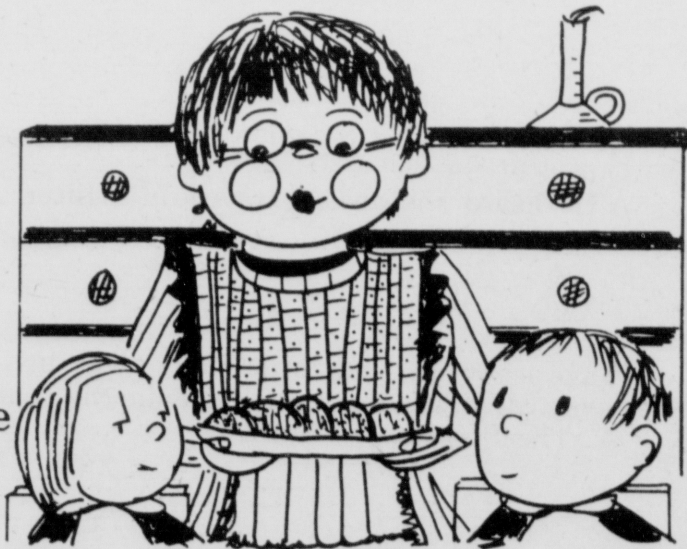

Answer block: Across: Rolls, peas, egg, oatmeal, rice, apple, tomatoes, lemons, carrots, peach, grapes, liver, oranges, fish, soup, lettuce, eggplant, cheese, cereal, banana. Down: turkey, beans, milk, spinach.

What Would You Do?

What makes food different?

- Taste
- Odor
- Texture
- Color
- Temperature
- Nutritional Value

Pretend that you are a homemaker. You are getting ready to introduce your family to a new food that is very good for them. How would you do it?
